CINEMA FILM MONOPOLY IS ORDERED DISSOLVED

Federal Trade Commission Finds Eastman Company Guilty of Unfair Competition

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Monopoly and unfair competition in the film industry are the basis of an order issued today by the Federal Trade Commission against the Eastman Kodak Company; George Eastman, president; Allied Laboratories Association, Inc., and its members, and Jules E. Brulatour. The order is based upon an agreed statement of facts signed by the parties and marks the close of the commission's investigation of unfair competition.

The respondents are required to cease conspiring to restrain competition in the manufacture and sale of positive raw cinematograph film stock and to cease to maintain and extend the monopoly of the Eastman Kodak Company in the manufacture and sale of such film in interstate and foreign commerce.

SUBSTANTIAL MONOPOLY

It was found by the commission that the Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N. Y., had a substantial monopoly of the manufacture of positive cinematograph film and an absolute monopoly of the manufacture of negative cinematograph film in the United States; that the Eastman Company originally began to manufacture commercial cinematograph film in the United States and is now and always has been the largest manufacturer of such film in the world. From 1915 to 1919 it manufactured and sold 90 per cent of such film consumed in the United States. From March, 1920, to March, 1921, it manufactured and sold approximately 95 per cent of all the positive cinematograph film used in the United States and manufactured and sold 96 per cent of all such film used in the United States. From March, 1920, and September, 1921, due to competition importers of film manufactured in foreign countries and by small manufacturers in the United States sold 50 per cent of positive cinematograph film by the Eastman company during that period, which is approximately 31 per cent of the total consumed in the United States, although it sold approximately 96 per cent of the total consumed in the United States. In 1920 the average price per foot of positive film sold in the United States by the Eastman Kodak Company was 5.8 cents.

MONOPOLY ON SALE

Jules E. Brulatour, New York dealer, it was found, had a substantial monopoly in the sale of film manufactured by the Eastman Kodak Company. The Eastman Kodak Company and Brulatour, together, it was found, had a substantially complete monopoly in the sale of positive and negative cinematograph film in the United States. The Allied Laboratories Association, Inc., and its members

NOMINATION OF COOLIDGE IS CLINCHED

Majority of Convention Votes Already Aligned for Him, Says Manager

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Accomplished victory for President Coolidge in the campaign for the Republican Presidential nomination was claimed today by William M. Butler, the Coolidge manager, in a formal statement in which he said that 563 delegates instructed or favorable to the President already have been selected, eight more than necessary for a choice.

In the list furnished by Mr. Butler as favorable to Coolidge "either by instruction, by indorsement or by personal preference," were the New York delegation of ninety-one and others not bound down by mandatory orders, but which he said preferred the nomination of the President.

According to Mr. Butler, the Coolidge delegates thus far chosen are:

Colorado, 16; Connecticut, 17; Florida, 10; Idaho, 11; Illinois, 59; Iowa, 29; Kansas, 21 (two more to be elected;) Kentucky, 26; Louisiana, 13; Maine, 15; Michigan, 33; Minnesota, 27; Mississippi, 12; Missouri, 26 (thirteen more to be elected;) Nebraska, 19; New Hampshire, 11; New Mexico, 9; New York, 91; North Carolina, 19 (three more to be elected;) North Dakota, 13; Oklahoma, 12 (eleven more to be elected;) Rhode Island, 13; South Carolina, 11; Tennessee, 12 (fifteen more to be elected;) Virginia, 17; Washington, 17; Wisconsin, 1; Hawaii, 2; Philippines, 2.

The statement said there would be two contesting delegations from Georgia and that Georgia delegates were omitted from the table.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, April 20. Secretary of the Navy Wilbur has been elected a deacon of the First Congregational Church here, it was announced today at the Easter service. This is the church which President and Mrs. Coolidge regularly attend.

Secretary and Mrs. Wilbur were admitted to membership in the congregation today by letter from their former church in California. President and Mrs. Coolidge attended the service.

EASTER FOR COOLIDGE IS DAY OF REST

President After Usual Church Attendance Has Cruise on Mayflower

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WASHINGTON, April 20.—President Coolidge enjoyed an Easter of complete rest, having finished late yesterday the task which has occupied him for many days—the preparation of the address he will deliver Tuesday in New York at the annual luncheon of The Associated Press.

The Chief Executive and Mrs. Coolidge attended Easter services at their regular place of worship, the First Congregational Church.

Instead of joining in the usual Easter afternoon parade the President and Mrs. Coolidge took another Sunday afternoon cruise on the Mayflower, accompanied by a small party of friends, including Frank W. Stearns and the White House Eastern guests, Mrs. William M. Butler and her daughters, the Misses Mary and Beatrice, of Boston.

Advisers of the President regard his forthcoming New York address as one of his most important, comparable with his annual message to Congress and his Lincoln Day speech before the National Republican Club. He spent considerable time in writing it and conferred several times with Secretary Hughes.

The President will be accompanied to New York by Mrs. Coolidge, Frank W. Stearns, C. Bascom Slemp, his secretary; Edward T. Clark, his personal secretary, and Lieut.-Com. Joel T. Boone, his physician. The party will leave the capital late tomorrow night and the Chief Executive will spend Tuesday forenoon at his hotel. After speaking at The Associated Press luncheon at 1 o'clock he will leave for Washington.

CHICAGO IN BAD FRIGHT FROM CALF

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CHICAGO, April 20.—Federal authorities took drastic steps to head off what they believed to be the possible germ of foot-and-mouth disease at the Union Stock Yards today. Two carloads of cattle, excepting three calves, shipped here from Kansas City were slaughtered and immediately dumped into sealed tanks, where they were cooked in live steam for four hours. The prompt action is believed to have checked any possible danger.

Rumors spread to every office and pen in the stockyards when Federal inspectors discovered a sick calf in the shipment of cattle soon after they had been unloaded. The cattle were consigned to the Northwestern Live Stock Commission Company.

California's trouble with foot-and-mouth disease among cattle and hogs, which the live stock interests throughout the country have been eyeing for several weeks, caused stock yards people to become alarmed. They recalled the experiences and losses suffered in the Middle West in 1914 and 1915 from this cause. Commission men and packing-town employees remember how animal graves had to be dug with steam shovels and as many as 600 infected cattle were shot and piled into a single hole. The disease spread to fifty-one counties in Illinois alone.

India Swept by Fearful Plague; Thousands Dead

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

LONDON, April 20.—Dispatches from Calcutta tell of a terrible pestilence that is sweeping over Northern India, killing the natives almost like flies. During the past week the deaths in the Punjab region alone are estimated at 10,000. The city of Lahore is particularly hart hit.

The plague is spreading with great rapidity and fear is expressed by the authorities that it may reach most of the important cities.

TOKIO, April 21.—The Japan Printing Association at a general meeting held here today voted to place a boycott on all goods from the State of California.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, April 20.—To the war-weary, tax-ridden, overcrowded and underfed denizens of Europe and Asia, the United States, peaceful, opulent, untrammeled and roomy, looks like the last "place in the sun."

They are crowding into our place in the sun as much as we will permit and, failing in that, they are sneaking in by the tens of thousands in addition to the regularly admitted immigrants.

The time is not far distant, in the opinions of some statesmen that we shall have to station a soldier every hundred yards on our borders to keep out the hordes pressing to share our advantages or to adopt a drastic policy of registration of lawfully admitted immigrants and expulsion or punishment of unregistered aliens.

Fully alive to this situation Congress has determined that it is time to safeguard our place in the sun for the benefit of our posterity, to bar unassimilable races and to halt the dilution of the Nordic strain in the blood of the American people.

HAVE NO ILLUSIONS

Our statesmen have charted this course with no illusions as to the attitude of the rest of the world. Japan has warned us of "grave consequences" of our exclusion of Japanese. Italy in an official communication has pronounced our immigration restriction bill as unwarranted discrimination against Italians; Rumania, in an official note, cited in the House as the most impertinent any country had favored us with, sought to set up vested right in the boundless opportunities of America, complaining of prospective financial injury involved in the reduction of the number of Rumanians permitted to enrich themselves in the United States.

With little encouragement, it is suggested, the concatenated nations of Europe and Asia, crowded almost to the suffocation point, may be expected eventually to challenge our right, on the usual high moral grounds, to monopolize half a continent of sparsely settled land which would support famishing millions of the old world in comfort.

The first test of the new attitude of Congress is furnished by the Japanese exclusion clause of the Immigration bill and Congress is standing pat, unswayed by the importunities, exhortations, warnings and explanations emanating from Tokio. The second letter of Mr. Hanihara, the Japanese Ambassador, addressed to Secretary Hughes explaining that no threat was implied in the phrase "grave consequences" has failed to change a single vote in either house, so far as can be learned.

Senate and House leaders interviewed today were unanimously of the opinion that there will be no

ENGINE AMUCK KILLS FOUR

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CHICAGO, April 19.—Four men were held tonight in connection with the deaths of four persons who were killed this morning by a Baltimore and Ohio Railroad engine, which, in the vernacular of the switch yard, ran hog wild for more than three miles and finally crashed through an open switch and turned over. All the prisoners worked in the roundhouse from where the locomotive started.

Late tonight the police had formed no definite theory as to the cause of the engine's unpiloted and terrible trip.

Three of the victims died instantly. The fourth, William Lindberg, succumbed this afternoon.

The other dead are:

Otto Bowlmark, Mrs. Olga Bowlmark, his wife, and Irving Bowlmark, 10 years of age, their son.

Injured in the same accident were:

JUMPS FROM ENGINE

The four men in custody were arrested an hour after the accident. They are: Hosea Lottie, a fire knocker, Elmer Howard and Max Orr, all colored, and Peter Cickoki.

Lottie, who has charge of the engines that stand inside or outside the roundhouse, told the police that he saw a man jump from the locomotive after it had started on its wild trip.

"I was in the shanty when I heard steam escaping from the cylinders," he said. "I rushed out, but the engine was under way. I ran after it, but couldn't catch it. When it was a hundred yards away I saw a man, who wore a light tan topcoat, jump from the pilot house. He ran between some cars in the yard and disappeared."

In Lottie's first story he said two men jumped from the locomotive.

The Bowlmarks, with Lindberg and two others were on their way home in an auto from an Easter party.

SCREAMS ATTRACT

The screams of the six occupants of the automobile brought policemen, cab drivers and other late wayfarers to the scene. The car was a total wreck. The elder Bowlmarks were dead. The little boy died on the way to the South Side Hospital.

After traveling nearly four miles it crashed through a fence at the end of a spur track at East Seventieth street, crossed Dorchester avenue and tore into an embankment at the Illinois Central Railroad at this point, driving the coal tender into the earth to a distance of fifteen feet.

Volstead Act to be Attacked

Anti-Prohibition Advocates Will Present Case to House Committee

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, April 20.—"The Twelve Apostles" of prohibition are ready to be paraded before the House Judiciary Committee when it begins hearings tomorrow on fifty-nine bills to amend the prohibition act so that the boys in the back room can hoist a stein of 2.75 per cent now and then without fear of police or undertaker.

They were brought in tonight by proponents of changes in Mr. Volstead's ideas as "Exhibit A" in the hearings. They consist of twelve distinct brands of "poison" gathered in Chicago. And, they repose safely and unguarded on a table, for above them is a sign:

That warning is ample—so long as the sign stays there. But, one of the contentions before the committee will be this:

"You would not touch them now. But, you drink them every night in the roadhouse, the drug store and on the back porch, for there you get them under beautiful labels—and that's the trouble with prohibition. It brings the undertaker quicker than does temperance."

The committee will, of course, hear both sides of the question. Against this argument will be a plea from prohibitionists that the twelve apostles are a bunch of hokum. But, the twelve apostles won't stand alone for numerous organizations favoring modification—particularly the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment — have mapped out a campaign of testimony covering every angle.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, will be the first witness tomorrow. Mr. Gompers stated tonight he does not intend to temporize a bit as to what he thinks the working man wants when he sends the "can" to the corner. Supporting Mr. Gompers will be numerous other union leaders.

When they have finished, the opponents of Mr. Volstead's beliefs as to what is intoxicating will present what they term "the citizenry." Persons whose names are well known to the writers of headlines will inform the committee that, in their opinion, the average layman has no objection at all to stein hoisting or fermenting bubbles in the cellar, no matter how strongly he may be against the corner saloon.

Then will come the doctors—psychiatrists and such—who are ready to tell the committee that prohibition has produced evils rather than cured them, and next, will be economic experts to go into that angle. Finally, will come a legal battery of nationally known lawyers who will present briefs asserting that the Eighteenth Amendment can be interpreted to mean 2.75 per cent beer and light wines without in any way affecting its Constitutionality.

In one of these divisions of testimony—probably the one where the psychiatrists are on the stand—"Exhibit A" will come forth.

The doctors will point to one after the other of the "twelve apostles" and explain the evils thereof.

All will be presented to the committee as products of prohibition and all, it will be contended, will be done away with through modification.

CAN'T-GO-OUTERS BAR COMERS-IN

Riled Eastbound Tourists Barricade Bridge for Westbound Traffic

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

NEEDLES, April 20.—Twenty-five automobile tourists prevented from crossing the State line into Arizona at Topock, southeast of here, by Arizona's foot-and-mouth embargo on eastbound vehicular traffic, got their dander up today and jammed their machines against the west end of the Topock bridge across the Colorado River so that westbound traffic also was throttled.

Westbound parties stranded on the Arizona side of the river by the retaliatory move have appealed to the Sheriff for relief.

MAJ. MARTIN TO TAKE OFF AGAIN TODAY

Three Other Flyers Wait for Him in Unalaska; MacLaren in Palestine

[BY WIRELESS AND A. P.]

CORDOVA (Alaska) April 20.—Maj. Frederick L. Martin, commander of the United States army air squadron on a world encircling trip, plans to hop off at Kanatak tomorrow morning for Dutch Harbor, Unalaska Island, providing weather conditions are favorable.

Good progress has been made with the installation of a new motor in Maj. Martin's plane, the Seattle, and he expects to have the work finished by tonight.

A storm of considerable intensity which prevailed yesterday and last night in this district, with its center in the Tanana Valley, has passed on, moving rapidly toward Yukon territory and the forecast now is for fair weather, somewhat colder.

DUTCH HARBOR (Unalaska Island) April 20.—Minor repairs were being made here today to the United States army airplanes, Chicago, New Orleans and Boston, which arrived at 5:10 o'clock yesterday afternoon from Chignik, Alaska, on their flight around the world. The air cruisers will remain here several days, awaiting the arrival of Maj. Frederick L. Martin, flight commander, who was forced down at Cape Igvak Tuesday. He is installing a new engine in his plane, the Seattle, at Kanatak, Portage Bay.

The three planes that arrived here yesterday made easy landings after circling over the village several minutes. The best of weather prevails. The 400-mile jump from Chignik was made in six hours and ten minutes.

SIZA (Palestine) April 20.—Stuart MacLaren, the British aviator, who is making an attempt to fly around the world and who arrived here yesterday from Cairo, resumed his flight toward Bagdad at 9:25 o'clock this morning.

BATAN ISLE IS MENACED BY VOLCANO

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS]

MANILA, April 20.—Inhabitants of Batan Island are menaced by the eruption of a volcano three Village, according to a wireless miles northwest of San Dionisio message from the yacht Apo, on which Gov.-Gen. Leonard Wood is inspecting the northern islands of the Phillippine archipelago.

The report described the eruption as violent, with stones and ashes and devastating clouds of gasses rolling down the mountainside and causing the adjacent country to look like "no man's land" in France during the World War.

The inhabitants have taken temporary refuge in shelters near the water's edge. The people are terrorized, yet loath to leave their homes. Food and medical supplies have been furnished by the Governor-General5s yacht. Steps were being taken today for the removal of the people to places of safety.

The message from the yacht came in confirmation of persistent rumors of volcanic activity on Rabuyan Island, near by. San Dionisio, Batan Island, has a population of seventy-five natives.

Motorship With Load of Cement Leaking Badly

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SAN DIEGO, April 20. — The Danish motorship Emma Maersk is making heavy weather off the Lower California Coast with six feet of water in her hold and a cargo of cement, according to radio advices received here today. The ship's position was given as 600 miles south of San Diego in the meager messages received. No particulars were given of what had happened, but the captain said he expected to reach this port under his own power and did not ask for aid.

It is believed the cement will solidify sufficiently to stop the leak, but the ship is held to slow speed. She is consigned to this port from Europe.

ARIZONA REPLACES BAN ON EASTWARD AUTO TRAVEL

Last Cars Pass Yuma Bridge Under Truce With No New Arrivals; Situation Is Still Tense

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

YUMA (Ariz.) April 20.—Late today the Arizona foot-and-mouth blockade on the Arizona-California State line closed down again, the disinfecting station was shut and on orders from Phoenix, transmitted by Dr. Edward L. Stam, Arizona quarantine officer, auto travelers again were barred from crossing into this State.

The situation here is as it was a week ago when eastbound automobiles commenced to pile up behind the blockade, although reports from Knob Siding, fourteen miles the other side of the Colorado River, were that no fresh arrivals had registered there.

Disinfecting and fumigating went on all day at the desert station of Knob Siding. The first batch of fifteen cars to cross the bridge quarantine line early today and sweep past the militia guard recorded their passage with a series of whoops denoting their joy at being once more moving homeward to the Middle West or to the East.

TRAINS UNAFFECTED

A paradoxical situation, however, exists. Passengers entering Arizona by train are not interfered with in any way. They alight at the Yuma station without so much as a question being asked them, while auto travelers arriving after 9 o'clock this morning are to be barred as formerly.

Five or six recalcitrant auto parties remained at the bridge early today, declaring they would not go back to the Knob Siding fumigation shed, but when they learned that it was either fumigation or no thoroughfare, they gave in, took their formaldehyde sprays, showers and steam baths for clothes and went on their way.

Friction till exists between the Yuma county, Arizona, and the Imperial county, California, authorities.

The latter have declared that the fumigation station at Knob Siding—on California soil—has been blocking the highway. The Arizona officials declare the station is on the Southern Pacific railroad right of way.

SITUATION TENSE

The barricade on the California side, which originally kept the travelers from approaching the bridge, and which was broken down by Imperial county officials, also has caused further trouble. L. L. Odle, Superintendent of the Indian Reservation, which the travelers had to cross to reach the bridge, has telegraphed Washington, complaining against what he calls infraction of the Federal quarantine laws in this regard.

Ralph Colvin, agent of the Department of Justice, who has been here surveying the situation, returned to San Diego tonight. He will make his report to Lucien Wheeler, agent of the department, at Los Angeles. While here Colvin was stopped twice while attempting to cross from California to Arizona, despite his official badge.

C. L. Patterson, president of the Yuma Chamber of Commerce, late today called a special meeting of citizens at which it was decided to send a delegation to Phoenix, the State Capital, tomorrow and confer with Gov. Hunt on a future course to pursue in case a fresh batch of travelers piles up behind the new quarantine blockade.

LINE AIRTIGHT

Members of the delegation tonight expressed themselves as hopeful that the Governor would consent to an arrangement whereby motorists might continue to cross the State line here after fumigation at Knob Siding.

Meanwhile, later reports from the fumigation station there indicated that another gathering of tourists was accumulating, several motor parties having drifted in before 8 o'clock. These expressed their intention of waiting at the siding for fumigation.

At the bridgehead here, in accordance with the Governor's order, the State line was even more

MARY SOON WILL RETIRE FROM FILMS

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

LONDON, April 20.—Mary Pickford says she is going to retire from the films after another three or at most four pictures. Little Mary looked considerably tired after her journey today and said she felt more tired.

"There's no use of my pretending that I'm Duse or Sarah Bernhardt and going on acting forever," she said in discussing her plans for retirement.

"I have created a certain type which has been worked out now. It is finished. It is possible to do another type, of course, but the public wants me only as one character—Mary Pickford. Now that I've done that I think it is time for me to quit."

Mary said she was exceedingly eager to get Charley Chaplin to direct one of her last pictures, in which she desires to take the part of a Whitechapel waif of London's East Side, but she is uncertain if the comedian can find time to do it.

Mary's Easter has been divided between interviews, radio talks and receptions, in all of which Douglas Fairbanks has been her loyal attendant. She called her radio audience "fellow citizens." She said she was born in Canada, and therefore British, although she loved America because it was her home.

QUARANTINE PARLEY TODAY

Federal Certification of Foods and Fruits Under Ban to be Asked at Washington Conference

BY ROBERT B. ARMSTRONG

"Times" Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Delegations of Californians representing some of the most important products of the State threatened by quarantines of States on account of the foot-and-mouth epidemic, and barriers suggested by other Western States, will arrive here tomorrow for a conference with Federal officials and probably will confer with President Coolidge.

While the Agriculture Department has been in full charge of the Federal work in exterminating the pest and quarantining against the spread of the epidemic several States, notably Arizona and others, are agitating restrictive measures against the shipment of California products, from sections where there is no sign of the epidemic. Some of the restrictions are so drastic that if they are enforced great loss and interference will result to some of the fruit and melon growers of California and therefore the Californians are here to devise means by which the Federal government will make special inspections and certifications which will be satisfactory to the Governors and officials of other States.

CERTIFICATE PLAN

While the details have not been worked out it is understood to be the wish of the California business interests represented in the delegation that the Department of Agriculture inspect and certify shipments of food and other California products leaving the State in interstate business and that the certificate of the inspectors will permit all shipments to proceed without delay or quarantine by State officials. Otherwise great perishable crops like those of the cantaloupes of Imperial Valley and other fresh fruit and vegetables may be tremendously hurt and the rapid movement of the product essential to its proper disposal delayed to the point of confiscation.

It is assumed that such an agreement with the Federal authorities will be satisfactory for the Governors who are now clamoring for general and drastic quarantines against California and in the failure of any State to accept this protection the Federal courts, on petition of shippers or railroads, could enforce the release of products under certification of the Department of Agriculture.

FEW INFECTED HERDS REMAIN

State and Federal Agents Operate Quickly

About 50,000 Animals Now Dead and Buried

Six Counties Appear Well Under Control

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, April 20.—In suppressing the outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease among live stock in California, State and Federal authorities working co-operatively had slaughtered 350 herds up to Saturday, leaving eighteen infected herds and one exposed herd still to be destroyed, according to reports received by the Department of Agriculture here.

The aggressive measures of killing and burying diseased herds and disinfecting premises are going forward with machine-like regularity. This policy resulted in reducing known infection on the 18th inst. to only three counties of the sixteen which are quarantined. Live stock sacrificed thus far as a safeguard to the millions of domestic animals in the country include approximately 22,000 cattle, 12,000 sheep, 10,000 swine and 300 goats. These animals, aggregating nearly 45,000 are now under ground, having been buried in quick lime and covered with at least five feet of earth.

A summary of the situation made by Dr. John R. Mohler, chief of the Bureau of Animal Industry, United States Department of Agriculture, states that the disease appears to be under good control in the following counties: Alameda, Contra Costa, Solano, San Francisco, San Joaquin and Kern.

PROGRESS MADE

The situation remains serious in Merced and Los Angeles counties, with progress being made for control.

The care that must be used in combating foot-and-mouth disease, department veterinarians assert, is shown by the recurrence of infection on two farms in Contra Costa county several weeks after all the diseased herds in the county had been killed and premises disinfected. The new "flare up" illustrates the virulence of the virus which causes foot-and-mouth disease. State and Federal veterinary forces are working rapidly in killing infected and exposed herds as fast as they can be found, and the disinfecting crews come close after them with modern equipment for "mopping up" the infection. No cases of the disease have been found outside of the quarantined area, composed of sixteen counties.

Officials have made the regulations as considerate as possible without sacrificing public safety. So far as infected premises are concerned no products of any kind are permitted to leave the farms. As a means of enabling farmers to continue in the live-stock business, however, the department is now permitting, subject to supervision, the introduction of healthy stock thirty days after premises have been cleaned and disinfected and when they are otherwise considered safe.

TESTS THOROUGH

The first animals used are known as test animals. They are generally calves and pigs which are given sufficient freedom of run to allow them access to all parts of the premises on which infection previously existed. The test animals are inspected two days after their introduction to the premises and at various other intervals for a period of thirty days.

Absence of symptoms of foot-and-mouth disease among the test animals at the end of that period indicates sufficient safety to permit general restocking. All such premises are kept in quarantine, however, for sixty days after regular restocking has begun, making the entire period of supervision from the introduction of test animals ninety days.

Jealous Turks Shut American Clinic College

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

LONDON, April 20.—Advices received here tonight state that the Turks have closed the American Clinical College in Constantinople, despite vigorous protests from the American authorities. Only a few months ago $250,000 was spent by American contributors upon technical equipment for the college. The Turks' chief grudge seems to be that the college's professional reputation is too high, since a representative of the Angora government even went so far as to declare that the educational standards of the college, whether with regard to physics, surgery, midwifery, or dentistry, were too exacting for the present students—presumably Turkish students.

The real policy of Angora evidently is revealed in this complaint—Angora desires to monopolize the liberal professions as well as the business in Turkey, yet it cannot compete either in business ability or education with foreigners.

DISEASE WAR REORGANIZED

County Divided Into Six Districts for Battle Against Hoof-and-Mouth Ravages

Warfare against the foot-and-mouth disease in Los Angeles county was reorganized and systematized yesterday by dividing the county into six districts, with headquarters at Van Nuys, Pasadena, Covina, Downey, Lancaster and Inglewood, and placing two supervisors in charge of each district, a State and a Federal veterinarian.

Each supervisor will have as many veterinarians and disinfectors under him as is warranted by the condition of his district, and they will make close inspection of all the live stock frequently.

VETERINARIES TOTAL 64

The Federal government now has twenty-four veterinaries in this county and there are forty from the State department. The forces are headed by Dr. Rudolph P. Snyder, Federal inspector in charge of California, and Dr. E. M. Keef, senior field veterinarian of the State Department of Agriculture.

Aiding are Dr. Anos Day, special pathologist; Dr. Marion Imes, disinfection expert; Dr. Samuel Bennett, specialist of foot-and-mouth disease; Dr. E. J. Carp and Dr. U. G. Houck, representing the Department of Agriculture at Washington. Dr. Houck is assistant chief of the Bureau of Animal Industry and personal representative of Secretary Wallace. The University of California has sent Dr. Jacob Traum, associate professor of veterinary science, to aid the State forces. A large force of dairy inspectors under Dr. William Veil, city veterinarian, are assisting and the police department is also aiding the enforcement of the quarantine regulations.

COUNTY OFFICERS AID

County Health Officer Pomeroy and the county live-stock inspection department under Dr. L. M. Hurt have been lent for the campaign by the Board of Supervisors.

It was declared yesterday that while further losses will occur in the infected districts, the situation was hopeful for restricting the spread of the disease and keeping it out of areas now free. Patience and strick observance of the quarantine regulations by the public, it was said, would aid in stamping out the disease.

MELROSE ATHLETE SMASHES MARATHON

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

BOSTON, April 19.—The Olympic and American marathon records were broken today when Clarence H. De Mar of Melrose raced in far ahead of the field and won the twenty-eighth American marathon conducted by the Boston Athletic Association. He covered the Olympic distance of twenty-six miles, 385 yards from Hopkinton to Boston in 2 hours, 29 minutes, 40 1-5 seconds. This was the final test for candidates for the American Olympic marathon team.

The ease with which De Mar won is shown by the fact that he finished more than five minutes ahead of Charles L. "Chuck" Meller, Illinois A. C., Chicago, who was second. It was De Mar's fourth victory in this event. No other runner has won the American marathon more than twice. Times of the first six men to finish were all better than the former American record.

They follow:

2—Charles L. Meller, Chicago, Ill., 2h. 35m. 4 2-5s.
3—Peter Trivoulidas, Greece, 2h. 37m. 40 3-5s.

AFTER THE TSETSE FLY

Dummy donkeys with sticky legs are proposed for experiments in destroying large numbers of tsetse flies, which carry the germs of the African sleeping-sickness, in a publication of the Department of Agriculture of South Africa. R. H. Harris found that these dangerous insects were attracted to the legs of his donkey. He built a dummy animal with wooden legs covered with old bags, but the flies apparently did not discriminate between the natural and artificial limbs. He suggests construction of many such dummies covered with sticky materials to destroy the insects by the wholesale.—[Indianapolis News.

ALIEN DUMPING LIST PREPARED

Hungary Sends Undesirables in Immigration Quota

Sewer Empties Into America, Boast of Officials

Crooks and Bolsheviks Get Passport Visa

BY RAYMOND PENDRICK

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

BUDAPEST, April 20.—The Hungarian government has started to draw up its notorious "emigration preference" list for the coming year. If Congress again sets the Hungarian quota at 5700, this country will issue passports to 5700 of the choicest lot of Bolsheviks, political agitators, rabid Socialists, economic misfits, petty criminals and undesirable Galician Jewish refugees that it can comb together in all Hungary and will naively try to dump them into the United States.

The Hungarian government and all the governments of Central and Eastern Europe have been selecting this kind of emigrants for America for twenty or thirty years.

"Our sewer empties into America," Hungarian police officials have often boasted.

LIST UNDER WAY

The Hungarian government has just issued notice that all persons who wish to emigrate to the United States this coming fiscal year should send in their applications. This process is to give the Minister of Labor a chance to carefully examine all names and to eliminate the names of all farmers, skilled mechanics and others who are particularly essential to the country.

The Minister of the Interior, who controls the national police, then asks the police for a complete report on every remaining name in the list and he will eliminate the most desirable emigrants one by one until 5700 or the exact quota remain. These 5700 will be cheerfully given emigration passports to go to America.

Until a few months ago all petty criminals in Hungary were given their choice of going to prison or going to America and the same is true of the old Austrian empire.

HAND PICKED

The Hungarian quota was exactly 5700 last season and the Budapest government issued exactly that many immigration passports. When the season opened on July 1 these 5700 hand-picked emigrants marched down to the American Consulate and demanded American visas. Until a year or two ago every one of these preferred Hungarians could get a visa and Godspeed, but owing to America's awakening only a part got through.

American Congressmen intervened on behalf of some of these undesirable emigrants who were refused visas and they forced the State Department to reverse the Consul's decisions.

Through the issuance of passports the Hungarian government has always chosen the emigrants to go to America and the reason that many decent and respectable Hungarians have been able to arrive in the United States is because they have been able to bribe some official to sell them a passport for $100 to $200. It is absolutely forbidden that agricultural workers or skilled mechanics leave Hungary and the government particularly tries to get rid of political agitators who are socializing the cities.

CONSULS BRIBED

The American Consul here has virtually no means for investigating the record of any emigrant and must take every one upon his appearance and the word of an interpreter.

The steamship companies have sold enough passages from Hungary for America to cover last season's Hungarian quota four times and this means that the local steamship agents are bound to bring all pressure possible upon the Consulate staff to get it to favor emigrants who hold their tickets.

If a steamship agent cannot get visas for his clients he gets the reputation of not having influence with the Consulate and he cannot sell passages. Until recently American Consulates in Europe were honeycombed with the influence of steamship agents of every nationality. These agents were constantly trying to bribe Consular staffs to get visas.

PLANTING OF COTTON PROCEEDING RAPIDLY

REAGAN TELLS OF DAM PLANS

Chief Engineer of District Says Need is Vital

San Gabriel Project Seen to Serve Two Purposes

Will Prevent Floods, Beside Conserving Waters

BY JAMES W. REAGAN

Chief Engineer, County Flood Control District

More interest centers in the construction of the proposed San Gabriel Canyon dam and reservoir, planned under the $35,300,000 bond issue to be voted on May 6, than in any other work contained in the project as outlined. This is due, chiefly, to the facts that the dam itself is one of the largest ever attempted, being 425 feet above the stream bed and that its cost will mount to $25,000,000.

More than half of both the precipitation and runoff of flood waters in Los Angeles county originates in the San Gabriel Mountain watershed, an area of some 212 square miles above the locality known as the San Gabriel Forks. The seasonal runoff of both storm and low water from this drainage ranges from 9960 acre feet in 1898-99 to 410,000 acre feet in 1921-22, with a mean annual discharge of about 128,000 acre feet; perhaps 60 per cent of the years have a discharge less than the mean.

REGULATE WATER

The plan of operation proposed through the construction of this huge dam, is not that this storm or flood water will be caught and held as a lake, or that an ownership of any kind be acquired to it by the district or any other interests, but that the waters of the San Gabriel River and its drainage be allowed to run continuously through the dam at all times, but only in such quantity that all be put into the gravels to recharge the now rapidly depleting gravel-bed reservoirs, and that none of them may be permitted to reach the ocean and be washed.

Whenever the storm or flood waters are reaching the reservoir from highlands and mountains behind it, in a greater quantity than that which is controllable upon the spreading grounds below the dam, then such excess of flood water will be held and stored in the reservoir and released later with a thought of making, as nearly as possible, a continuously running stream of the San Gabriel River as far down as the Narrows and refilling the subterranean gravel-bed reservoirs and wells of the San Gabriel Valley in Covina, Baldwin Park, El Monte, San Gabriel, Alhambra, South Pasadena and other settlements.

TWO-FOLD PURPOSE

In such a manner would the danger of flood from this very dangerous source be eliminated and the conservation of water be accomplished.

The reservoir site itself would contain some 2047 acres. Borings have been completed which show the foundation of the dam to be solid granite without a fault, one of the best possible foundations for a dam in the United States. A. P. Davis, the government engineer who built the Roosevelt, Arrowrock and Elephant Butte dams, has inspected this site and has gone over our plans in detail. His verdict is unqualifiedly approval.

An indication of the decline in underground water supply lies in the artesian area of Los Angeles county, affected greatly by this San Gabriel runoff. When first measured we had 177 square miles of artesian area. That was in 1890. In 1904 this area had dropped to 110 square miles, and today, with a tremendous increase in population, with new agricultural lands being developed daily, we have but twenty-eight square miles!

I have dealt here with the San Gabriel Canyon dam and reservoir alone, because that project is the largest contained in the bond issue of $35,300,000.

LONGEST MARRIED LIFE

Death of her husband last December ended, for Mrs. Catherine A. Wheeler, (Union, Ok.) what Federal census officials say is the longest term of married life on record.

Mrs. Wheeler, who is 91, still continues as active as her children. She attends church regularly and enjoys unusually good health.

All of which she attributes to a happily married life. And this happiness in marriage she says she attained by thinking twice before acting or speaking.

"When my husband and I first were married," she explains, "there were times when one of us disagreed with the other. But early in our married life we worked out a plan.

"When one was displeased with the other, the aggrieved one stopped for a second thought before speaking a word of showing any displeasure.

"And the plan worked."—[Capper's Weekly.

reconsideration of the Japanese exclusion clause as a result of the Hanihara explanation. They all agreed that the provision was adopted in the first place as the result, not of the threat in the first Hanihara letter, but of a deliberately formed determination to end the experiment of excluding Japanese by agreement with Japan. They predict that the immigration-restriction bill, now in conference between the two houses, will be sent to the President with the Japanese exclusion clause unchanged and that if the bill should be vetoed it promptly would be passed over the veto.

Senator Willis, Republican, Ohio: I do not think the second note of the Japanese Ambassador will have any effect. That water has gone over the dam. The bill is passed, by a large majority in both Houses, and I should say the matter is a closed incident. It could be reconsidered, but only on request for return of the measure which would be refused by the House, where feeling for exclusion is stronger than in the Senate. So far as the Senate is concerned, I think the bill would have passed regardless of the first note from the Ambassador, which had the effect only of increasing the majority.

NOT CAUSED BY NOTE

Senator King, Democrat, Utah: I do not think the Japanese Ambassador's note had the effect many persons have attributed to it. I think it was seized upon as a pretext by certain Senators, but I think very few, if any, Senators voted any differently than they would have done if the note had not been written. I saw no threat in the note and think a great deal that was said in the Senate in that connection was very unjust to the Ambassador and to Japan, and wholly uncalled for.

Senator Shields, Democrat, Tennessee: I think the Senate voted in accordance with a fixed policy which was wholly unaffected by the Japanese Ambassador's note and therefore would be unaffected by the explanation of that note issued last night. I do not think the President will veto the bill. In view of the very determined attitude of the Senate and House, it would be futile for him to do so, as the bill inevitably would be passed over the veto.

Representative Vaile, Republican, Colorado: The House bill passed on its merits and I see no reason for reconsideration. I see no threat in the Japanese Ambassador's note, and I think the note had no effect whatever on the passage of the bill. It was never even mentioned in the debate. There would be no difference in the vote, I am sure, if it were to be taken again tomorrow.

Representative Bacon, Republican, New York: The Japanese Ambassador's note was never mentioned during the discussion of the exclusion provision in the House and had nothing to do with the result. Naturally, I do not think the note made public last night alters the situation, or that there will be any reconsideration of the bill.

HUGHES ASKS QUOTA

In a letter sent to every Senator and Representative today, the Federal Council of Churches urges a reconsideration of the Japanese exclusion clause in the interest of preserving friendly relations with Japan.

With the "Gentlemen's Agreement" abrogated and Japan no longer controlling emigration, Japanese immigrants, we are told, will pour into Mexico and sneak across our border. Secretary Hughes thinks this will happen and advised that, instead of excluding Japanese by law and ending the "Gentlemen's Agreement," Japan be placed on a quota basis. Then only 146 Japanese would be admissible and Japan would continue to withhold passports to Japanese intending to sneak in through Mexico.

This advice was ignored, the framers of the immigration bill being convinced that Japanese have been sneaking in for years by the thousands despite Japan's professions of strict observance of the "Gentlemen's Agreement." Besides, Europeans are coming in surreptitiously in large numbers, the immigration service reporting that illegal entries on the Mexican border alone are five times greater than the lawful entries. It is becoming evident that the only efficacious way of barring undesirables is to guard the borders. For additional border guards the House has just voted an increase of $1,200,000 in the appropriation for this purpose. This undoubtedly is a fraction of the outlay that eventually will be necessary as the pressure of the overflow of Europe and Asia on our land of plenty increases.

ALARM EXPRESSED

Smuggling operations between Cuba and points on the Florida Coast were reported in 1922 as "having assumed alarming proportions." Following a searching investigation by two experienced officials who reported that there were then in Cuba some 30,000 young Chinese aliens who had arrived within the last two or three years, who were unemployed and not seeking employment, and who had come with the fixed intention of making their way to near-by inaccessible and unguarded points on the Florida Coast. Residents of Havana were reported to be engaged in the smuggling of aliens of all classes, as well as narcotics and whisky to points on the coast line between New York and New Orleans. Chinese aliens being willing to pay from $500 to $1000 and aliens of other nationalities from $100 to $200.

The investigators also ascertained that more than 7000 European aliens had arrived in Cuba within a year, the real destination of the majority of whom was the United States and that about 3000 had "disappeared" from Cuba.

Inspectors along the Mexican border reported last year airplanes were being used to convey inadmissible aliens from Mexico to points several hundreds miles into the interior, one such smuggler having boasted that he had so transported 200 contraband Chinese.

JAPANESE BRAND ACTION "OPEN INSULT"

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS]

TOKIO, April 20.—The four major political parties of Japan held meetings today and adopted resolutions of protest against the Japanese exclusion legislation passed by the American Congress.

The Seiyuhonto, supporting the government, expressed the hope that the exclusion clause of the immigration bill would not become a law because the friendly Japanese-American relations would be seriously damaged as a result.

Resolutions of the Kakushin Club state that exclusion fosters racial hostility. They appeal to the American spirit of justice to prevent the exclusion measure becoming law.

The Kenseikai resolved that the "immigration legislation is an open insult to Japan. The Kenseikai hopes that "the American people will suppress this dangerous legislation."

ENVOY IS UPHELD

The Seiyukai (the opposition party) declares that Ambassador Hanihara was justified in his stand on exclusion and that the Senate's objection to his letter was entirely unreasonable. The Seiyukai resolution also attacks the government, which is blamed for the present immigration complications.

Representatives of fifteen Tokio newspapers met and agreed that a moderate and restrained attitude in the present situation is the wisest. Resolutions were adopted expressing sorrow that "Japanese-American friendship, which was intensified by the Washington conference and the bridge of sympathy and aid which spanned the Pacific at the time of the earthquake, and all other happy memories of our relations, will be destroyed by the action of Congress."

The resolution declares that the splendid co-operation of both nations for peace and welfare will suffer most seriously from the exclusion legislation.

ONE-CROP IDEA NOW DYING OUT

Middle West, Northwest in Diversification Drive

Wheat and Live Stock Given Up for Dairy Cattle

General Farming Also Gets Impetus in Wide Area

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, April 20.—How the stricken one-crop farmers of the Middle West and Northwest are beginning to save themselves from ruin by crop diversification is disclosed by county agents' reports to the Department of Agriculture, a resume of which was made public today.

As a whole the survey shows a drift out of wheat into live-stock, a trend away from beef cattle to dairy cattle, a large increase in poultry, in the production of feed crops and a general movement toward diversification in localities where diversification has not been common heretofore. Farm management experts in the Department of Agriculture say the survey indicates a decided turn toward live-stock production in regions formerly considered one-half crop areas. Generally speaking, the changes indicated are said to be those which the farmers should have made in view of the economic situation.

Dairying, the reports show, has expanded practically everywhere. One case is cited of a beef cattle raiser who sold his herd, replaced it with twenty head of dairy cattle, and made more profit on milk every month than the same number of beef cows made for him in any year during the last five years. This example is typical of scores mentioned in the reports in which a shift to dairying has turned farming from a losing into a profitable business.

Corn acreage showed expansion in 8 of the reporting counties in Iowa, but contracting in 17, expanding in 6 of the reporting counties in Kansas and contracting in 1; expanding in 8 in Minnesota and contracting in 2; expanding 14 in Nebraska and contracting in 6; expanding in 19 counties in South Dakota and contracting in 2; and expanding in 15 counties of Montana and contracting in none. All told there has been expansion in 75 and contracting in 38 of the counties covered in the nine States.

Wheat has been contracted in 194 of the reporting counties. It has been expanded in only eleven. In the so-called one-crop States the reduction in wheat acreage is general. Thus in Montana, 16 of the reporting counties show a contraction of wheat acreage and only 1 county an expansion. In Idaho 8 counties report contraction and only 1 reports expansion. Washington indicates a contraction of wheat acreage in 9 of the reporting counties and expansion in none. South Dakota has cotracted wheat acreage in 20 of the reporting counties and expanded it in none.

Thirty-three Nebraska counties agents report wheat contraction, while only 1 reports expansion. Kansas has reduced its wheat acreage in 25 of the reporting counties and expanded in 1. Minnesota shows contraction in wheat in 25 of the reporting counties and expansion in none. Agents in 15 Iowa counties report lessened wheat acreage, and only one reports wheat expansion.

TAIL LIGHT FOR HORSE NEEDED

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

ST. LOUIS, April 20.—It's all right to ride a horse in the park in the hours before sunrise, but the horse should have a tail light, according to the contention of H. F. Meyer, 4244 North Newstead avenue, who filed an answer in Circuit Court to a $10,000 damage suit filed against him by Col. Joseph G. Miller, 32 Portland Place. Miller was injured when his horse was struck by Meyer's automobile in Forest Park January 24, 1923. Meyer contends by counsel that a horse is properly a vehicle.

PINCHOT IN ANSWER TO OPPOSITION

Says Dry Issue Back of Fight; Coolidge to Get His Support

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

HARRISBURG (Pa.) April 20. Gov. Pinchot in a statement tonight declared the liquor question was the issue which prompted the announcement yesterday of Representative William S. Vare, Philadelphia political leader, that he would not support the Governor for delegate-at-large to the Republican convention.

The Governor expressed resentment at what he termed Representative Vare's effort to drag in and hid behind President Coolidge, whose nomination, he said, "nobody questions." At the same time, he added, "nobody questions that I, as a loyal Republican, will support him in the campaign."

Declaring the Philadelhpia organization "is regular when liquor is regular—otherwise not," the Governor asserted "it prates about Republican regularity and then, like a regiment deserting on the eve of battle, breaks with the State organization."

"In marked and honorable contrast," he added, "the State organization stands by its guns and proposes to finish what it has started."

The Governor's statement was issued as a result of Mr. Vare's announcement in Philadelphia yesterday that he could not support the Pennsylvania chief executive for delegate-at-large, but would support Ralph B. Strassburger, who is opposing the Governor for one of the seven places as delegate. Representative Vare attributed his decision to Gov. Pinchot's action in advising the appointment of Francis J. Heney of California as counsel to the Senate committee investigating the Internal Revenue Bureau.

SIERRA MADRE, April 20.—Sierra Madre, known as the "Wisteria Town," will observe Garden Week, beginning tomorrow, by planting hundreds of new wisteria plants at various places throughout the city. It is the plan of the beautification committee of the Sierra Madre Civic Association for every home in the city to have a wisteria vine growing. The largest wisteria vine in the world is growing in Sierra Madre, at the home of H. T. Fennell. Every year thousands of tourists visit the grounds. Last month, while the vine was in full bloom, 35,000 people attended a fete held on the Fennel estate.

CIGAR STORE PLUNDER DROPPED BY BURGLARS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

Two Mexican youths from Los Angeles, Pedro Roldan, 16 years of age, bootblack, and Lucas Sisneros, 17, drug clerk, were picked up at the corner of Second and Thomas streets and held for investigation. The attempted robbery was not discovered until Lemery opened his store the next morning. The boxes of cigars had been tied with string into convenient bundles but had not been taken, but some money was missing from the cash register.

REALTY MEN DENY CHARGES OF FRAUD

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

LONG BEACH, April 20.—Charges of fraud, involving H. H. Townsend and F. H. Hamilton, prominent Long Beach real estate men, leading to their arrest yesterday on warrants charging conspiracy, are the outgrowth of the action of one disgruntled purchaser of land in the H. H. Townsend Real Estate Company's Hollydale tract, according to Townsend. Townsend and Hamilton are free on $2000 bail each, and C. V. Adams, a real estate salesman, was released yesterday on his own recognizance, pending a hearing in the case before Judge Helwig in Police Court Wednesday.

COLOMBIA PACT GRAFT REFUTED

Investigator Wright Sends Report of Quiz

Finds No Trace of Rumored $5,000,000 Payment

Makes Search of Bogota Government Books

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

Charges were made before the Senate Teapot Dome Investigation that American oil interests "put over" the payment of $25,000,000 to Colombia for the Panama Canal Zone and that $5,000,000 was paid to some one for Congressional approval of the treaty. Mr. Wright was sent to Bogota to investigate. Here is his report.

BY FREDERICK WRIGHT

[Copyright, 1924, by the Chicago Tribune.]

BOGOTA (Colombia) April 20. The Colombian government is indignant over charges made in the United States Senate during the Teapot Dome investigation of irregularity in connection with the ratification of the Colombian treaty by the Harding administration and there is popular resentment against American business in this country.

Representatives of American firms here claim that the publicity given the charges is causing discrimination against American goods, while British and German representatives are taking advantage of the renewed anti-American feeling.

"CHARGES UNFOUNDED"

I have made a complete investigation here and I find no foundation for the charges that American oil companies profited by the ratification of the Colombian treaty or that money paid to Colombia by the United States reached the hands of persons interested in putting over the pact.

I was given access to the Colombian government's books and records and I have traced the money from the United States Treasury to date. I have also read all the diplomatic correspondence for several years back.

The facts are the United States has paid Colombia $10,000,000 to date. Of this sum $5,000,000 was used as capital for the new national bank of issue and the other $5,000,000 is mostly on hand and will be used for railway construction. None of this money has been paid to foreigners.

CHECKS FUNDS

A check-up of the general fund and accounts of the legation at Washington shows that no money has been paid to foreigners by Colombia except $11,600 a year for five years to Hannis Taylor, a Washington attorney, as legal adviser to the legation. I have a signed statement as to the disposition of the indemnity funds.

Taking up the charges that oil interests were a dominant influence in securing ratification of the treaty, I find nothing to support the allegations. If a slush fund was used it was handled in the United States. Edward L. Doheny and Harry Sinclair have no interests in Colombia and they have not attempted to enter this field.

The Blair Company of New York in which Doheny is a partner, loaned Colombia $5,000,000 prior to the ratification of the treaty, but it did no other business here. The Tropical Oil Company, a subsidiary of the Standard Oil Company, is the only American concern operating in Colombia. The Tropical company's rights were acquired before the treaty went into effect and it is Canadian managed.

The only concession granted to Americans since the treaty was ratified was to the Andean National Corporation for a pipe line. This business was negotiated by James W. Flanagan of 342 Madison avenue, New York. The directors of the Andean Company refused to accept Colombia's offer and new negotiations are now on. Flanagan said he was a friend of Former Secretary of the Interior Fall. The Andean Company owns large port interests at Cartagena.

TWO OIL CONCESSIONS

Two oil concessions were granted to American interests some years ago, namely the De Maroa concession, Standard Oil Company owned, and the Barco Concession, owned by Doheny and Texas Oil. The Barco concession's boundaries have not been definitely determined in spite of the fact that the interested parties made representations in this connection.

No company has succeeded in se- It is perfectly clear that the dealings of the Colombian government have been above board and that they are free of suspicion. Colombia has not obligated itself to the oil interests. If American oil companies anticipated privileges by ratification of the treaty they have been disappointed.

BRIDGE REBUILDING PLANNED IN VALLEY

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

CHATSWORTH PARK, April 20.—Local property owners are expressing interest in the success of the proposed bond issue involving the reconstruction of twenty-one city bridges that fell into the doubtful list since the collapse of the Verdugo structure. Twenty-one bridges are to be rebuilt, six of this number in San Fernando Valley. Their reconstruction will cost $330,000. One of the six is of especial local interest, being the rebuilding of the structure here crossing San Fernando Creek. The estimated cost of this new bridge is $25,000, according to the City Engineer.

BAPTISMAL SERVICES CONDUCTED AT DAWN

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

HUNTINGTON PARK, April 20. One of the Easter features in churches of the city today was that of baptismal services at the sunrise prayer meeting at the First Christian Church at 5:30 o'clock this morning when Rev. N. There has also been revival services at the First Methodist Episcopal Church during the last two weeks, coming to a close this morning. Dr. G. Bromley Oxnam of Los Angeles spoke at a union church meeting in the Methodist Church this afternoon. All the other churches had special services.

SUNRISE SERVICE HELD

CONFER ON DAWES REPORT

Germany and Britain Begin to Safeguard Quick and Clear International Interpretation

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

BERLIN, April 20.—Pourparlers between Germany and Great Britain have begun to safeguard a quick and clear international interpretation of the Dawes reparations experts' report, it is learned from official sources tnight.

At present Germany is anxiously awaiting England's reply to its latest query, asking Downing street how it interprets Premier Poincare's recent speeches regarding a continued occupation of the Ruhr.

STRESEMANN ENCOURAGED

Simultaneously with the glad tidings of the acceleration of the international exchange of views on how to solve Europe's woes, Foreign Minister Stresemann in an interview today said he finds his position in his own country much strengthened and feels confident that the elections will swing in his favor.

The nation is showing greater willingness, he says, to support the "common-sense parties, that want to live at peace with the world," instead of the nationalists, eager for war with France, or the communists, who want a labor upheaval.

An election understanding has been reached between the strong groups of the Catholic party of Bavaria and the Socialists. Men as strikingly different as Gen. Von Ludendorff, Herr Scheidemann, Admiral Von Tirpitz, President Ebert, and the Democrat prince, Max Von Baden, appeal to their friends for unity of the country, demanding that their followers feel first as Germans who want to remain a nation and then as members of their party.

Herr Stresemann announced that Germany's acceptance of the experts' principles was complete and binding for whatever government may come but that the details are still not clear.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

CANTON, April 20.—A Chinese student, one of several carried away by bandits from the American Presbyterian mission at Shekiung when that institution was raided last December, was recently brought back and shot dead before the mission gate. A notice was pinned to the body conveying a warning that the bandits would return and raid and burn the place unless ransom was paid for the other captives.

The American Consul, who had already appealed to Dr. Sun Yat-Sen's government for protection for the mission without results, asked, in face of the threat that an American gunboat be sent to Shecklung.

Two of the three ships in South China waters, the Helena and Asheville being seagoing vessels, were out of the question. The third, the Pampanga, which is able at times to navigate the inland waters, was prevented from going to Shekiung because of low water.

The British Consul-General was thereupon asked to afford protection to the Americans at the mission and he dispatched the British gunboat Robbin, which has since remained on duty there.

Shekiung is midway between Canton and Hong Kong.

THEODOSIA BURTON PROFESSOR'S BRIDE

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

ANN ARBOR (Mich.) April 20. Dr. Marion L. Burton and Mrs. Burton of the University of Michigan have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Theodosia, to Dr. George R. Stewart of the University of California, on Saturday, May 17. The wedding ceremony will be performed by Rev. Charles Emerson Burton of New York City, an uncle of the bride, in the William L. Clements Library in Ann Arbor.

Miss Burton is a graduate of the University of Michigan, having received her degree last February. Dr. Stewart is a graduate of Columbia University and last year taught in the English literature department of the University of Michigan. Last September he accepted a position in the English department at the University of California.

The list of wedding invitations include the officers of the university and all full professors, out of town guests, members of the bride's sorority, Kappa Kappa Gamma, personal friends of the families of the bride and bridegroom. After the ceremony a reception will be given at the president's house.

NEW GASOLINE TAX APPLIES IN GEORGIA

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

ATLANTA (Ga.) April 20.—The way of the Georgia automobile owner is hard. To him has been "passed the buck" by the gasoline-distributing companies of the State and by this simple expedient they will save approximately $3,000,000 this year. That sum will be collected by the State from the special tax of 3 cents on each gallon of gasoline sold at filling-stations.

The tax was imposed by the Georgia General Assembly last summer. Previously for several years there has been a tax of 1 cent per gallon.

The first three months of 1924 show light collections — $710,000 with about $25,000 yet due because of the fact automobiles are used much less during the winter season—but Controller Wright, on the basis of the first quarter's returns, estimates the year's total will reach the $3,000,000 mark.

MEXICALI VISITOR ARRESTED AND FINED

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CALEXICO, April 20.—H. Fallow, giving his address as Jacumba, visited Mexicali this week and remained too long, according to Calexico police, who arrested him for intoxication. Fallow, it was asserted, had all sorts of trouble when he started to drive his car from a Mexicali bar to the Calexico side of the line. The Mexicali police chased him but he managed to elude them and safely cross the boundary. As he was trying to give the Mexicali police the laugh, he was taken in by customs officers and Calexico police. He was assessed a fine of $240.

BANKER IS KILLED BY EMPLOYEE

Wife Testifies Colorado Man Attacked Ranch Hand While Asleep

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

COLORADO SPRINGS, April 20.—Watson D. Shaw, 55 years of age, president of the Bank of Fountain, a town south of Colorado Springs, was shot and killed at his home on a ranch near here about midnight last night, after he is said to have attacked Henry Hill, a ranch hand employed by Shaw, when the former was asleep.

Early this morning after police had been called to the scene, Hill was removed to a hospital. He sustained a fractured skull and physicians are doubtful whether he will recover.

Hill's story to the police was substantiated by Shaw's wife. He said that he was asleep when Shaw entered his room and attacked him with a flat iron. He staggered to his feet, he said, and with the assistance of Mrs. Shaw, succeeded in shutting Shaw in a bathroom. Shaw escaped through a window, Hill said, and attempted to break into the house. Hill told officers he seized a rifle then and fired once, intending to wound the banker. The bullet struck Shaw in the side and he died in a few moments.

Hill is 60 years of age and has been employed by Shaw for the last twenty-five years. Both he and Mrs. Shaw said there was no apparent reason for Shaw's attack on Hill and that there had been no quarrel. They said also that the banker had been ill recently and that he imagined enemies were seeking to harm him. Hill has not been arrested.

ZONING ORDINANCE HEARING REQUESTED

CITY FILES PETITION ON WILSHIRE BOULEVARD DECISION

The city has filed with the State Supreme Court a petition for a hearing on the decision of the Second District Court of Appeal in connection with the zoning ordinance as relating to property along Wilshire Boulevard owned by Hector N. Zahn and A. W. Ross.

On March 20, last, the Appellate Court rendered a decision in favor of Zahn and Ross, which attacked the validity of the zoning ordinance and so-called setback ordinances of the city in so far as it involved their property.

The two men originally sought a petition from the Supreme Court for a writ of mandate to compel the city to issue a building permit for the erection of a business block on Wilshire Boulevard, although the district was zoned to exclude such construction.

The court made the writ returnable in the Second District Court of Appeal, which rendered its decision.

20,000 SEE ANGELS COP DOUBLE BILL

SERAPHS ANNEX SERIES FROM VERNON BENGALS

BY ROBERT E. RAY

Marty Krug's Angels routed the Tigers in both ends of yesterday's bargain bill at Washington Park, winning the first game 8 to 2 and the second 7 to 1, and in doing so grabbed the odd game of the series. Yesterday's double loss shoves the Bengals down to fourth place, while the Angels climbed up to third.

A crowd of 20,000 fans witnessed the double downfall of the Vernon athletes. The mob had entirely circled the playing field, making it necessary to make ground rules on hits into the crowd. Yesterday's attendance was the second largest to witness a Washington Park game, the largest being on the closing day of the 1919 season, when Vernon and Los Angeles met in the deciding game for the pennant.

CRANDALL AND ROOT

"Doc" Crandall and Charley Root were the winning Angel pitchers yesterday, Crandall subduing the Tigers in the second game, and Root relieving Myers in the second inning of the first game and holding the Bengals the rest of the game.

"Babe" Twombly, who was named the "goat" of Saturday's opening struggle, proved to be the lucky hero of the double bill Twombly slipped out seven hits, four of these doubles, in ten times at bat, and had what is technically termed a nice afternoon.

The first game started out with Ross Myers and Frank Shellenback hurled against each other. They filled with flossy fielding, timely hitting and numerous double plays, Root taking the step from reserve to rise up and step on his neighbor's corns.

ANGELS OFF IN FRONT

Los Angeles started off in front in a two-run rally in the second, when Myers, singles by Golvin and Myers and Twombly's double drove in the pair.

The Tigers came back strong in the last half and chased Myers to the showers with a sudden show of batting strength. Deal opened the session with a single to left and next third when Jimmy McLarnin popped one into the left-field corner for two bases. Rod Brand lasted one to right for a single and Deal scored. Myers and Hannah, filling the sacks, then walked out of the game, Root coming in to attempt to stay the Tigers' rush. Slade fanned on the first out, but Root hit Brand on his flipping wing with a pitched ball, forcing McCorry over with the tying run. Root pitched ball and retired Hannah and Gillespie to retire the side.

Angels took the lead once more in the third on Whaley's single, aided by an infield out and Golvin's home knock. The Angels opened up the contest in the fifth with a three-run spasm featured by Slade's error, single by Twombly and Beck and Golvin's single. The other pair of runs arrived in bunches one in the eighth and ninth, driven in by Twombly and Durst.

Haugdahl Day's Hero With Pair of Victories

Schrader Throws Tire, But Keeps Car on Track

BY PAUL LOWRY

A lean Easter crowd saw Sig Haugdahl make Leon Duray look like a piker in the feature event of George Bentel's combined castor oil and bathing girl program at Ascot Park yesterday afternoon, the Frenchman finishing so far in the rear of the Norwegian speed merchant in the sweepstakes that he couldn't even see the latter's smoke.

Duray had a tough time nabbing second place with his fast Miller car, and had a horrible battle with Art Davidson and Babe Stapp on the last lap before he could subdue these ambitious young throttle pushers. The time for the fifteen laps was 8m: 19 2-5s., something over 33s to the lap.

Whether Haugdahl or the luscious, alluring bathing girls, seventy-four in number, who paraded up and down the track for the edification of the cash customers, were the headliners, is a moot question. From the interest displayed in what William Hickman Pickens termed was a parade of the beach loungers it seems that the latter took the verdict by several gorgeous costumes and dozens of shapely legs.

OUTMANEUVERED

Though Duray made the fastest time in the qualifying exhibitions by 1-5s, Haugdahl outmaneuvered the Frenchman and took the pole away from him in both the one-lap dash and the Easter sweepstakes. After he had accomplished this to the obbligato of a terrible dust cloud there was nothing to it and Haugdahl simply made a tour out of the rest of the race. A lot of folks were inclined to believe that if either Davidson or Stapp had a car as fast as Duray's Miller the Frenchman would have taken their dust. Both of these boys passed Duray in the sweepstakes race and only a Garrison finish on the last lap brought the Frenchman to the tape second.

Two accidents featured the day's festivities, though neither resulted seriously to life and limb. In the first heat of the invitational race Johnny Mais, driving the "death car" which killed Rocky Kansas, skidded and his car was hit by the Kant-Score of E. A. Winfield. Beyond the mangling of some rear wheels there was no damage. In the final heat of the same race Gus Shrader, who was leading, lost a right rear wheel in the eighth lap and it catapulted over the fence. By clever manipulation of the wheel Shrader brought his car to a stop, and Petticord swept into the lead, winning easily from Roberts and Hinkley.

DONATE PURSES

John Seymour walked away with both of the motorcar races and donated his prize money to the widow of Ray Weishaar, killed a week ago at Ascot. The other drivers followed suit and all the motorbike prizes went to Mrs. Weishaar. John Kreiger grabbed the side-car race and some beautiful unknown damsel won the Nearacar race, which was an added event.

SUMMARY

Qualifying trials (one lap)—Leon Duray (Miller), first, 21 4-5s.; Sig Haugdahl (Miller) and Art Davidson (Frontz), tied for second, 22s. flat; Fred Lechleider (Duesenberg), 22 1-5s.

MARSTON, KIRKWOOD DEFEATED

Havers and Ockenden Win the Thirty-six-Hole Match From Americans, 6 and 4

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PHILADELPHIA, April 20. Arthur Gladstone Havers, British open-golf champion, and Jimmy Ockenden downed Max Marston and Joe Kirkwood, 6 and 4, in a thirty-six-hole match today on the course of the Cedarbrook Golf Club.

Havers was so impressed with the Cedarbrook course that he announced he wanted to play there against Gene Sarazen, United States professional champion, in the first thirty-six holes of a contest that will be regarded as an unofficial world's title tussle.

So the first half of the Sarazen-Havers grapple will be staged at Cedarbrook next Saturday, the second thirty-six holes to be staged on the West-Nchester-Biltmore course in New York on Sunday.

The Fans were a bit disappointed in the showing of Marston but no more so than the United States amateur champion himself.

Joe Kirkwood reeled off two 73s amid the wind and rain. Havers and Ockenden were quite themselves, however, so Kirkwood's speedy going and Marston's occasional wins did not greatly perturb them. Ockenden was quite a brilliant figure on the morning round, turning out with the best medel score of the quartet, a 72.

His 77 was not up to the pace set by Havers in the afternoon, but Jimmy well inserted himself as a bright star by closing the match in dramatic fashion on the fourteenth when he dropped a long putt for a birdie 3.

FLINTRIDGE EVENT NEXT

The attention of Southern California golfers will turn to Flintridge tomorrow, when the first day of qualifying for the annual invitational tournament is scheduled. Qualifying will also be permitted Wednesday, and match play opens Thursday, with the finals completing the tournament Saturday.

It was originally announced that only one day of qualifying would be permitted, but the tournament committee has set aside Tuesday as an additional day for medal play.

A large number of players is expected to enter the event, which is open to members of the Southern California Golf Association. Willie I Hunter and George Von Elm have signified their intention of competing in the qualifying round at least, while Fred Wright, Flintridge member, is expected to make a strong bid for the low gross trophy.

SETTLE GOLF TITLE TODAY

Willie Hunter and Dr. Paul Hunter Meet in Final Match for Southern California Championship

BY CHARLES WEST

Southern California is sure of having a worthy golf champion for 1924, the resulting victor in the final match between Willie Hunter and Dr. Paul Hunter for the title today at Annandale bringing together two golfers of international repute, both of whom are players of championship caliber. Neither rules as a very emphatic favorite, although most of the wise ones are picking Willie Hunter to retain his championship. The match opens at 10 o'clock this morning with the first eighteen holes, the second round being scheduled to start at 2 p.m.

Willie Hunter has been playing a more consistent game, seldom varying from par, while in two rounds Saturday Dr. Hunter scored a 71 in the morning and a 77 in the afternoon with the aid of Fred Wright, who knocked his ball into the cup on the tenth green. Willie, on the other hand, scored a 71 in the morning, and had a four to make for a 69 in the afternoon. His game was flawless, but only slightly better than he has been playing throughout the tournament. He was runner-up to George Von Elm in the medal round with a score of 152 for thirty-six holes, and has played like the champion he is up to the finals.

Dr. Hunter qualified with a pair of weak 81s, being the highest scratch man to make the championship flight. He showed a complete reversal of form in his matches, however, defeating J. K. Wetherby, Frank Deleot, Harlow Hurley and Fred Wright by excellent playing.

Willie Hunter had the easiest half of the draw. Everett Seaver and John McHugh were the only men who made him extend himself any, while Dr. Hunter had three hard matches. Dr. Hunter will have a slight advantage due to the fact that the tournament is being played on his home course. This advantage will be in evidence on the greens more than anywhere else, as the Annandale greens are famously treacherous. Dr. Hunter has them figured to perfection, as was indicated Saturday when he won from Fred Wright by excellent use of his putter.

Elks Will Put on Show to Aid Olympic Fund

The Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, lodge number 99, will put on a special program on the night of May 14 to aid in raising the local quota of $50,000 which is necessary to help send the United States athletes to the Olympic Games. This is only one of a number of special programs to be put on by fraternal organizations for this worthy cause.

The Elks are solidly behind Bob Weaver and his local committee in their efforts to raise the money quickly, and it is expected that they will take a large block of tickets for the Olympic try-outs to be staged in the Coliseum on the 24th of May.

SAM LANGFORD TAKES ON EDDIE TREMBLY

A main event that has the fans of the Bay District all agog has been booked by "Pop" Nealis for the regular weekly show of the American Legion post of Venice, which is held in the Sunset Pier ballroom every Wednesday night. Sam Langford, the famous Boston Tar Baby, will do his stuff against Eddie Trembly of Bangor, Me. Sam will have to resort to all of his old-time strategy in order to get by Trembly, as the latter is one of the best light-heavyweights in the country. He has a knock-out over Greb, beat the best boys in the East and is working himself into shape for shots with Delaney, Colima, Manley and the other boys of his weight on the Coast. For the semifinal two of the classiest featherweights in the section are to clash. Jack Spencer of Venice and Bobby Moran the pride of the Newboys' Club are the boys who will give the fans a chance to yell their heads off. The other bouts scheduled are as follows: Harry Lewis vs. Johnni Parra, 130 pounds; Bud Curtis vs K. O. Lewis, 126 pounds; Harry Foley vs. Young Thomas, 120 pounds; Kid Manuel vs. Shorty Smith, 118 pounds.

There are no fewer than 200 golf clubs and courses located around New York City.

OPEN HANDBALL TOURNEY

National Championship to be Decided at L. A. A. C. This Week; First Matches on Today

Three dozen gentlemen with hands like hunks of concrete will cavort today at the Los Angeles Athletic Club in the opening rounds of play for the national handball title. Entries from San Francisco, Oakland, Salt Lake and many Southern California cities make up the list of competitors seeking fame, and enough excitement is promised the handball addicts this week by Charley Keppen to last them quite a while.

Among those who crave distinction among the calloused-handed gentry are Dr. Art Stern of the local Y.M.C.A., one of the most talented singles and doubles players in these parts. With Maynard Laswell, of the L.A.A.C. and Max Gold still in excellent shape, Southern California stands an excellent chance of cornering the national title.

San Francisco's delegation consists of Friedenberg, Greiner, Burke, Paynter, Rosen and Bruns, all members of the South End Rowing Club. Bill Ranft of the L.A.A.C., the first man to hold both national singles and doubles titles, is a likely winner of the singles title.

Beginning at 11 a.m., the players will go into action, sixteen singles matches and fourteen doubles matches being scheduled.

SEASON ENDS AT TIA JUANA

Take Purse of $2000 With Au Revoir Handicap

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN DIEGO, April 20.—Little Chief, one of the most consistent performers at Tia Juana this year, captured the $2000 Au Revoir Handicap today over the mile and one-sixteenth route and called it a very successful season for himself and his owner, L. B. Humphries. The Auracanian was second and Cherry Tree third.

The closing day of the winter season brought out a crowd that jammed the stands. It was a fitting close to a splendid season for the sport.

Little Chief showed his mettle by overcoming the Auracanian in the stretch and won by a nose. The Auracanian got the jump and set the pace, having what seemed to be a cinch on the race at the head of the stretch. Little Chief at this point moved up resolutely and in one of the most exciting tilts of any race this season, passed the tiring Araucanian practically in the final hops.

The second feature race of the day, the fifth, a handicap affair for three-year-olds over the six mile long route, was taken by Keegan, which led all the way. The purse was $1200. Keegan set a fast pace and opened up a good margin. Freebooter came from back in the field to take second place, although he was hard ridden to stave off Rondelle. Battle Shot was a contender until the final eighth, where he tired suddenly.

The results:

First race, mile and seventy yards: Out (Abel) won; Mary Sue (Haugland) second; Mrs. Fry (Neal) third. Time, 1:48 2-5.

Second race, one mile: Faker (Garrity) won; Stone Ball (Clark) second; Miss Freyer (Abel) third. Time, 1:41 2-5.

Third race, five and one-half furlongs: Harvest's Hate (Neal) won; Chickee (Baker) second; Minute (Garrity) third. Time, 1:08.

Fourth race, mile and seventy yards: Senator Boo (Chrisell) won; Little Rose (Abel) second; Fair Friend (Neal) third. Time, 1:48 3-5.

Fifth race—six furlongs: Keegan (Drury) won; Freebooter (J. Smith) second; Rondelle (Clark) third. Time, 1:14.

Sixth race, six rounds: Roaring mile and eighteenth: Little Chief (A. Collins) won; The Auracanian (E. Arcaro) second; Cherry Tree (Baker) third. Time, 1:46.

Seventh race, two furlongs: Hilarity (Ellis) won; Bird Catcher (Carroll) second; Tommy A (Martinez) third. Time 1:20.

Eighth race, one mile: Zitka (Clark) won; Senor Stroll (Drury) second; Dancer (McHugh) third. Time 1:41 1-5.

Ninth race, mile and 70 yards: Mackinaw (Ellis) won; Lucky Lad (Clark) second; Syrian (Roberts) third. Time 1:44.

Tenth race, mile and one-quarter: Mandolin (Clark) won; Bird Catcher (Carroll) second; Great Lost (Ellis) third. Time 2:08 1-5.

Bambino Hits First Circuit Clout of Year

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, April 20.—In the eighth inning of the Yankee-Washington game here this afternoon 20,000 fans saw Babe Ruth, home-run king, make his first circuit clout of the season but they also witnessed the deluge of base hits and runs that swamped the Yanks under a 12 to 3 score. It was the worst thumping the Yankees have been forced to take this year and marked their second defeat at the hands of the Senators, and their fifth straight since the start of the season.

San Francisco Baseballers Wallop Oaks Twice and Romp Off With Series

DECIDE OPENING GAME IN TENTH

Seals Pounce Upon Foster and Cop First, 8 to 4

Commuters Drop After-Piece by 8-to-5 Score

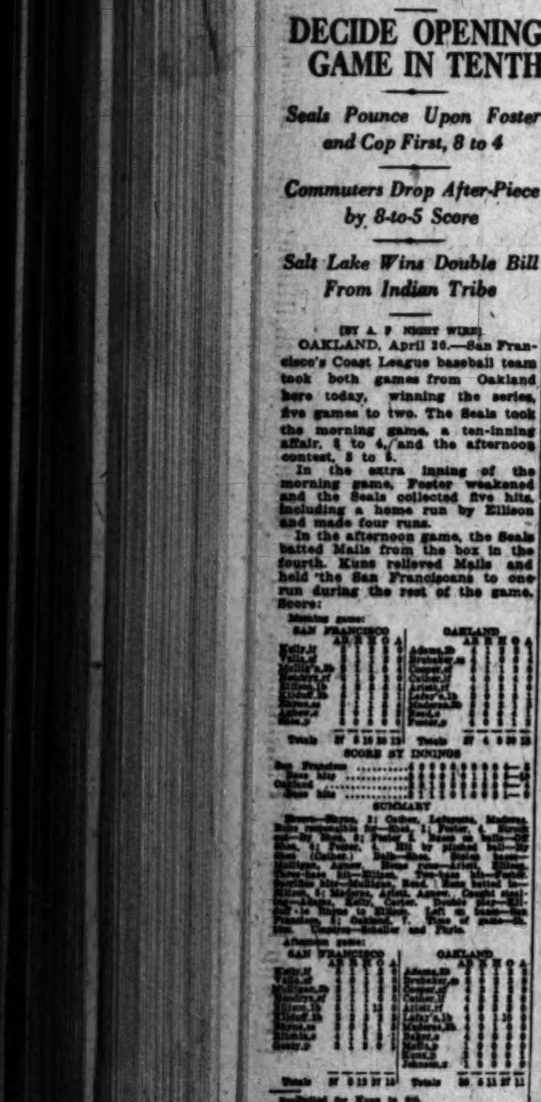
Salt Lake Wins Double Bill From Indian Tribe

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

OAKLAND, April 20.—San Francisco's Coast League baseball team took both games from Oakland here today, winning the series, five games to two. The Seals took the morning game, a ten-inning affair, 8 to 4, and the afternoon contest, 5 to 1.

In the extra inning of the morning game, Foster weakened and the Seals collected five hits, including a home run by Ellison and made four runs.

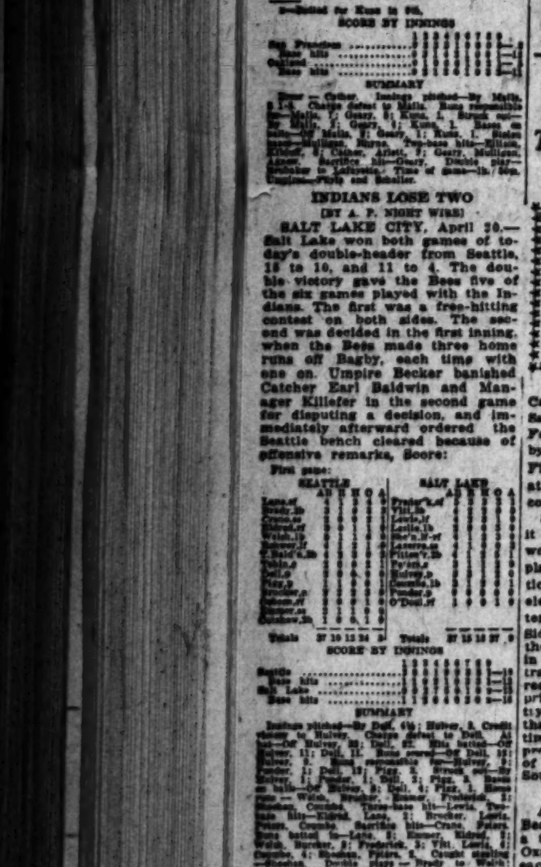
In the afternoon game, the Seals batted Mails from the box in the fourth. Kunz relieved Mails and held the San Francisco to one run during the rest of the game. Score:



INDIANS LOSE TWO

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SALT LAKE CITY, April 20.—Salt Lake won both games of today's double-header from Seattle, 18 to 10, and 11 to 4. The double victory gave the Bees five of the six games played with the Indians. The first was a free-hitting contest on both sides. The second was decided in the first inning, when the Bees made three home runs off Bagby, each time with one on. Umpire Becker banished Catcher Earl Baldwin and Manager Killefer in the second game for disputing a decision, and immediately afterward ordered the Seattle bench cleared because of offensive remarks. Score:



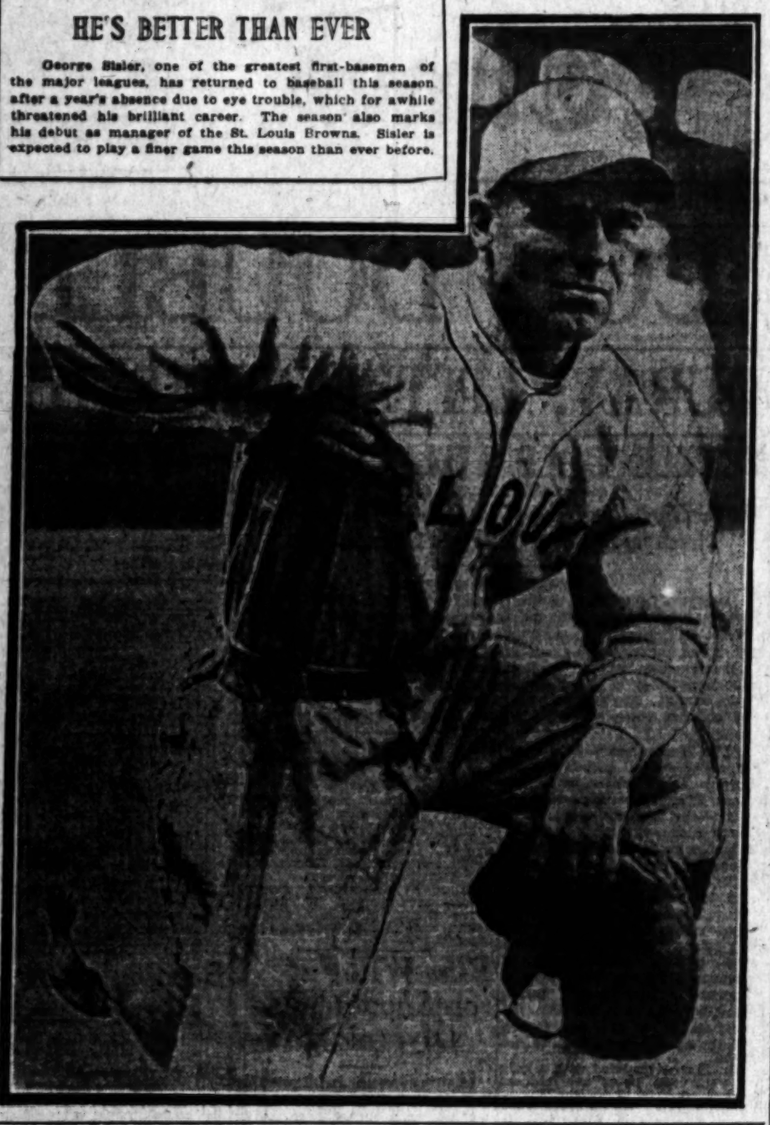
PETERSON TO SHOW SKILL WITH HIS CUE

Charlie Peterson, the Joe Kirkwood of the billiard parlor, will execute some of his amazing program of trick cue shots this week at the Wright Billiard Parlor. He will be seen in action tomorrow evening at 8:15 and on Wednesday at 2 p.m. and 8:15 p.m. Peterson can do anything but make the little balls sprout hair, and spectators are invited to drop around and see him make the spheres behave.

A professional golf player makes from $10,000 to $30,000 a year.

HE'S BETTER THAN EVER

George Sisler, one of the greatest first-basemen of the major leagues, has returned to baseball this season after a year's absence due to eye trouble, which for awhile threatened his brilliant career. The season also marks his debut as manager of the St. Louis Browns. Sisler is expected to play a finer game this season than ever before.



MANUAL ARTS FAVORED

Toilers Expected to Add More Glory to Sid Foster in Meet Next Saturday at Coliseum

Entries from twelve high schools who usually compete in the Southern California track championships have not yet been received for next Saturday's meet, according to Seth F. Van Patten, manager, who declares that he will default these schools unless their entries are in his hands by 3 o'clock this afternoon.

The schools who have not been heard from are San Fernando, Redlands, Pomona, Pasadena, Fullerton, Santa Maria, Covina, Glendale, Santa Barbara, Santa Paula, Oxnard and Hemet.

If Manual Arts High, 1924 city meet champion, wins the Southern California High School track and field championships in the Coliseum Saturday, and all signs lead to a probable Artisan victory, Coach Sid Foster's athletes will merely be adding to the glory that has been won by Manual Arts athletes over a long span of brilliant achievements. Figures show that over a period of nine years Foster's individual athletes have won as many first places in the All-Southern as the combined total of their two nearest competitors.

Starting with the meet of 1915, it was found that Manual Arts has won no less than twenty-one first places in nine years of competition. Lincoln comes next with eleven and Pasadena third with ten. This remarkable record of Sid Foster's athletes shows where the balance of power has been in Southern California high school track and field circles. It is a record in which Foster takes great pride and which other schools are trying to equal. With the big lead that Manual has, it will be a long time before a rival institution approaches the Toilers in the number of first places won in the All-Southern.

LONG BEACH NEXT

After Pasadena comes Long Beach with eight victories and then a tie for fifth and sixth between Oxnard and L. A. Polytechnic, each with seven first places. Hollywood is seventh with six and Huntington Beach eighth with five.

Schools which since, and including, 1915 have won four first places are L. A. High, Santa Paula, Chaffey Union, Ventura, Fullerton and Harvard Military Academy. Monrovia won three firsts while Pomona, Chino, Claremont, Compton and San Diego each won two.

Schools scoring a single first are Jefferson, Redlands, Glendale, Hemet, Riverside, Santa Ana, Perris, Fillmore, Anaheim and San Fernando.

The Manual Arts men who have run up this total and the number of places won by each follows:

H. Lamport (3,) Maurer, Fitzsimmons, Haberlein, Blewitt, Newman, Leadingham (3,) Emmons, Boyle, Scovall, Thomas (2,) Dick Blewett, five relay victories.

Only three men have won more than two first places since 1915. Charley Paddock and Bud Houser top the list with six apiece, while H. Lamport won three firsts, the low hurdles twice and the high sticks once. Paddock won both sprints three years in succession while Houser duplicated this feat in the weights. Paddock's prep school times have since been equalled and in some cases bettered by local sprinters, but where Paddock flashed in those days was that no one could beat him. It is only in the last three years that he has been breaking world records. Houser's high school marks have never been touched.

TWO STAND CHANCE

It is believed that only two athletes stand a chance of breaking into the select circle with more than two victories with Saturday's meet. Archie Woodyard, the dusky Jefferson sprinter, will tie Lamport if he wins both sprints Saturday, for he won the 220 last year. Woodyard is favored to place either first or second in both sprints. Klein of Hollywood being his most dangerous rival. Ross Nichols of Huntington Beach, who won the high hurdles last year, should repeat Saturday. But he needs one victory still. There is a slight chance that he may get it either in the pole vault or low hurdles.

De Wolf Requa of Manual Arts, who is favored to win the low hurdles Saturday and who is conceded a chance against Nichols in the high sticks, has another year yet and may score three or four victories before graduating.

Tod Morgan and McLean in Main Bout

While Stewart McLean and Tod Morgan are down for the main event at Jack Doyle's Tuesday night, few Vernon fans are overlooking the semi-wind-up which is, itself, a main event for most clubs in the United States. It will bring together Young Nationalista, undefeated Filipino flyweight in thirty-three battles and Joe Dillon, a master of the four-round game and usually successful against swingers of the Nationalista type. The boys will battle at 110 pounds and there should be gobs of gloves flying from bell to bell.

In the special preliminary Young Farrell will battle Felix Villamore, another bout that is attracting attention from Vernon patrons. Young Farrell is well liked by Jack Doyle's crowd, while Villamore has staged many sensational battles both in Vernon and Hollywood. It figures to be a big event for the evening.

Matchmaker Hayden Wadhams is sending Jimmy Darrah back for another trial. The Akron middle went great in his first bout, giving Tom Kelly a whipping, than lost to Young George and came back heavily by trimming Leo Matlock in an uphill fight. This time his opponent will be Mickey Rockson and it means much to the middle-western battler to win. The same thing applies to Rockson.

Lefty Cooper will try to subdue Red Williams in the third spot, a task not many welters have found themselves equal to. Young Terry stopped Roy Moore last week so he will go after Jack Thompson in the second prelim. Roy Moore made such an impression last week even though he was knocked out that will turn over a new leaf and open the show with Scotty Diest.

Tennis is played at night in Australia on electrically illuminated courts.

PIERCE

The Four-Passenger Touring Car

Driving is true sport in this trim Pierce-Arrow with its lively Dual-Valve engine. One has the feeling of handling a runabout, and yet it seats four companionably.

Center armrests give club-chair comfort. Lift out the one which divides the rear seat and there is room for a fifth passenger. The gracefully arched top is lined, making the car cooler in summer and warmer in winter. It has no visible bows to obstruct vision. Hand-tailored curtains fit snugly. There are locked compartments for thermos bottles and other stowage. Tonneau lights may be switched on at night. The leather upholstery feels thick and rich to the touch..... In short, it is a Pierce-Arrow through and through.

Pierce-Arrow Four-Wheel Safety Brakes add a new measure of safety and enjoyment. Isn't it worth while to request a demonstration?

GLENDORA NABS TILT WITH EASE

Ptomaine Tommies Beaten in Lop-Sided Game; Knox Deals Victory

Glendora was an easy victor in a lop-sided baseball game with the Ptomaine Tommies at Glendora yesterday. Holding the visitors to only one run from four hits the Glendora nine was way out ahead with five runs. The game looked scoreless as far as the Tommies were concerned until the eighth inning when they scored their only run. The winners' tallies were well scattered throughout the nine rounds.

Whipple was the star in the infield, handling seven tries without a bobble. Knox on the pitchers' slab for Glendora was responsible for the low score of the Tommie nine. Markham behind the bat performed in good style, nabbing four men on the home plate for putouts. Score:

Bank of Italy Team Subdues Citizen Squad

The Bank of Italy baseball nine, proved too much for the Citizens' National Bankers Saturday when they handed them the small end of a 7-to-4 score, at Ross Snyder Field. The game was a nip-and-tuck affair for the entire seven innings played. Gardner was credited with the victory because of his excellent twirling for the Italy Bankers, whiffing out ten men and holding the Citizens to five hits.

The game was cluttered up with a number of errors, four being chalked up for each team. The tilt was livened up by the heavy hitting of Lewis and Lucatora and Tieman, who smashed out homers. Bianchi and Johnson secured a three-bagger apiece.

Belvedere in Victory Over Palms Outfit

Belvedere Gardens defeated Palms, 4 to 3, in the third and deciding game of a three-game series yesterday at Palms. The winners scored the mark that sewed up the game in the eighth inning.

The tilt resulted in a brilliant mound duel between Frank of Belvedere and Schatzlein of Palms. The latter allowed only five hits, while Frank yielded nine safeties, but Schatzlein was the more lax in the pinches.

Nofziger and Hammer were the hitting stars of the Belvedere squad, while Frost and Schatzlein hit hard for the losers. Frost got a double and triple, while Schatzlein hit a home run and a single The score:

MIDDLEFIELD'S HOME RUN CLINCHES GAME

Middlefield's homer in the last inning cinched the game for the San Bernardino baseball nine when they met the Pasadena Paint Company yesterday at San Bernardino. The game was a bitter battle until the ninth inning when Middlefield socked one over the fence, scoring two runs, which put the home team on easy street. Both teams played errorless ball.

Jaqua, former Pasadena High School player, handled the willow to good effect, gathering in three hits and by doing some clever fielding, he was much in the limelight. Score:

Parson's Running Catch is Feature of Game

Downey finished strong and won from the Bozzani Motors, 6 to 5, in an opening National League game yesterday at Downey. Rallies in the sixth and seventh innings by the home club overcame the four-run lead hung up by the Bozzani crew in the early innings.

Roy Hevle pitched a fine game for the winners in all but one frame, the fifth, when the Bozzani players bunched three hits with two juicy errors for four runs. As both teams had scored once in the first, this gave the Bozzani Motors a 5-to-1 lead.

Downey started to whittle away the lead in the sixth when E. Smith led off with a single to left and advanced to second when Hevle walked. L. Smith then rapped one out of the let for a home run, making the score 5 to 4. B. Smith's single with a man on third brought in the second and winning run of the seventh-inning rally.

Barry Hatters Trample Over Wilmingtons

Barry's Classy Hats proceeded to chalk up another baseball victory yesterday when they let down the Wilmington nine for the count at Wilmington. The score ended, 8 to 0, which proves the strength of the Barry nine. The game was anybody's until the seventh round when the winners ran four men across the home plate. By scoring two more runs in the eighth inning the game was cinched for the Hatters.

Trautwein hurled the ball in his usual excellent style, holding the Wilmington nine to five hits which were so well scattered throughout the entire nine innings that the latter nine never looked dangerous. Stranton for the Wilmington squad played in good form handling seven tries with one bobble, while Stein, also of the Wilmington nine, played five tries at second sack with errorless accuracy. Score:

PALOMAR SMOTHERS LARRY ALL-STAR NINE

The Larry All-Stars were completely snowed under yesterday when they met the Palomar nine at Ross Snyder Field. The Palomar team proceeded to run up a score that began to resemble Methusaleh's age. When the dust had cleared away the score stood 12 for Palomar and 5 for Larry Stars. This game was scheduled in the Intercity League.

Applegate pitched a good steady game for Palomar, holding the Stars to four hits. W. Rundell featured with the willow by smashing out two home runs. P. Rundell and Krinbell were awarded credit for good stick work. Craig showed up well at shortstop.

Montebello and Vernon Park Art Shoppe Call Extended Game Still Deadlocked, 7 to 7

For fifteen long innings the Montebello and the Vernon Park Art Shoppe nines battled in a Pacific League game yesterday at Montebello, but darkness halted the struggle without a verdict reached, a 7-to-7 tie score resulting. The game was one of the best ever played at Montebello and had the large crowd of fans on edge all the way.

Rusty Stogsdill and Williams, rival hurlers, both went the full route and dished up an appetizing brand of ball. Each hurler allowed eleven hits and both walked four men. Stogsdill had a little the better of it on strikeouts, whiffing fifteen men, while Williams fanned thirteen.

Vernon Park started off in front by scoring one run in the fourth and apparently cinched the game with three more tallies in the fifth. But Montebello battled gamely and by scoring runs in the seventh, eight and ninth, tied the count and sent the athletes into extra innings. Vernon Park scored three runs in the fourteenth and once again was thought to have the game on ice, but Montebello came right back with three in its half, again evening the count. Neither team scored in the fifteenth, so Umpire Snyder called the game. Score:

Bush Baseball Contest Ends in Fistic Riot

Baseball was not the only form of excitement at Hynes yesterday, when the Simons Brick Company nine met up with the Hynes baseball team. Supressing a desire to let out their feelings other than by playing ball, both teams broke loose in the last frame and closed the game in a fitting matter with a free-for-all fight. The results of the fight were not made known, but the score of the game was 4 for Simons and 3 for Hynes.

The Simons nine cinched the fray in the third inning by scoring three runs after Navarro had started the racket in the first round by smashing out a homer. Hynes tightened up from then on and allowed the winners only two hits for the remaining six innings. Hynes were coming along close in the rear by gathering a run in the first, second and sixth inning, but they could not quite cut the mustard for enough tallies to put them in the lead. The score:

HUFFAKER FINISHES CRANE LUCKY STREAK

Huffaker, twirling for Lankershim, was responsible for breaking the Crane Company's running streak, yesterday on the former's diamond. Holding the visitors to only six hits which never reached a total of two in one inning except once, the Crane nine never had a chance against the 4-to-1 margin amassed by Lankershim.

Allan, short-stop for the winners, showed up exceptionally well in field work. Out of three put-outs and two assists he handled the ball in errorless style. Gilpin showed well for the Crane crew, by securing three hits from four times at bat.

ANGELS ANNEX DOUBLE-HEADER

The Tigers threatened Root only on a couple of occasions after the second, once in the fifth when the former Brown hurler forced Hannah to ground to Golvin for the third out, and again in the seventh when a snappy double play, Back to Gunther to Golvin, nipped the rally in a vulnerable spot.

TOO MUCH CRANDALL

In the afterpiece it was simply a case of too much Crandall, as the doughty doctor allowed the Bengals only five scattered hits and had them blanked until the eighth when Gillespie's infield hit, an error by Back, an infield out and Deal's sacrifice fly brought over the lone Vernon marker.

Alva Sellars, a southpaw, started for Vernon but gave woy to Keck in the second, who was followed by Cruz and Christian. None did any too well and before the second game was two innings old, Bill Essick quit coming out of the Vernon dugout to coach at first base.

The Angels scored enough to win in the second on Byler's infield hit, a walk to Twombly, Beck's single, a walk to Whaley and Hood's infield knock. Marty Krug's henchmen scored their other runs in the first, third, fourth, sixth and eighth.

ANGELS TO OAKLAND

Krug takes his Angels to Oakland this week for a series with Oakland and will hop over to San Francisco the following week to tackle the Seals before returning home—champs or chumps.

For next week's entertainment we will have the Seals and Tigers and unless the Bengals snap out of it, their chances of cocking the Bay City gang are as dark as the place where you have to light a second match to see if the first one is lit. Scores:

The California Bank baseball team marked up another victory Saturday when they defeated the Security Trust and Savings, 4 to 1 at the Harvard Military Academy diamond. The California Bankers took the lead in the first inning by scoring two runs and the Security Trust never caught up.

Mob Scene After Game When Fans Threaten Umpire

Lafgren Features With Nifty Work at Second Base

A wild and wooly game at the Salt Lake Playgrounds, yesterday afternoon, including everything known to baseball including a gang fight after the game, found the W. H. Fickett nine with a margin of one run over the Tacoma Brew team, the former team copping the verdict, 5 to 4. The game extended ten innings, when the Fickett aggregation pushed across a tally with the aid of one hit.

After the players had settled the score, the fans decided to get some exercise, and picked on the umpire for want of something better. It was claimed that he was the manager of the Fickett squad, and many dire threats were ejected in his direction without any casualties.

Home runs were the feature of the day, Marvich, Lafgren and Cotti each smacking out a circuit clout in behalf of the Tacoma squad. Score:

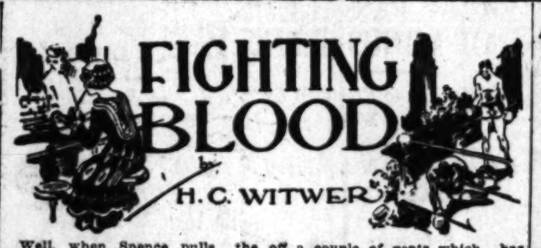
FIGHTING BLOOD



H. C. WITWER

Well, when Spence pulls the amateur theatrical thing on his girl and boy friends they go double cuckoo over it and there's so many applications that we could of put on Custer's Last Stand and had sixteen more principals than there was in the battle itself. Strangely enough, all the boys want to play the hero and all the girls is strongly in favor of playing the heroine and when I ask the trouble Spence and Judy is having, trying to keep old friendships and still put the play on, why, I'm glad I'm merely a silent partner in the production. Spence solves the difficulty by sending to New York for a professional director which plays no favorites, but picks out for the parts the ones he thinks best suited for 'em and advises the others to buy tickets.

If I had a dollar for every time I have wished I never thought of opening my theater with a amateur show, there's no sixty banks in the world would be big enough to hold my jack. Battling Luck delivered three punches at me as the net result of that play which cost me a young fortune and come mighty near costing me Judy, the world's championship and my life!

Punch number one is when the director picks out Rags and Judy for the leading parts in the play. That floored me, but I got up. Punch number two is when Judy comes into dinner from rehearsal one night, all excited and acting like she's just got word that a rich uncle died and left her everything, but Baffin's Bay. I ask her what seems to be the trouble, and after stalling a bit she finally says the director has told her she's a born actress and is throwing herself away by staying in Drew City. What she should do, this parsnip tells her, is to go to New York, where he's satisfied her talent will get her attention. I leave it to you what this done to me!

"The big stiff!" I says. "I suppose he likewise asked you could he call on you some night and give you more details about going on the stage in New York, hey? I'll go around there and slap him silly!"

"You'll do nothing of the sort!" says Judy, flaring right up. "Mr. De Haven is a perfect gentleman and I think it's wonderful he should take such an interest in me!"

"Ain't we got fun?" I says, fit to bite nails. "What did you tell him when he invited you to bust into the show business?"

"Don't cross-examine me, Gale," says Judy. "If said I would think it over. I certainly don't intend to be a stenographer all my life!"

"I don't expect you to be one all your life, either, Judy." I says. "But please don't go on the stage. That would just about murder me, no fooling! Why, the mere thought of you being a actress is—"

"Just a moment!" Judy butts in, giving me a cold look. "Do you think it any worse for me to become an actress than it is for you to be a pugilist? I don't!"

I'm against the ropes for a fact and before I get a chance to box my ways out, in comes Mrs. Willicox to tell Judy Mr. De Haven would like to speak to her on the phone. Wam! That adds the finishing touch and I bust out of the house without no dinner or nothing. What a fine break I got all of a sudden! Rags Dempster playing the hero to Judy's heroine in a play I'm paying for, and the director, whose salary I'm also putting up, is stuck on Judy, too. If I had run into both of them birds when I left the house that night there would of been two of the niftiest killings you ever seen in your life!

Now for punch number three, the one which goaled me. The night our theater opens you couldn't of got inside after 7:30 p.m. if you had been a thin fly. In fact, me and Nate and Kayo Kelley has got to stand up in the back, as they seems to be two people in each seat. We hire Eddie Granger's Vesper A. C. brass band, paying them famine prices, but they was worth it, because while Eddie is no Sousa they sure did horn a mean overture! Then up goes the curtain and the drama is on.

Well, everything moved along smoothly, though some of these synthetic actors is a little nervous at being right up there on the stage for all the world to look at. But they are going over big with their parents, anyways, which is there in evening clothes and keeps constantly nudging each other with pride and the etc. Judy never looked better and I guess that director was right, for, honest, she made the rest of 'em look like so many clowns. Rags is in his glory, strutting around like he's the Duke of Diphtheria or something, on the account he's playing the hero of this frolic. Two or three times when he catches my eye he sneers out over the footlights like it was part of the play. This is gradually getting me rosy, but when he has to put his arms around Judy in one of the scenes you could hear my teeth grit in far-off Siberia!

Then some devil must of got into Rag's brain, where they is already a congress of demons. He glances over his shoulder at me and deliberately prolongs this part where he's got his arms around Judy, bending over to kiss her. Judy looks surprised and then frightened and starts backing away across the stage with Rags after her. Everybody else seems to think this is in the play, but somehow I don't! At this critical point, Mary Ballinger, which is standing next to Kayo Kelly, whispers:

"Rags must be crazy! I saw all the rehearsals and that's never in the play. Look how scared Judy is!"

That's ample for me and I am starting up to the stage, when Judy backs into a table on which there is a lamp. Rags makes a grab for her and ever goes table and lamp with a crash.

Then the panic is on!

The flimsy draperies went up like celluloid, and before I have battled my ways half the distance to the footlights through the yelling, stampeding mob, the stage is a roaring furnace. Nate grabs wildly at my coat to hold me back, but I shook him off. I also shook off a couple of gents which has went fear-crazy and wants to climb through the roof, using a couple of women for ladders. Short right and left hooks discouraged them babies and in another minute I am on the stage with Judy. She's trying to drag out some girl which has fainted away in a swoon.

Rags Dempster, the hero of the play, has disappeared and so has all the other brave actors. I got Judy outside and I got to snatch her up and carry her out bodily, because she refuses to leave the young lady which is peacefully sleeping on the floor. I went back and got the fainting beauty and also Mrs. Willcox and then I just took 'em as they come, this time with the kind assistance of Knockout Kelly, Nate, Lem Garfield, and a couple of other guys which figured what's a few burns between friends? After a while engine company No. 6 arrived, and as long as they was there they figured they might as well put out the fire, so that's what they done.

Our brand-new stage, movie screen, curtains, and all this sort of thing was simply burned out of existence—quite some financial loss and don't think it wasn't! But the toughest break of all for me was the placed I got burned. Just imagine what would happen to Katherine MacDonald if her face got burned, or John McCormack if his throat got burned, and you'll get the idea of what it means when I tell you I got badly burned on the things which is my fortune—my hands! They're just a puffed mass of raw blisters and in less than three weeks I got to step into the ring with Gunner Slade and fight for a world's championship.

Well, we manage to keep the thing out of the New York papers, which is one place I don't want it, or there will be nobody show up to see a fight in which one guy is going into the ring with his hands all shot to pieces. Nate fells out the Gunner's pilot on a postponement without letting him know why we'd like one, but there's no chance. For some reason or other Gunner Slade has a longing to return to merry England and he says if the fight don't come off as scheduled he'll beat it back, taking with him my $10,000 appearance forfeit. I've had about all the losses I can take, so over Nate's frantic protests I decide to go through with the battle on the advertised date.

One look at the crowd as I climb through the ropes on the night of the quarrel is enough to convince me I'm going deeper into the hole by promoting this international carnival of assault and battery. When I pay Gunner Slade his $100,000 guarantee and look after the other expenses, about all I'll get for my end will be a punch in the nose. The big gaps of empty seats here and there is the answer to the sport writers' stories that Gunner Slade will be a spread for me. If them babies only knew the shape my hands was in as I sit in my corner waiting for the opening bell, why, they wouldn't of been yawning and looking around and acting like they wished they was somewheres else! And if Gunner Slade only knew that Nate had to lance the blisters to tape my hands—well, can you imagine how happy that guy would of felt?

I'll pass over the pain I suffered every time I tried to close the gloves on my raw hands and the pain I suffered every time I looked at them empty seats and realized what they meant to my bankroll. It seems to me that just about the time I started to get somewheres, I always get floored for the count and I'm gloomily wondering am I one of these birds which is born to run second? Well, I chase them thoughts out of my mind. After all, the money's a small thing. I can always get more—anybody can. What I devote my tumbling thoughts to is that no matter what I've lost, I've still got the opportunity of my life in front of me—a chance to become champion of the world at my trick. All I got to do is to knock this glowering English scrapper kicking. Sounds easy, but believe me, it was quite a stunt!

BANK STOCKHOLDERS HELD IN OBLIGATIONS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

DETROIT, April 20.—The final action in the litigation against stockholders of the defunct Farmers and Merchants Bank, Grand Rapids, to enforce individual liability for its obligations was taken Saturday when Circuit Judge Perkins signed a decree for the Michigan Trust Company, assignee, against nine of the stockholders. The court awarded a judgment of $180,884 against the defendants jointly and individually. The liquidated assets of the bank were $393,971. There was received from stockholders $154,517 in settlement of claims as to their liability and dividends amounted to $484,570. There is on hand $61,000, which represents a dividend of about 10 per cent.

DECORATES GRAVE IN WHICH LEG IS BURIED

OMAHA, April 20.—A gravestone bearing the inscription of "J. R. McDonald leg—1922," marking the spot where former Police Sergeant McDonald's leg lies buried in West Lawn Cemetery, was erected and Sergeant McDonald, who lost a leg by amputation following injury to that member by two bullets from the guns of drug store bandits, who ambuscaded McDonald on the night of December 26, 1921, attended the erection. The McDonalds regularly place flowers on the grave of the lost member. "It was a god leg and served me well," said McDonald, "and I am not going to forget it."

STOCK SALESMAN HELD

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW PRIZE SKIN GAME AT EASTER

Device for Raffling of Coveted Candy Egg Acme in Gambling Frauds

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, April 20.—We have with us this gladsome Easter season a brand-new skin game that is hard-boiled plus. Bird S. Coler, New York's Commissioner of Public Welfare, calls it the lowest form of gambling device because it is designed to teach children to gamble and leads them up against certainty of loss as surely as do loaded dice, stacked decks or the fixed markets.

Local candy stores, school stores and grocers have been importuned lately to raffle Easter eggs. The eggs, gaudily colored, come in trick boxes. Two of the compartments are occupied by dyspeptic-looking candy eggs. All the children have to do is to pay a penny for one of the eggs. With each penny's worth the child is supposed to have a chance of winning a large candy egg with wondrous pictorial interior. There is a legend which, printed in red inside, wins a 25-cent egg; green, a 10-cent egg.

What the child doesn't know, however, is that each box contains a card telling the dealer which eggs are prize-winners. Thus the dealer is made a part of the scheme to cheat youngsters out of pennies and he can sell the fancy candy eggs for 10 and 25 cents each.

CHARITY MEETS WITH UNGRATEFUL REWARD

BENEFACTOR ROBBED AND SHOT BY GUEST AT HIS HOME

DETROIT, April 20.—The generosity of Michael Tades may cost him his life.

Tades, who is 35 years of age, is in a critical condition at Receiving Hospital from a bullet wound in the abdomen. He told the police he was shot by a stranger with whom he had shared his bed.

"I met the fellow downtown and he told me such a hard luck story I bought supper for him and then took him home with me for the night," Tades said. "When I awoke I found him going through my clothes. He drew a revolver and shot me when I tried to overpower him. Then he fled with $34."

Other occupants of the house heard the shot and found Tades lying on the floor. The wounded man gave the police a description of his assailant.

[That $21,000,000 "Budget" for Power Bonds]

Item:

General Betterments to Distributing System $3,675,000

THE City's original electric system is practically new and should not require any considerable sum for "betterments."

For the Edison plant the City paid $11,000,000.

These are the properties on account of which the Bureau of Power and Light is asking for $3,675,000 of bond money for "betterments."

The Bureau's annual report states that from March 31, 1917 to June 30, 1923, the sum of $1,322,000 was set aside for depreciation. The purpose of this money was to keep the Bureau's electric system in good condition.

And now on top of that, and in addition to the larger sum which would be available for depreciation under the same method of operation during the next three years, the Bureau is asking for $3,675,000 of bond money for "betterments"—33⅓% in three years!

Does anyone believe that the Bureau needs that amount?

EARLY PASSAGE OF BONUS SEEN

Bill May Go to President by Last of Week

Democrats to Make Stand for Cash Option

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, April 20. — Passage of the soldiers' bonus bill is in prospect in the Senate early this week, possibly tomorrow. The bill as passed will be so nearly like the House bill that the differences between the Senate and House bills can be adjusted in conference in short order and the measure may reach President Coolidge before the end of the week.

Although the Democratic Senators for the most part now show a disposition to support the endowment insurance bill as passed by the House and reported from the Finance Committee, they made public today an argument for the substitute plan, which they prefer, in a minority report from the Finance Committee. The Democrats intend to talk for their substitute, which provides for a cash option in addition to insurance certificates, but are expected to vote for the insurance plan in order not to jeopardize the enactment of bonus legislation.

MINORITY REPORT

The minority report from the Finance Committee as drafted by Senator Walsh, Democrat, Massachusetts, proposes cash in the total amount of the adjusted service pay or insurance, the terms of which are identical with that of the majority bill. The maximum amount of cash would be $625 for overseas service or $500 for home service.

The minority substitute authorizes a bond issue of $1,500,000,000, with interest not in excess of 4 1-4 per cent.

Estimates included in the minority report, indicated that if all veterans should choose the cash plan the cost to the government would be approximately $1,493,768,695. If all veterans should choose the insurance plan the cost would be about $3,631,047,691. If 4 per cent of the veterans should choose the cash plan and the remainder take insurance the cost would be $2,562,408,193. It was pointed out that this would mean a saving of $1,068,639,498 from the cost of the bill as reported to the Senate.

The minority members expressed the opinion that the substitute bill will be more in conformity with the principle of adjusted compensation, that it will be more acceptable to the veterans, that it will cost the government less, and that it will require no increase in the appropriations required by the majority bill.

When the Senate passes the bonus bill and the conference report is approved by both Houses the President will either sign the bill or veto it without delay, and, if the latter, it now seems almost a certainty that both Houses of Congress will pass it over his veto. Within two weeks the bill may become law, which will mean that the Senate will know definitely the amount of expense involved before it passes the tax reduction bill. The tax bill will be taken up in the Senate this week as soon as the bonus bill is out of the way, but a debate of three or four weeks is likely.

COOLIDGE ATTITUDE

Whether President Coolidge will sign the bonus bill, if the measure is limited to the twenty-year-endowment insurance certificates approved in the pending bill, remains an uncertainty. Statements of Democratic Senators on the floor of the Senate yesterday were to the effect that representatives of veterans' organizations had the impression that the President might sign an insurance bill whereas he was certain to veto the bill if a cash option were added as had been proposed by the Democrats. Republican Senate leaders professed ignorance as to the President's intentions but asserted emphatically that the insurance bill could be passed over the President's veto while a combination insurance and cash bill could not.

The fight on the bonus seems to have collapsed to a large extent. It now sems possible that several Republicans who have heretofore been counted against any bonus will fall into line for the endowment insurance bill as the best way out of a bad situation. The Republicans will be glad to get rid of the bonus issue, thereby giving them one less thing to worry about during the campaign.

The financing of the bonus is not worrying the Congressional leaders. Although the majority report on the tax bill from the Senate Finance Committee predicted a deficit of $50,000,000 annually, under the tax bill as reported to the Senate during the fiscal year 1925, bonus advocates insist that there will be ample funds to finance it.

BOBS HER HAIR, IS DIVORCED

Wife's Plea Ignored That Years Spent Growing Hair Are Wasted

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

FORT SMITH (Ark.) April 20.—Bobbed hair brought James O. Yoeman of Hartford, Ark., and his wife into the divorce court here yesterday, and Yoeman won the decree. Yoeman, relating details of a domestic quarrel—which both husband and wife said was their first—declared Mrs. Yoeman "wilfully against his objection," caused her hair which she spent years in accumulating, to be shortened.

Mrs. Yoeman said the years so spent were wasted. Chancellor J. V. Bourland decided for the plaintiff without comment.

DREN'S TREAT—

Events Now in Progress Are Making Value History at Barker Bros.

HOME inventory is one of the pleasantest responsibilities of Spring. It is the time to re-state in new words the theme of the meaning of our homes. It can and ought to be the starting point of a whole year's inspiration. The place to begin is anywhere. Kitchens which still cause drudgery because they lack modern labor and health-saving necessities ought to be called to severe judgment. Dining-rooms should be checked over for cheerfulness and completeness. Bedrooms have a habit of enduring neglect. They are entitled to an accounting, for our dispositions, our success and our sleep are all related. Living rooms which have always a double duty of comfort and beauty, seldom fail to show some important lack, the correction of which will make a better home. Your home will be more successful if you give it an inventory.

What of Old Furniture?

Not the slightest need to discard it or consider it worthless — since Barker Bros.' Exchange Service makes liberal allowance for it toward the purchase of new furniture in any part of the store. Hundreds take advantage of this privilege.

INDUSTRY PLAN FORWARD STEP

Formation of Association is Lauded by Developer

Wide Interest Held Proof of Wisdom of Move

Los Angeles Seen in Role of Metropolis of West

"The starting of active work toward making this a great world manufacturing city through the organization of the Greater Los Angeles Association is the most important step that has been taken here by Los Angeles people in a decade," said W. Y. Jackman, industrial developer of Chicago and New York, who bought the first ten memberships issued by the association and who today will address the membership workers of the body at an early morning meeting at the Trinity Auditorium before they start out on their day's work.

"I have daily become more imbued with the spirit of the work being done by the association and the men behind it, as well as by the manner in which it is being received by commercial and civic bodies throughout the Greater Los Angeles area.

PEOPLE RESPONSIBLE

"But it is clear that the bedrock of responsibility lies with the people themselves, and the sooner the facts concerning Los Angeles' vast industrial opportunities are realized the sooner will this movement gain the momentum it should have.

"There is no question but that Los Angeles will dominate the vast trade territory composed of fourteen Western States, with its buying power of many billions of dollars annually. It is beginning to dominate it now, but how soon will its domination be complete? As soon, it is certain, as we have sufficient factories here to supply its need and our volume of production and sales has gained that cumulative strength that brings domination, and that can be made to come speedily if the necessary effort is given.

MUCH INTEREST

"I am interested in this movement because I feel that it directly affects my interests here. Every property owner is similarly interested—or should be. A dozen chambers of commerce in the most important cities and towns in Greater Los Angeles have indorsed the association and its work. All have seen that the good of one district in the area is the good of the whole.

"This movement was initiated in Los Angeles, but I have been much surprised and gratified to observe that interest in outside communities is as great—and I am not sure greater—than in the city. There could be no better indication. This unification of progressive spirit is going to make Los Angeles, I am sure, the greatest industrial city on earth."

ONE BLOW AND COURT STEPPED IN

Judge Views Broken Jaw and Tells Boys to Shake and be Friends

The fact that boys will be boys was evidenced the other day in Juvenile Court where Richard Parslow appeared before Judge Archbald on a charge of assault and battery on the person of Arthur Jones. Both of the boys are under 18 years of age and live in Lynwood.

Testimony adduced at the hearing brought to light the fact that the trouble between the two lads was brewed in a basketball court back of the Community Church in the suburban town. Richard and Arthur engaged in a verbal altercation over their respective athletic abilities and Arthur was said to have made matters worse by calling his erstwhile playmate a name.

Richard declared he sensed a fight in the offing and saw one of Arthur's comrades-in-arms placing a large piece of iron in a handkerchief. Thereupon, Richard said, his discretion behove him to hie home in search of the aid of his brother. Returning to the playground, Richard felt more or less secure in his reinforcements, it was declared, and while his brother guarded Arthur's friend, Richard and Arthur "put up their dukes" and prepared to set to.

Richard was said to have got in the first blow, which was sufficient, as Arthur dropped to the ground with a fractured jaw. At the hearing of the case, Arthur was a silent witness as his bandaged face prevented him from airing verbally his version of the affair. Judge Archbald advised the lads to patch up their difficulties and continued the case indefinitely. The "gang" was present in court but seemed somewhat disappointed at the peaceful settlement of their chums' difficulties.

Wife Adds Plea to Save Husband in Slashing Case

Clayton Teeple today will be called for trial before Judge Hahn on a charge of slashing his wife with a "boning knife" used by Teeple in cooking. It is understood that he will enter a plea of guilty to the charge and ask for probation on the grounds that jealousy drew a black finger across his brain when he thought his wife had been out with another man.

Mrs. Eula May Teeple testified at the preliminary hearing that when she came home one night her husband asked here where she had been. When she refused to answer, she said, they quarreled and he stabbed her. Her left arm, she says, is permanently disabled as the result of the cutting. Her plea, however, is to be added to that of her husband that he may get probation and return to her.

Public Defender Aggelar is to represent Teeple.

Do you ever long for freedom?

SINDBAD, that redoubtable romancer of ancient Bagdad, told of a queer old man who mounted the shoulders of his victims, twisting skinny legs about their necks in a grip that could not be broken.

Many people today carry an "Old Man of the Sea" in the burden of their financial affairs. The difficulties of investment, details of management and hazards of business are troublesome and confining. Yet freedom to pursue other favored activities or diversions is within easy reach.

A LIVING TRUST provides the way. Under this practical plan, your property—real estate or securities—may be placed in care of a Trust Company, which will manage it, pay the income and return the principal when and as you direct. Thus you may retain control, yet gain relief from bothersome details. You can then devote yourself to other interests, be absent on prolonged business trips, travel or enjoy needed recreation. Trust specialists, expert in this work, will exercise every safeguard to protect and conserve your property.

A Living Trust is as flexible as the uses you may have for it. It may also be applied to providing an income for a wife, or children, or other dependents, a favorite charity or practically any lawful object you may devise.

In whatever case, the Trust Company, operating under the safeguards and restrictions of law and its own experience, will employ your property exactly as directed, and provide income equal to that earned by stable investments at current interest rates. The fees, as clearly defined in the trust agreement, are surprisingly moderate.

Perhaps you have a problem that a Living Trust can solve. Discuss it with an officer of your Trust Company. Consultation carries no obligation.

Italian Colony Will Celebrate Rome's Founding

The local Italian Colony will celebrate the founding of Rome tonight, at Blanchard Hall, with literary exercises and a ball, under the auspices of the Dante Alighieri Society.

The Dante Alighieri Society is a national organization with headquarters in Rome, and the Los Angeles chapter maintains an Italian school in this city.

At the celebration there will also be commemorated the annexation of the City of Fiume to Italy, which was lately effected, and there will be read at the celebration a letter addressed to the citizens of Fiume from Senator Paolo Boselli, the president of the national organization of the Dante Alighieri Society of Rome. The affair will be presided over by F. M. Andreani, an attorney, who is the President of the local chapter, and addresses will be delivered by Cav. E. Piana, the Vice-Consul of Italy, and Dr. Sabato, a lieutenant in the Italian Army.

In the musical program will be a piano solo by Marian Lascher. Miss Iva Hamers, a soprano, will sing; the Aria from Don Carlos will be sung by J. Jones, a pupil of Cav. F. Guerrieri, and songs will also be rendered by the baritone, G. Ardizzone, who recently gave a concert at Philharmonic Auditorium for the benefit of blind veterans of the World War.

Ten hours ahead of her schedule that has covered a 27,000-mile belt around the earth, the Dollar world liner President Harrison dropped anchor behind Breakwater Light at 10 p.m. yesterday and waited in quarantine for sunrise, when she will proceed up channel to the dock that she left 110 days ago.

The trade delegates separated at Marseilles, half of them returning today under P. S. Teller, chairman of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, while the remainder will arrive here next month with Capt. Robert Dollar, head of the Robert Dollar company, who also is completing a tour of the world on the President Hayes.

An elaborate series of entertainments is being prepared for the passengers and officers of the President Harrison when she arrives in San Francisco on the 24th inst. DRY SQUAD IN RUM ROLE

Liquor Car Leads to "Business" Offer; "Booze Cache" Turns Out to be Cattle Cemetery

"Hum, what do you get for it?" he asked.

TRIES TO TRADE

"That's nothing," said the oil-station man. "I only get $2.50." Could you deliver me some of that?"

The oil-station man walked around the car and discovered a tag which indicated that the automobile was in the use of the county. He gasped and became very busy. Contreras explained that the sign was used as a "blind," but this was not sufficient, and no information was obtained regarding the supposed oil-station cache of liquor.

The detective then led his squad to Pico, a station near Montebello, in a search for illicit booze. Six members of his now augmented squad espied three piles of freshly moved earth and, crying wildly, "Here's the booze!" they dug feverishly, but one by one dropped back and had to be dragged from the scene by Contreras. They had been digging into pits dug to bury cattle killed because of the foot-and-mouth disease.

SEVENTY-ONE TAKEN

During the week Dist.-Atty. Keyes's dry squad arrested seventy-one persons charged with violations of the Wright Act. Those arrested are scheduled to appear in Justice Courts in Santa Monica, Belvedere and Los Angeles townships.

When the squad arrested Sam Lewis, an oil worker of East First street, Long Beach, on a charge of possession of liquor, the investigators were surprised to learn that he was engaged in the oil-rigging business and earned $12 a day. He was lodged in the County Jail until he furnishes $2500 bail.

SENSATIONAL SUIT PENDING

Depositions to Be Taken in East for Hearing of Cleveland Divorce Suit in Court Here

With the granting of an order by Judge York calling for the taking of depositions of several witnesses now in the East, preparations are under way for the hearing of what is expected to prove sensational testimony in the contested divorce case of Guy C. Cleveland, formerly of Orange, N. J., and Mrs. Gladys T. Cleveland.

The case has been set for trial May 26 in Department Twenty-nine of the local Superior Court, at which time several depositions now on file and those that are yet to be taken will be read into the record.

Cleveland, said to be a wealthy property owner of Orange, instituted the action when he filed a complaint for divorce charging his wife with cruelty. He accused his wife, among other things, of cursing him, slapping his face, biting his wrist and threatening to kill him.

Details of an asserted party he and his wife attended April 17, 1922, were also set forth in the complaint, the husband asserting that on this occasion Mrs. Cleveland sought to engage in a feat of high kicking, during which her underskirt was said to have dropped.

In an answer and cross-complaint to the suit, Mrs. Cleveland entered a general denial of her husband's accusations and said the so-called high-kicking episode was merely a friendly contest participated in by the young married women guests at the party. The affair, she said, was at all times within the bounds of propriety.

The wife countered with charges of cruelty, declaring her husband kept a whip hanging in the kitchen of their home in Orange and gave instructions to the maid to use the instrument of punishment on their younger child or else forfeit her position in the family household.

She stated Cleveland also beat the child with a leather "spanker" and falsely accused her. Mrs. Cleveland said she was finally compelled to leave her husband because of fear for the safety of herself and their two children. She stated Cleveland owned property in Orange valued at $35,000 and also enjoyed an income of $11,000 a year from a trust estate.

Water-Bearing Park Land Gift for Inglewood

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

INGLEWOOD, April 20.—Mrs. Grace E. I. Howland has deeded to the municipality of Inglewood all the water-bearing land in the confines of the proposed new city park, with her best wishes, giving Inglewood, it is believed, the largest area of water-bearing land of any municipality in Southern California.

This is only one of Mrs. Howland's generous gifts to her own community, she being the donor of the Episcopal Church here, a large structure, said to be the only example of pure Gothic architecture in Southern California. She is also the donor of most of the valuable land that will be the site of the proposed new $35,000 clubhouse of the Inglewood Women's Club.

ALIBI IS STRANGE BUT TRUE

Judge is Startled When Courtroom Spectator Verifies Man's Story About Missing Auto

New and novel alibis do not make much impression on judges, it is when a startling one turns out to be true that they are surprised. Consequently, Justice Hanby Saturday was amazed when he received word that one of the crudest alibis ever given in his courtroom had proved to be a fact from start to finish.

When Dep. Dist.-Atty. Heinecke called Ward Temple to court on a charge of stealing an automobile from a local rent station, the prosecution made a strong case. Employees of the station told how Temple rented the car, took it out and never came back. Justice Hanby asked Temple, who was not represented by counsel, if he had anything to say.

"Yes, your honor, I'd like to tell my story."

So Temple took the stand and gave his alibi. Temple said he took the car back to the rent place and then, because he had no money and the only man who would give him credit wasn't there, left it on the street outside. Justice Hanby prepared to sign the commitment.

"One moment"—a voice from the spectators broke in upon the dignity of the courtroom—"what was the number of that car?"

Dep. Dist.-Atty. Heinecke, thinking that someone was putting over an assist to the alibi, refused to answer, but when the stranger came forward and showed a star, he was shown the license.

"There is a boy under arrest in Juvenile Court for stealing a similar machine."

Justice Hanby ordered an investigation. Later, Jimmy Skults in Juvenile Hall confessed he had stolen the machine from in front of the rental station. Today Temple is free.

RISEN SAVIOR DECLARED ETERNAL HOPE OF WORLD

Pastor Says Peace of Soul Held Within Resurrection and Acceptance of Gospel

Voicing the conviction that the resurrection of Christ made possible the redemption of all who accept the life and truth which He gives, Rev. Walter S. Buchanan, pastor of the Broadway Christian Church, painted a glorious word picture of "the tomorrow of death" in a sermon preached yesterday from The Times broadcasting station. Mr. Buchanan spoke in part as follows:

"To human judgment the most dismal night that ever cast its shadows upon the hearts and hopes of men was the last night that the body of Jesus rested in the grave. The brightest morning that ever rose upon a darkened and death-stricken world was the morning when the two Marys ran with wonder and joy from the garden of Joseph to the gate of Jerusalem to tell the disciples that the tomb was empty and the Lord was risen. The crucifixion day had taken from them their loving Master and the resurrection day gave them their glorified Lord. Alas! How often do the sad thoughts of the afflicted linger about the grave and cling to the perishable form of the beloved who sleep in Jesus, forgetful of the angel-voice which speaks from the tomb, 'He is not here, He is risen.'

BELIEF ESSENTIAL

"The humblest home becomes a palace fit for a king when Jesus enters to tarry there. And without Him, the most splendid mansion on earth can give no rest to the weary soul. Blessed is the home and sweet is the rest of those who let no evening pass without offering the prayer to Him who walked from Jerusalem to Emmaus with the two disciples.

"Jesus can enter the closed doors of the sanctuary and the secret chambers. But he stands at the door of the heart and knocks and waits to be invited in. He knocks, and knocks again, He waits and waits long. And many never invite Him in, yet the blessing of peace, for which every bosom longs, is never our until we unbar our stony hearts and ask the waiting Savior in. Our life on earth is a continual conflict. We must fight against forces that never tire, and keep ourselves upon the watch against foes that never sleep. To real men, living in a condition like ours, Jesus showed himself on the first night after his resurrection. He stepped from behind the curtain which hides the unseen world and stood before them as real and true a man as they had ever seen Him in life. And his first word to them was peace. He had passed through the awful mystery of death, and he came back with no sign of trouble or agitation upon his face, with no word of fear or alarm upon his lips. It was as if he had said, 'I have suffered all the agony and seen all the mystery of death; I have been to that unseen world which you look upon with trembling and horror, and I have come back to calm your troubled hearts and quiet your excited fears.' And this blessed word of the risen Christ is for us, as well as for the first disciples. He comes to us in spirit as really as he came to them in the body, to give us a peace which shall abide in our hearts amid all the changes of this present life.

VICTORY OVER DEATH

"If we believe in Jesus and obey his commandments, we too shall rise and share with him in his victory over death. His resurrection is a pattern of our own. Our beloved who sleep in Jesus shall rise again. In the shining hosts that throng the streets of the New Jerusalem and gather around the throne of Jesus, and follow his steps wherever he goes, there shall be voices that we loved to hear in our earthly homes, there shall be faces that need no introduction to tell us who they are. However plain they look in this earthly life, they shall still be themselves and yet their faces shall be radiant with the soul's immortal beauty in the resurrection.

"The great artist has the skill to make a homely face beautiful in a picture, and yet everybody who knows the original will say it is a perfect likeness. And so the faces we last saw on earth, wrinkled with age, or wasted with suffering, and void of all grace and comeliness, shall be the same when seen in the light of heaven, yet clothed with immortal beauty and fit for the companionship of angels. This is the lesson taught us by the familiar words with which Jesus met His disciples after His resurrection. He spoke with the same voice, He wore the same look, He showed them the wounds in his hands, and his side. He walked with them in their journeys. He met with them in their assemblies. He appeared on the shore of the lake where He first called them to follow him. All of this sacred familiarity with them was manifested by Him after he had passed through the great horror and mystery of death. Think of all that is insured to every believing soul by the resurrection of Christ from the dead, and then say how much reason we all have to share the joy with which the disciples rejoiced when they saw their risen Lord.

TEARS EVERYWHERE

"Many spend their lives in seeking what they never find. All have bitter cause for weeping. The journey of life begins and ends with tears. Its whole course is a search for something that can take away grief, something that can call for fountains of gladness and consolation in the waste places of the soul. And Jesus comes forth from the grave, the conqueror of sin and death, that he may lead our search for the lost fountain of joy and make it successful. He comes back from the tomb to tell us that the object of our lifelong search can be found only on the other side of that dark and mysterious change which we dread so much. He puts the question to all the sons and daughters of affliction, 'Why weepest thou?' that He may draw their hearts and hopes to that land where there shall be no more tears.'"

FAITH OF FOLLOWERS REVIVED BY MIRACLE

Dr. H. C. Culbertson, pastor of Plymouth Congregational Church, preached yesterday on "The Poise and Power of an Endless Life." He said in part:

"In Thomas Jefferson's version of the New Testament all miracle stories were cut out, and the last words of the narrative about Jesus told how they rolled a great stone to the door of the sepulcher and departed. If this had really been all, would the faith of His followers have survived? When Jesus was crucified His followers were in utter darkness and despair. Suddenly something happened. Something changed their despair to rapture and hope, and that something was the resurrection. Radiantly, triumphantly, these fishermen went out to all the world, risking their lives for the new faith, willing to suffer torture for their belief that the teachings of Jesus were attested by the fact that He had risen from the dead.

"Jesus had dared evil to do its worst, and evil had failed. Not only on that first Easter day but through all the thirty years of His life among men He had lived in the poise of the eternities. I., the narrow streets of old Jerusalem, out over the rocky mountainous pathways of Judea and in the smiling sunny valleys of Samaria and Galilee, He had lived day by day in the quiet serene glory of an endless life. Our modern age admires the qualities of strenuousness and energy, but there is a higher ideal. Let us lift our eyes on this sacred day to the One who with unhurried poise, with neither waste nor haste, but calmly and with supreme efficiency, lived the most wonderful life this earth has seen."

NEW DAWN OF HUMAN RACE IS DESCRIBED

Rev. William C. Isett, pastor of Amanda Chapel, preached yesterday on "Sunrise Over the World." He said in part:

"The most joyous festival of Christianity has come today. The very word Easter is a symphony of languages expressing joy. Sanskrit, Greek, Latin, Teutonic and Anglo-Saxon, all give us 'Easter, the dawn of a new life'. It is sunrise all over the world today. Earlier races had their worship of the spring with its revivifying power. Our Druid fathers worshipped the purifying fire, looking back to still earlier races who worshipped the sun as it rose in majesty in the east with life in its rays. From time immemorial the joy of new life in the springtime caused men to look up to high heaven with hope, and bow in reverent worship before the Giver of all life.

"Since the resurrection of Jesus Christ it has always been Easter. It is the pivotal point of Christianity. The proof of immortality does not rest upon the resurrection. All mankind believes in immortality. The spirit lives apart from the body, and no one doubts it. The joy of the resurrection is the fact of an eternal life clothed with a spiritual body, living, working, creating through all eternity. The resurrection opens the door into eternal life, not merely into immortal existence."

SOURCE OF BIBLICAL TEACHINGS REVEALED

Ernest D. Sexton, international lecturer for the International Bible Students Association, lectured yesterday at Trinity Auditorium on "How we got our Bible, and is it the word of God?"

Mr. Sexton traced the making of the Bible from its earliest days. He showed first how all ancient historians that are worthy of credence, corroborate the history of the Old Testament scriptures. He showed that the traditions were kept by an actual sequence of historical events with date and character and were handed down from father to son by the patriarchs and later to the Jewish nation.

"In about the third century, B. C., these historical facts, which already had been written in fragmentary way, were put together and translated from the Hebrew into the Greek tongue," said the speaker. "These are the scriptures which were used by our Lord and the Apostles and the early church. It was to these writings that Paul referred, when he said that all scripture was given by inspiration of God and also when Peter said Holy men of the old write as they were moved by the Holy Spirit. There is no question as to the authenticity of these writings, but those who would today lay stress upon the New Testament and virtually reject the Old, seemingly have never learned that the New Testament is saturated with quotations from the Old. Our Lord himself, quoted more than 245 times from the Old Testament scriptures."

RECLAIMING OF SELF NEED OF ALL MANKIND

Manly P. Hall, pastor of the Church of the People, preached yesterday on "Reclaiming the Holy Sepulchre." He said in part:

"The old legend of the Holy Sepulchre in the hands of the infidels is like the body of man which is the temple of his soul and which has for ages been in the hands of passions, hates and selfishness, until the most sacred parts of his being are servants and monuments to a strange god. Never will the Holy Sepulchre, the tomb of Christ, be reclaimed by the Christian until his own body and soul, the tomb of the Christ in him, pass from the hands of evil to those of light."

DECLARES GOODNESS GOVERNS UNIVERSE

Dr. Bruce Brown, pastor of the South Park Christian Church, preached yesterday on "Immortality." He said in part:

"Every person who gives any logical consideration to the great problems of life and duty and destiny must come to a very definite conclusion as to whether or not intelligence and goodness rule the universe. This conclusion will decide the attitude in all the important relations of life. If there is no such wisdom, this is a blind world without a purpose, and there can be no realization of man's hopes and aspirations. It is less wonderful to believe that man shall keep on living that that he first came into existence. We cannot believe that mud is immortal and mind and love and goodness can be buried forever. The hope of immortality has been the spur to war progress, the inspiration of unselfish endeavor and it is the morning star of promise of a new and better day."

CALLS DEATH GATE TO GREATER LIFE

Rev. E. F. Daugherty preached at the First Christian Church yesterday on "The Abolishment of Death." He said in part:

"The mind is superficial and the heart unfair which denies the material facts about death, its enthralling terror in separation, dissolution, disappointment and deprivation of all the senses of the body treasures; but for the mind and heart taking Jesus for what He is, death becomes an episode and nothing more, in the forthgoing of the immortal soul of larger life. All the sensuous testimony of life establishes death's reign and kingship, but the abolishment of death, wrought by Jesus at Joseph's, borrowed tomb, was an abolishment by faith. In absolute fearlessness of death's dominion He declared 'I have power to lay down my life and I have power to take it up again'—and in like faith His true followers live."

ADMITS WILD LIFE

"I burned my candle at both ends but I'm not sorry. If I had another one I would probably burn in the same way," Maude Heilian wrote her husband Franklin H. Heilian.

He exhibited the letter in Judge Burke's divorce court, where he obtained a divorce decree. His complaint was that after brief married life in which she pursued gayety night and day, thereby ruining her health, she left him and refused to return.

PLANS FOR CLUB GIVEN APPROVAL

Commercial Body Leaders Agree to Description of Architect Bergstrom

Denoting another advanced step in the organization of the Commercial Club of Southern California, which is to build its club on Broadway between Eleventh and Twelfth streets, club officials approved Saturday the detailed description of the club floor plans as prepared by Edwin Bergstrom, Los Angeles architect.

The description explains that the building, thirteen floors high, will be in Italian Renaissance style and will be finished in brick and terra cotta, having an inclosed roof garden on the Broadway side. The main floor will include three stores and the main entrance leading to a large lobby, offices and building elevators. The second and third floors, which will include women's features, such as dining-room, hair-dressing parlors, swimming tank and a limited number of sleeping rooms, will be reached by a private elevator.

The remaining floors will be devoted to men. The main dining-room will be on the fourth floor, while the main lounge will be found on the sixth floor. The billiard-room will be on the sixth and the library on the seventh floor.

The eighth, ninth and tenth floors will include all athletic equipment, such as the gymnasium, swimming tank, lockers and barber shop. The remaining three floors will include more than fifty rooms, each having its own bath, for the members who wish to live in the building. Garage, bowling alleys and store rooms will be placed in the basement.

About seven million people in this country find sport in the use of fire-arms.

ManMade 'Young' At 84 Tells How He Regained Vigor
Another remarkable report of being made "young" without a gland operation comes from J. L. Rowell, 84, of Kaw City, Okla.
"It has simply been wonderful!" says Mr. Rowell. "My eyesight is clearer and my muscles feel supple. I walk with a firm, springy step and now can do a man's work. I am enjoying a remarkable re-invigoration and restoration of gland and nerve activity, and I feel as young and vigorous as I did at 30. I have found a real 'fountain of youth.'"
Mr. Rowell says he "rejuvenated" himself in only ten days by taking the recently discovered korex compound in tablet form. Many others—young and old—make similar reports of their experience with this compound in cases of nerve weakness, lost vigor and premature age. In fact, letters praising korex are being received in such volume that full-strength $3 treatments are being offered on trial, under a money-back guarantee, by the Korex Company, 4809 Melton Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., American distributors of the compound. The understanding is that the purchase price will be refunded, upon request, to any user who reports within ten days that he is not satisfied. If you wish to test korex under this guarantee, simply fill out and mail the coupon below.

Safety FIRST
WHY do so many thrifty men and women content themselves with the four percent, compounded, of a Security Term account?
That is a question often asked by those who have not studied the elements of thrift.
The FIRST thing a thrifty man or woman wants to be sure about is that the PRINCIPAL is SAFE. The Security Savings rule is—"The highest interest return consistent with safety."
Did you ever meet a man who regretted having kept his money in a good bank?

Luck
"My advance has been largely a matter of accident." So says Frederick D. Underwood, railroad builder and railroad president, in the May number of The American Magazine.
He says he has been lucky. What does he mean by luck?
His first job was driving a horse for $1.50 a day; and this job brought him a chance to get on a railroad as freight checker. That, he says, was luck.
He was on the spot when a passenger train ran off the track. It was none of his affair, but he took full charge. At headquarters they admired his initiative and remembered it. And that, he says, was luck.
He got into conflict with Jim Hill, the powerful rival of his little road. He beat Hill—beat him so badly that he won Hill's respect and friendship. Once again, he calls it luck.
And so on—all the way up to the president's chair, he feels that luck has been with him.
Charles M. Schwab once said that he made it a rule to do business with lucky men—men who have the habit of succeeding, of coming through with results. The American Magazine has grown so fast because there are in America several million men of this kind.
To them this magazine says: "Here are ideas; here are stimulating companions; here are methods and plans. Form the habit of succeeding; make yourself what you want to be."
So for every human aspiration this magazine has its message. It is not a magazine in the ordinary sense. It is LIFE.

BETTER OFFICE EQUIPMENT

Give a woman a new hat and she becomes an optimist. Give an office new furniture and every one who occupies it takes on an increased esteem and loyalty to the business. These are facts, though hard to explain. Any woman who remembers the pride with which she showed her newly furnished home to callers can explain it. Pacific Desk Company, after suggesting and supplying correct office equipment to many business houses, has observed it many times.

Buena parte del futuro progreso de Los Angeles, que es la metrópoli de los Estados Unidos que más cercana se halla a territorio latino-americano, habrá de depender de las relaciones que logremos establecer con nuestras hermanas, las repúblicas del sur. Para que lleguen a ser enteramente cordiales, no hay nada tan importante como que nuestros ciudadanos se familiaricen con la lengua castellana. Tan se dan cuenta de este hecho nuestros habitantes, que hay al presente más de 25,000 personas que estudian español en Los Angeles. NOTAS TELEGRAFICAS

María Se Retirará Pronto de las Cintas

LONDRES, Abril 20.—Dice María Rickford que va a retirarse de la pantalla, después de filmar tres, o a lo sumo, cuatro cintas más. La menuda artista parecía cansadísima después de su viaje, y manifestó que lo estaba más de lo que parecía.

"No hay para que pretender que que sea yo, ni una Duse, ni una Sara Bernhardt, y continuar representando toda la vida", dijo la actriz al discutir sus planes para retirarse. "He creado un tipo determinado, que al presente está ya agotado. Sería posible, por supuesto que crease yo otro tipo, pero el público no quiere que represente más personaje que María Pickford. Ya lo hice hasta donde dio de sí tal papel, y creo que ha llegado la hora de dejar la profesión."

Anadió María que tenía grandes deseos de que Charley Chaplin dirigiera una de sus últimas vistas, en la que quiere hacer el papel de una niña abandonada de Whitechapel, Londres; pero no sabe si el cómico tendrá tiempo de hacerlo.

El domingo de Pascua que pasó María quedó distribuido entre charlas por radio, entrevistas y recepciones. En cada caso, Douglas Fairbanks ha sido su leal acompañante. Llamó a su auditorio radiofónico, "conciudadanos", manifestando que había nacido en el Canadá, y era por lo tanto británica, por más que amaba a los Estados Unidos, donde tenía su hogar.

Conferencias Sobre el Informe de Dawes

BERLIN, Abril 20.—Han comenzado las conversaciones entre Alemania y la Gran Bretaña, a efecto de garantizar una interpretación internacional rápida y clara del dictamen pericial de Dawes sobre reparaciones, según se supo aquí de fuentes oficiales esta noche.

Alemania está ahora esperando ansiosamente la respuesta inglesa a su última consulta a Downing street. Desea saber cómo se interpretan en esta última los últimos discursos del Primer Ministro Poincaré, relativos a la continuada ocupación del Ruhr.

Simultáneamente con las malas noticias de la aclaración del cambio internacional de opiniones acerca de cómo solucionar las desventuras de Europa, el señor Stresemann, ministro de Relaciones, dijo hoy en una entrevista, que encuentra hoy fortalecida su posición en su país, y confía en que las elecciones le favorezcan. La nación está demostrando mayor voluntad, agregó, para apoyar a los partidos de "sentido común", que desean vivir en paz con el mundo, más bien que a los nacionalistas, ansiosos de ir a la guerra contra Francia, o a los comunistas, que quieren un levantamiento de los obreros.

NOTAS LOCALES

Extraordinaria es la sensación que se experimenta al correr por los amplios bulevares, viéndose uno rodeado por todos lados de millares de automóviles, que le preceden y le siguen por millas y millas de carretera, a esa temprana hora en que, en días normales reina el silencio y el misterio; dos horas antes del amanecer. Sentía uno como que viajaba precipitada, aunque silenciosamente, por el Valle de la Muerte. El silencio era cortado tan sólo por el particular zumbido de los motores y uno que otro temeroso chillido de la bocina de un auto.

Para las cuatro de la madrugada están ocupados todos los asientos de la "Taza" de Hollywood, lo que no obstra para que durante hora y media más sigan penetrando apretadas muchedumbres. El tráfico se había puesto ya ingobernable, y muchos de nosotros abandonamos nuestros coches, y ascendimos a pie largas calles en pendiente hasta llegar a la Taza. La concurrencia era de lo más abigarrada; había personas vestidas de soirée, que venían directamente de saraos de Pascua; viudas ricas y voluminosas, que llevaban a cuestas pesadas pieles y alhajas, y jadeaban al hacer insólito ejercicio. Ancianos y ancianas que llevaban mantas, chales y cojines, doncellas que simulaban hadas, vestidas con los alegres atavíos del verano; niños gozosos de la aventura matinal, y jovenes parejas que transportaban a sus bebés envueltos en edredones.

Para las 4:45 ya estaba claro el firmamento, pero ni un solo rayo solar había traspuesto aún las cumbres y penetrado en la Taza. Podía advertirse ya que no había eminencia ni ladera que no estuviése erizada de seres humanos de todos tamaños y edades; y a ese pesar, la muchedumbre seguía sin interrupción trepando hacia la cruz.

Precisamente a las 5:55, se asomó el sol por sobre el monte e hirió la cruz y las cumbres. Y reinó un respetuoso y maravillado silencio en aquella vasta multitud. Los rostros de aquellos que habían llegado cansados y casi desesperados de tanto trepar se iluminaron con un fulgor particular, y en cierto momento, se oyó que rasgaban el silencio las trompetas de Pascua que anunciaban la salida del sol, tocadas por las hermanas Lorene y Alberta Lavis, vestidas de Angeles, en blancas y brillantes túnicas. Y un instante después, la orquesta de la comunidad de Hollywood entonaba la "Visión de los Angeles" de Humperdinck, y ningún otro sonido turbaba esas notas celestiales.

WOMAN DIES OF INJURIES IN ASSAULT

Baby Born to Japanese While in Hospital From Attack at El Monte

Injuries in an attack a week ago on Mrs. Y. Tugimoto, 32 years of age, who lived on a farm near El Monte, caused her death last night at the Japanese Hospital, 605 Turner street. She never regained consciousness after she was found suffering from a skull fracture and cuts and bruises virtually covering her body.

In a delicate condition when she was beaten by an unidentified man, the woman gave birth to a child two days ago. Hospital physicians reported the baby's chances for living are good. The infant is her third child.

An investigation of the case is being conducted by Deputy Sheriff William Bright in charge of the homicide squad of the Sheriff's office. Officers have little to work on in the way of a description of the assailant. He is believed to be a white man who had been seen loitering around the vicinity for several hours prior to the attack. Mrs. Tugimoto was never conscious enough to describe him, hospital attendants reported.

When plans are being made

Call an Insurance Expert

You should call a reliable insurance man when your plans are being made—particularly if they relate to buildings.

—so that these plans may be checked from a fire insurance point of view.

—so that you may be entitled to a minimum charge for your insurance.

—that you may safeguard the lives of your workmen and protect your processes.

After a building has been completed an agent merely applies the rate according to the hazards.

Just as the science of medicine seeks not only to cure but also to prevent disease, so the progressive minds among insurance men aim not only at sound insurance but also at fire prevention. Support this movement with your co-operation and your business.

RARE MINERALS, METALLURGY, CHEMISTRY

You are politely requested to submit samples carefully wrapped and hazed, with letter accompanying, stating what tests are desired. Make request of small size. There is no necessity for big orders. Correspondents offering matter for analysis with card, or scrap of paper, intended to show that the stuff is from Jim Jones, for instance, with no marks of identification on sample, will hereafter receive no attention. Analyses are made free of charge.

Tin Absent

MURRIETTA, April 5.—Question: I am sending you today samples of rock for analyses and classification. Sample No. 1 looks like tinstone to me (?) No. 2 is supposed to be chromite. No. 3—white stuff—may be of aluminum. No. 4 looks waxy, and is a puzzle to me. No. 5 is supposed to carry lead in quite good amount. Thanking you in advance for favors shown by your good work. F.

Answer: The always present thought (and hope) of the humble conductor of this department of The Times is that this column may be of some service to correspondents of The Times. Your samples show, and chemically react as follows: No. 1 is altered hornblendic rock which does not carry a trace of tin. No. 2 carries a little chromite; it is chiefly hornblende. No. 3 is on the order of No. 4. No. 4 is silicious lime carbonate with "waxy" hydrous magnesium silicate, hornblende and pyroxene present. No. 5 is altered hornblendic rock containing a little ferrous sulphate (copperas) and reacts rather low for lead value. The samp'e carries traces of zinc (blende) and pyrite (iron disulphide.)

Six Samples

ST. THOMAS (Nev.) April 5.—Q.: I am enclosing samples of ores and earths. Kindly advise if any of same show commercial values, and which and what—in your opinion—should be subject to fire assays. The samples are all from near St. Thomas.

A SUBSCRIBER.

A.: No. 1 is quartz; hematite stained, and cinnabar absent. No. 2 "please test for molybdenum, vanadium, bismuth and other metals." This No. 2 specimen reacts slightly for cerussite (lead carbonate;) molybdenite, in microscopic traces; vanadium traces and carnotite-bismuth absent. "Test No. 3 for platinum." There is no platinum reaction from any sample. No. 4 is a mixture of lime carbonate; Fuller's Earth present and "soft" hydrous magnesium and aluminum silicates found. This sample is slightly impregnated with Gay-Lussite (hydrated carbonate of lime and soda.) No. 5 is botryoidal (grape-like) calcite (lime carbonate.) No. 6 is not "cryolite or fluorite:" it is simply calcite. It is probable that no sample is worthy of a fire assay for gold or silver.

Free Gold Absent

BODFISH, April 6.—Q.: I am mailing samples of rock taken from ledge north of here on Kern River. Please state in Times column what minerals present of commercial value—if any. R.

A.: The samples are of quartzitic rock and react as follows: Magnetite traces, platinum absent, zinc and arsenic found, lead in low percentage, vuggs (empty cubes) from leached rusty pyrite noted, and pyrite traces.

Iron and Zinc

WALKER (Ariz.) April 7.—Q.: Under separate cover I am mailing you samples from same ledge, kindly analyse them. I call your attention to some of the peculiarities—please note the piece that has been roasted. In roasting, small bubbles, or blisters of a grayish-white color form on outside of the sample and also a whitish metal frequently shows; what is this stuff, anyhow? Thanking you for past favors. F.

A.: Repeatedly, it has been stated by certain authorities that similar samples carry tellurium. Chemical reactions prove that there is no tellurium present in the specimens now under discussion. Roasted buttons of sylvanite (gold and silver telluride) form beads of gold-like matter while roasting. In a glass tube your specimen "smells" slightly of garlic, with sulphur dominant. The Marsh test on the samples yields a mirror of arsenic, and further reactions prove that antimony is slightly present; copper traces.

It would appear that the samples are chiefly of pyrite (iron disulphide) with black sphalerite (zinc blende or blackjack) and the probability is that they belong to that grade of ore known as base-metal ore (fahlerz.) The samples were not tested for gold and silver, however, and no reaction for the platinum group could be obtained.

Mixed Minerals

LOS ANGELES, April 8.—Q.: Please name the rock or talc (?) inclosed in box addressed to you. Find a sample sent to me by a friend in Nevada. Is there any strontium present? The samples appear to have a greasy feel to them. In short, please classify the samples. They come from Esmeralda county, Nevada. Thanking you for any information you can give me, and with kindest regards, MAC.

A.: The samples represent matter with which you can probably confound the very elect in chemistry and mineralogy—if you see fit to proceed as follows: On one side of the specimens pure talc appears which is not affected by acids. From the other side of the samples, if you take a small chip of mineral and drop it in acids it bubbles rapidly, and with more violent action in dilute acids.

Further tests show veinlets of talc and lime carbonate both present. Strontium traces only.

Schistose Rock

OCEAN PARK, April 9.—Q.: Will you please classify the inclosed sample of material taken from a stratum in Kern county for me? I'd like to know what it is and if of any potential commercial value?

A.: The sample is a mixture of minerals consisting of mica, mica schist, and a little sericite schist. If you desire any other test for a suspected element it will be a pleasure to serve you further, providing other samples with a letter stating tests desired, are sent to this department of The Times.

Copper and Iron

Lava

LOS ANGELES, April 10.—Q.: I am puzzled by—"What are the shiny particles on the inclosed lava?" It seems to me impossible to be mica, and I can only think of gold or some metal that could withstand such heat; it reminds me of certain art work, with blowing gold leaf upon a molten bronze casting in expensive art work. It seems worthy of examination, and I hope you can diagnose it.

SUBSCRIBER.

Free Gold Absent

HERMOSA BEACH, April 11.—Q.: Please test the sample for gold and greatly oblige. M.

A.: the sample is best described as a sort of mud-conglomerate containing clay, iron oxides including magnetic traces, quartz, and mica somewhat resembling gold. This Times department makes no fire-assays and it is very doubtful that the mud sample represents any value in gold, either by wet or dry analysis.

Mematite

SILVER LAKE, April 11.—Q.: I am mailing you a sample containing quartz. Will you please let me know what minerals it contains? M.

A.: While the specimen carries some quartz and pebbly-feldspathic matter in traces, it is a mixture of hematites (iron peroxide.) One of the hematites is massive, and the other so fine in powdery-silken coating that it resembles graphite. This micaceous-iron variety of hematite shows up further as scaly micaceous iron ore, and there is not a trace of platinum in the mixture.

OIL SIGNS FOUND IN NEW DISTRICT

Well Between Huntington and Long Beach Fields

O'Donnell Interests Report Notable Showings

Developments south of the Huntington Beach field during the past week were chiefly notable for the showings which were reported in the O'Donnell well, a hole being put down by the O'Donnell Oil Syndicate, about half way between the Huntington Beach and Newport Beach fields.

This showing was reported at 2850 feet. It was not deemed of sufficient importance to justify a production test, and drilling was continued, but operators in that area regard it as the forerunner of more promising developments at lower depths.

O'DONNELL LEASE

The O'Donnell interests own seventy acres due south of the Globe Petroleum Corporation's 114-acre Judd lease, which is about one-half mile from production at Huntington Beach. This well is reported to be drilling at 3400 feet.

The geological theory under which operators in this general area are working, it that the Huntington Beach structure which dips southward starts to rise again just south of the Standard Oil Company's Surf lease on which production is found at around 4000 feet. This theory was partly engendered by the Fulkerson discovery of heavy oil at Newport Beach, at less than 2000 feet.

SUPPORT THEORY

The O'Donnell indications two miles north of the Fulkerson well at 2850 feet are regarded as corroboration of the general theory, under which the Globe should pick up some kind of a showing within the next 200 or 300 feet.

The Monarch Oil Company plans to start drilling across the road from the Fulkerson well during the coming week. The California Drilling Company is moving in machinery and rigging up to begin operations.

The avowed purpose of this project is to get commercial production of the heavy oil found by the Fulkerson well, which is said to produce an excellent grade of lubricating oil, with a residue of road oil.

A scouting trip over the Newport-Balboa district disclosed a shallow well producing 11-degree gravity oil, drilled by the Newport Oil and Refining Company several months ago, but not yet in regular production. Located on the tideland surrounding Newport, this well is a few feet below 1000 feet in depth, with 160 feet of sand, and looks like a 100-barrel producer. The Fulkersons, father and sons, of San Diego control the Newport company and have been operating in that neighborhood for several years. It is their intention to install a refinery of some kind to treat the crude they expect to develop for lubricants, road oil, etc., their second well now being under way. The Pasadena Oil Company is nearly finished as a south offset to the Fulkerson well. This shallow drilling appeals to many operators.

About two miles east of the Huntington Beach field the Fairview Oil Company and the Mission Oil Company have about concluded negotiations to merge their efforts toward completing two tests. The Fairview test is now down 5500 feet, cuts from cores having showed oil, and Fred Stone is drilling with his specially designed core drill equipment, having gone from 4200 feet to the present depth in about six weeks, with a slight fishing job. It is the intention to drill fifty feet deeper. The Mission test, only a quarter of a mile south, is standing at about 3700 feet. Santa Ana people are interested somewhat in these two tests.

Ernest W. Marland, Ponca City, Okla., is looking over the California interests of the Marland Oil Company of California, traveling in his private pullman. He was in Los Angeles only two days, going to San Francisco, Pacific Coast headquarters, where F. G. Kenney, head of the corporation, presides. Geologists and leasers are working in the San Joaquin Valley territory and in Southern California and acquiring considerable acreage. The Coast Land Company—now merged in the new corporation—acquired many leases last year, some of them in the Dominguez field. One well is drilling southeast of Santa Fe Springs field, getting pretty well down and nothing showing. Mr. Marland, originally from Pittsburg, Pa., began his oil career seventeen years ago by leasing the 101 Ranch of Miller Brother near Ponca City (then Oklahoma Territory.) The company was named 101 Ranch Oil Company. He next leased 185 school sections from the State of Oklahoma, some of them being productive. Later the Marland Refining Company was organized, now the holding corporation and a strong and successful one. The Marland operates in Mexico, in Texas, in California and in Oklahoma and Kansas, has a natural gas distributing organization, many service stations, and a complete 12,000-barrel refinery at Ponca City. Its daily production in the Tonkawa and Burbank fields was nearly 70,000 barrels a day at the peak, the Marland Refining Company owning half of the Corner Oil Company jointly with the Roxana Petroleum Corporation, a subsidiary of the Shell-Union Company.

Frank Rhome has been in Los Angeles nine months representing the Carter Oil Company (100 per cent owned by Standard of New Jersey,) Tulsa headquarters. No office is maintained, but Frank scouts all the fields regularly and the company may eventually do something in California. Most of the eastern operators are conservative about land prices and the California bonuses, royalties, rentals and short-time drilling conditions cool their operating enthusiasm. Of course this statement does not apply to the little coterie that specializes in Osage Indian leases.

Oil Royalties to Beach City Mount Higher

On the basis of actual receipts in March, the income to the city of Long Beach from oil royalties in the Signal Hill field was $5977.45 a day, or about $2,181,769.25 a year.

Since the March records were compiled, the Ramsey interests, operating on city owned water lands, brought in another well which promises an even larger revenue for April. Other wells on the Ramsey-City lease are in prospect. The outlook for the city's fiscal year, which begins July 1, indicates possibilities for $3,000,000 or more in oil revenues for the city.

The largest oil check received by the city to date was one from the Standard Oil Company a few days ago. It was for $123,469.94 and represented the city's royalties on oil from the Jergins-City lease. Another check from the same company for $41,165.51 was received a few days ago, representing royalties from the Ramsey-City lease.

Other payments include $15,872 from the Southern Counties Gas Company for gas from the Jergins lease $4359.13, from the Lomita Gasoline Company for gas from the same lease, and $691.68 from the Shell Company as royalties for March from the Cherry Hill lease.

REVIEW OF OIL ACTIVITY

Developments Expected Soon in Rosecrans Area; Doheny Enters Retail Gas Business Here

BY HOWARD C. KEGLEY

The Dominguez field held the center of the stage last week, but unless something unusual turns up within the next day or two the Rosecrans district will likely claim the most attention during the current week.

There are three reasons why Rosecrans should be interesting. The Union Oil Company is swabbing the Rosecrans No. 1 and getting ready to make a test, and at the same time it is preparing to drill out the Athens No. 1 (old Potter Oil Company hole), and test for water shutoff; while off to the east the Sanburg Petroleum Company expects to cement off its Moreland No. 1.

The Rosecrans district just now offers a situation perhaps unique in the oil development of the entire country. At the present moment there are seven oil well projects on that structure, without a single well on production as proof that the game is really worth the candle.

The Union is drilling Rosecrans No. 1 and Athens No. 1, Sangburg is drilling Moreland No. 1 and building rig for Steele No. 1, the U. S. Royalties Company has a hole down a considerable distance in its first well there, as also has the Globe Petroleum Corporation and the Morrison interests are starting a well on their lease there.

SHOWINGS GOOD

It is reported on good authority that the showings in the Athens No. 1 are as good as they are in Rosecrans No. 1 although the wells are a mile apart, north and south, and field reports are to the effect that the Moreland No. 1, a mile east of Rosecrans No. 1, has fully seventy feet of saturated oil sand.

Some of the operators still think that the Rosecrans No. 1 will not make a well, because of water trouble, but even it were eliminated there would still be the Athens No. 1 to furnish excitement this week.

With several other holes nearing the first sand in the Dominguez field that area might easily furnish the natives with another roaring gasser this week. It developed two spectacular ones last week, and the behavior of wells in that area during the next ten days will be watched with interest.

One of the interesting bits of oil news of the past week was the progress of the service-station building program being carried out by the Pan-American Petroleum Company in this city. There are about twenty stations either wholly or partially constructed at present and reports are to the effect that the Doheny interests have contracted for enough steel here to erect about 150 of these stations.

KEEN RIVALRY FORECAST

This venture into the gasoline-selling field, in an area of congested population, is certain to afford some lively competition for large as well as small companies, because the Pan-American has behind it a new refinery capable of supplying as much gasoline as it can use, and it has every facility needed to make a success of the business—producing wells, pipe lines, refinery, tank farm, distributing facilities and retail stations. Through the Mexican Petroleum Company, the Doheny interests are already into the retail gasoline business in New Orleans and are equipped to enter such cities as Washington, D. C., and Baltimore.

The petroleum pessimists appear to be a trifle down in the mouth because the wildcat wells at El Segundo and the Baldwin Hills are showing promise. It appears likely that El Segundo will pan out or fizzle within the next month or six weeks. It may take longer to get definite developments in the Inglewood district, but it looks not unlikely that either one or the other of these districts will produce petroleum long before the year's end.

New Producing Wells Increase Coalinga Output

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

FRESNO, April 20.—An increase of 200 producing wells in the Coalinga oil fields during March over the previous month, is shown in a report tabulated by the Independent Oil Producers' Agency. As no new wells were completed last month, the figures indicate that 200 wells were taken from the idle class during the month and again placed on the beam.

As a result of the increase in total producing wells in the Coalinga field, the production has been increased more than 200,000 barrels, and several hundred men have been placed in employment.

Following is the tabulated report showing the month of March in comparison with February:

GENERAL PETROLEUM ACTIVE ON NEW SITE

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

TAFT, April 20.—The General Petroleum Corporation has moved lumber to the site for its No. 5 well on Sec. 26-32-23, on property purchased from the Midway Oil Company. Two wells are now being drilled along the line of the Formax Oil Company land. Two wells on the property were already producing when General Petroleum took over the Midway property.

Familiar Path

Two women were discussing a wedding that had taken place at their church the previous day.

"And do you know," said one, "just as Frank and the widow started up the aisle to the altar every light in the church went out?"

"What did the couple do then?" inquired one.

REDRILL JOB IS PRODUCER FOR MIDWAY

Hole Plugged Back at Huntington Beach Now Flowing 300 Barrels

Shell Company Takes Lead in Exploration

New Well May Bring Field to Wilmington

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

HUNTINGTON BEACH, April 20.—One new rig, two completions, several new wells spudded in and new locations made was the extent of developments here last week. The daily flow the past week for the entire field was 53,000 barrels. The average per well last week was 165 barrels. This leaves Huntington Beach the fourth largest field in California.

The largest producer brought in last week was the redrill job of the Petroleum Midway Company, known as Brown No. 1, which was first placed on production June 30, 1923, at 4875 feet. The output contained so much water that redrilling was decided on so that a water shutoff might be obtained.

The hole was finally plugged back to 3400 feet and the casing was set at 3200 feet where the well was brought in with a flow of 300 barrels daily of 25-gravity oil. There is practically no emulsion in the flow. Brown No. 1 is located on the east side of Delaware street at the intersection of Quincy street.

The second well placed on production was the Copeland No. 22 of the Union Oil Company, which was completed at 4100 feet and is pumping 47 barrels of 22-gravity oil. The hole contains 2946 feet of 4½-inch perforated casing. The content is now clear of all rotary mud and water and the oil is free from emulsion. It is located on the Copeland lease, north of the sugar factory, and is an offset to the Holly Oil Company's No. 3 on the north.

The Standard Oil Company is building a rig on its A lease which will be known as the A-35. It is located about 550 feet east of A-2 and near Westminster Road. This makes the number of rigs in the field 472.

There are fourteen gasoline producing plants in the field which have an output of 116,500 gallons daily. In addition there are three refineries with an output of 6000 gallons daily, making a total of 124,500 barrels of gasoline produced daily in this field.

PETROLEUM SHIPMENTS ON DECLINE

Sixteen Tankers Carry 1,195,000 Barrels from Local Port

Petroleum shipments from Los Angeles Harbor during the past week showed a decline. The total for the week was 1,195,100 barrels, compared with 1,981,000 barrels for the preceding week, a decrease of about 700,000 barrels. It was likewise an increase of about 50 per cent over the exports for the week ending the 11th inst.

Sixteen tankers carried Los Angeles' petroleum exports, which were destined for Atlantic and Gulf Coast points, with one vessel sailing for Baton Rouge in the Mississippi River delta, and one for Vancouver, B. C. The majority of tankers, nine in number, sailed for Pacific Coast refineries. The shipments were as follows:

APRIL 12
Mina Rose to Vancouver, 38,500 barrels crude for Standard Oil Co.
W. S. Miller to Portland, 73,700 barrels crude for Standard Oil Co.

APRIL 13
W. G. Warden to New York, 114,650 barrels crude for Standard Oil Co.
La Purisima to Martinez, 72,000 barrels crude for Union Oil Co.

APRIL 14
Frank G. Drum to Avon, 71,000 barrels crude for Associated Oil Co.
Drache to Martinez, 75,000 barrels crude for Union Oil Co.

APRIL 15
H. C. Folger to Philadelphia, 77,000 barrels crude for Atlantic Refining Co.

APRIL 16
Antietam to Baton Rouge, 66,000 barrels crude for General Petroleum Corp.
Los Angeles to Olean, 60,000 barrels crude for Union Oil Co.
J. A. Moffett to San Francisco, 64,200 barrels crude for Standard Oil Co.
M. H. Whittier to Avon, 66,000 barrels crude for Associated Oil Co.
Lompoc Sentinel, 75,000 barrels crude for General Petroleum Corp.

APRIL 17
Agwimer to Baltimore, 95,000 barrels crude for Atlantic Gulf & West Indies Steamship Co.

APRIL 18
Richmond to San Francisco, 62,500 barrels crude for Standard Oil Co.

The head office of the company is in San Diego. R. E. Vandruff is president and general manager and W. S. Hillyer is in charge of field operations. The number of wells, they declare soon will be increased to 200.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent in this field in searching unsuccessfully for deep oil. The companies now are going after the shallow liquid which appears to be present in great quantities. There are great pools of petroleum seepages there. The field presents many remarkable geological features. Evidence of past marine life is present in abundance.

DEEP TORRANCE SAND IS SOUGHT

Production Expected Below Wide Water Zone

Shell Company Takes Lead in Exploration

New Well May Bring Field to Wilmington

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

TORRANCE, April 20.—The Shell Company, which has taken the lead in the experimental work on the east side of the field since it went into that territory a few months ago, is making a test at the present time that is exciting the interest of every operator in the field.

The first to prospect ahead of 3850 feet, in its March No. 3, and then to 3904 feet in its March No. 1-A, and to test for a higher shutoff in its Kettler No. 5, the Shell is now preparing to try for production below 4000 feet in its Kettler No. 2.

The latter has already been drilled to 3995 feet and bridged back to 3936 feet. At this point a second water string of six and one-quarter-inch casing was landed. This string is expected to shut off the water encountered below the first productive oil zone which, in the vicinity of Kettler No. 2, extends from approximately 3550 feet to 3910 feet.

Between 3910 feet (this is an approximate depth) and 3936 feet a water sand is encountered. R. J. Miley, a half-mile east of Kettler No. 2, which is located just south of Redondo Road and at a point that would mark the extension of Western avenue, hit the water sand in Torrance No. 2 and No. 3, at 3900 feet. The Shell experts believe that by setting casing at 3936 feet they will shut off the water zone. Below this level the oil sand and shale have been picked up. The drill was stopped in an oil formation at 3995 feet.

IMPORTANT TEST

While Shell officials do not regard Kettler No. 2 as a deep-test well, the possibility of its disclosing a second productive sand on the east side of the field, shut off from the first by a water zone, is seen by the operators in the eastern area.

Should the well be drilled ahead and another productive oil zone be discovered it will be the most important development in the field for months. Three-inch pipe will be used in drilling ahead in Kettler No. 2.

While several deep test wells have been drilled on the west side of the field, in "edge" territory, Torrance operators have never entirely given up hope of finding a deeper productive sand. Many believe that conditions on the east side of the field are more favorable than on the west side.

AT WILMINGTON

Last week ten new wells were placed on production. Their combined flow gauged slightly more than 6500 barrels. Six of these wells were in the southwest territory and the others on the east side of the field.

The bailer was lost in the Empire Development Company's outpost well on the far southeast side of the field while it was being cleaned out for a production test last Monday. The well is now ready, it is said, for a second test, and from the amount of oil already swabbed out of the hole, it should prove successful.

RARE MEDICINE IS FOUND

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

BAKERSFIELD, April 20.—The discovery of the much talked of and precious medicine, ichthyol, in Devil's Den, fifty miles west of Wasco, is expected to lead to new and intensive exploitation of that shallow oil field, local operators think.

Devil's Den has been perforated with unprofitable oil wells for many years, but at last it seems likely that from this region a new element will be introduced into the petroleum industry of the San Joaquin Valley. America hitherto has been obliged to import practically all of her ichthyol from Austria.

Vandruff Petroleum, Inc., is the pioneer company developing the shallow wells, having some thirty of them on the pump now, all ranging in depth from 125 to 200 feet. No casing is required and a great number of the pumps are operated from one power plant.

The wells deliver from six to ten barrels of oil per day, the product being so rich a lubricant, it is asserted, that it can be used in an automobile just as it comes from the well. It is from this fluid, used unrefined since the early days by pioneer ranchers in their ranch work, that the ichthyol is extracted.

Vandruff Petroleum has completed a refinery and is now awaiting the arrival of machinery by which the product can be extracted through a special patented process. The refined ichthyol may be on the market in thirty days. It will be marketed from Wasco, reports say.

Reports of California's Oil Wells and Their Products; What Basin Fields Are Doing

STANDARD GETS SANTA FE LEAD

Most Active Operator in Springs Field

Has Six Wells in Process of Spudding In General Petroleum Finds New Production

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SANTA FE SPRINGS, April 20.—The most active operator in this field now is the Standard Oil Company, which led for several months in field operations here. The Standard has six wells in process of spudding in, and is planning several others to be started shortly. Other sections of this area are attracting the attentions of the operators as well.

Two small wells were placed on production by the Standard last week. The Koontz No. 6 is yielding about 100 barrels a day after drilling 4850 feet deep. The oil is 30 degrees gravity. The new producer is on the Watson lease, on the No. 1 location and has a flow of about 100 barrels. It was drilled 4350 feet deep and is of 35 degrees gravity.

WELL ABANDONED

Among the wells now drilling toward Old holdings and being prepared for production is the Bell on the south Whittier Community lease, which has been drilled 4750 feet deep and is now in oil sands and should soon be in production. Well No. 15 has been drilled 4400 feet and is fishing for tools, but should be cleared within a few days. The No. 2 well on the Standard-Watson lease has been drilled 4770 feet and is standing. It has been announced that the Standard No. 1 well which was drilled to 5620 feet without good results, will be abandoned. The casing is being pulled from the hole. The South Whittier Community well No. 16 has passed the four and one-half-inch string at 4650 feet and is preparing for production from that depth.

Plans are being made by the Standard to start rigging several wells which include Santa Gertrude No. 1, W. L. Houghton No. 3, O. Hopkins No. 3, O. W. Houghton No. 4 and Jordon No. 6, Land held by Standard in the Orchard Hills and La Merada districts.

JULIAN REDRILLS

The General Petroleum Corporation, after drilling the No. 91-A well here, plugged the hole back and has not obtained 200 barrels of oil from that level. The well is of 36 degrees gravity. A gusher was obtained on the Anderson No. 33-C location at 2900 feet. The main bulk line has been completed to C. P., as a well of that depth. The No. 10 well in the Santa Fe Springs field was drilled 4650 feet in now hauling mud and water for gas and oil. A rig is being built on the General Petroleum No. 52-C location.

C. C. Julian has redrilled the No. 11 to 4600 feet.

The Petroleum Midway Company's No. 9 on the Patterson property is drilling in hard sand at 4120 feet while No. 1 is idle at 2000 feet; No. 4 has been drilled 4660 feet and is fishing at that depth for a lost string of casing. After spudding in, the Petroleum Midway left its No. 6 well on the Patterson lease standing idle. The well may be started again soon, it is asserted.

PRODUCTION NEAR

The Union Oil Company's well No. 4 on the Alexander lease has made a flow of 250 barrels. This hole was drilled 4700 feet deep originally but was plugged back to the sand at 4000 feet and from that depth it made a commercial well. The No. 11 on the Meyer lease is in the sand, having been drilled to 4600 feet and is standing idle while No. 17 on the same lease is cemented at 4200 feet. The No. 4 on the Bell lease was drilled 4660 feet and has been bailed to 2500 feet. It is believed to be in the oil sand with production imminent. The No. 10 well on the Bell lease made a flow from the depth of 4700 feet but the flow was killed. Swabbing was started again and the expected flow has not as yet materialized.

The Artesia Oil Company has cemented its well No. 1 drilled near the townsite of Artesia at 5840 feet and is planning upon drilling the cement out this week.

In the La Merada district the Scientific Oil Company has recemented through the perforated casing at 3700 feet after drilling the hole 4200 feet. The Petroleum Producers' Syndicate has drilled the No. 1 well to 5000 feet and is fishing for 200 feet of casing and is in thirty feet of sand.

The C. C. Stahl Oil Association has found gas and oil showings on the Reeber lease in the Downey section at 4000 feet and will drill deeper expecting to find an oil sand within the next 200 feet.

VALLEY IMPROVEMENTS

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

VAN NUYS, April 20.—One of the fifteen proposed power stations to be installed by Los Angeles city as a result of the proposed bond issue will be located in San Fernando Valley, being a 22,000-volt main bulk line to replace the present 15,000-volt line. Other extensions and betterments in the valley are planned to consume the remainder of the $1,222,000 allotted to be expended in the valley.

FIND SIGN OF BURIED TREES

Drillers of Oil Well Extract Carbonized Bark; Believed to Indicate Subterranean Woods

BY ROBERT J. PRITCHARD

The discovery of a subterranean forest of giant trees, standing like the skeletons of past geological ages, buried deep in the bowels of the earth, is believed to be indicated by the extraction of a piece of carbonized bark, three feet in length, from the Superior Oil Company's Brokhurst No. 1 well near Anaheim.

The discovery was made at a depth of 2400 feet, and it is asserted that the drill penetrated fifty feet of solid wood, which according to some geological authorities may have been the perpendicular trunk of a prehistoric tree.

Officials of the company verify reports of the discovery of the ancient bark fragment, and admit that the drill passed through fifty feet of woody material, but are inclined to doubt the theory that they were drilling into the perpendicular trunk of a tree.

WILL GO TO MUSEUM

The three-foot bark fragment which the Brokhurst crew extracted in its fishing-job is thought to be the first instance where such a large sample has been taken from such a depth. As a rule, where such woody material is encountered, it is ground up by the drilling tools.

But for the accident of a fishing-job at the point where the wood fragment was found, the same thing would have occurred in the Brokhurst well. According to Superior officials, the fragment probably will be presented to a museum.

Woody material is found at great depths in several localities in the Los Angeles Basin, it is said. The Anaheim No. 1 of E. J. Miller is said to have found such a substance, and the Union Oil Company's Rosecrans well is reported to have drilled into woody material at 2400 feet. It is also found in the Downey and Inglewood districts, according to geologists.

SEVERAL THEORIES

A number of theories are given as to the causes for the presence of wood several thousand feet under the ground. According to one theory, the trunks of trees have been carried to sea by ancient rivers, and becoming waterlogged, were sunk to the bottom, and covered by the accumulation of thousands of feet of sediment, the area later being raised above the sea. According to another theory, the sudden submersion of a standing-forest might have occurred, the same process of burial under sediment, and subsequent elevation following.

According to Dr. F. A. Craise, Los Angeles geologist, the United States government in drilling to ascertain the depth of bedrock in the Gore Canyon of the Grand River in Colorado, several years ago, drilled into logs of wood at 2000 feet, and other instances of a similar nature have occurred in other parts of the country.

NOT PETRIFIED

In these cases the wood is not petrified, as in the petrified forests of Arizona, but is carbonized, the difference being due to the presence or absence of the opportunity for oxidation at the time decomposition was occurring. In the case of oxidation, the organic matter is replaced by silicious or other material as it is slowly rotted away, and the form of the tree is retained after the original matter is entirely gone. This is petrification. Where the air is excluded and there is no opportunity for oxidation, the original material remains, although in a carbonized state of preservation.

Best Producing Well From Wild Dominguez Hole

The Dominguez oil field developed its biggest producing well yesterday as a result of the gas blowout in the Callender No. 2 hole last Wednesday night. The Callender blew out following a production test, and ran wild for two days and nights, with tremendous gas pressure.

The well was capped Saturday forenoon, and after minor repairs were made it was turned into the tank. Yesterday, according to the UnionOil Company's field report, the Callender No. 2 was flowing a good round 4000 barrels a day, from a depth of 4365 feet.

Most of the wells at Dominguez have been in the 1000 to 1500-barrel class. Only one went as high as 3000 barrels in a single day.

SEIZURES IN "DRYEST" TOWN

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

AKRON (O.) April 20.—Edward C. Tremblay, State prohibition enforcement officer, who on Saturday called Tiffin the dryest spot in Ohio, found a couple of moist spots yesterday. Two homes out of a dozen which were raided yielded six gallons of whisky and a still, made out of a wash boiler. Two men who admitted ownership of the still and the liquor were fined $250 each by Mayor Dreitzler.

DECLINE IN OUTPUT AT LONG BEACH

Five New Wells With Total of 3600 Barrels Not Equal to Decrease

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

LONG BEACH, April 20.—Five new wells, with a combined initial production of 3600 barrels per day, were added to the list of producers in the Signal Hill field during the week ending yesterday. But this new production was insufficient to offset the gradual decline in the field's production. Figures available yesterday on total daily average production for the entire field show a daily yield of 175,000 barrels.

New wells for the week were:

West Coast Crude No. 1, completed by the McKeon Drilling Company at 4580 feet, and rated as a 600-barrel well.

McNeice No. 1, owned by J. H. McNeice, and located on Atlantic avenue, near Spring street, completed at 4830 feet, and showing an initial flow of 1200 barrels.

Shell Company's Pickler No. 3, deepened from the 3400-foot level to 4950 feet. Rated as a 1200-barrel well.

Several wells now preparing for flows give promise of being on production within the next few days. Prominent among these are the Rosenfield No. 2, swabbing at 5000 feet; Bush-Vorhis Graham No. 1, rigging pump at 3665 feet; Interstate Oil Company's Olsen No. 2, rigging pump at 4602 feet; The W. C. S. No. 1 swabbing at 4651 feet.

RECORDER APPOINTED

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

SOUTH GATE, April 20.—At a meeting of the City Trustees a motion was made and passed declaring the office of city recorder vacant. Earl Newmire, who was formerly judge of San Antonio township, with offices in Huntington Park and who resigned last December, was appointed to fill the vacancy.

VARIED LUCK AT DOMINGUEZ

Two Great Gassers Spout Gallons of Oil and Millions of Feet of Gas

Success and disappointment combined to make the past week a noteworthy one in the history of the Dominguez Hill field. With two great gassers spouting thousands of barrels of oil, and millions of feet of gas during the week in the southern part of the field, the Austin No. 1 in the northern section was reported to be down 5400 feet without any indication that it will ever be a producing well.

The Shell Company's Reyes No. 4314 feet deep, was the first gasser to break loose. A control head was blown off during a production test last Monday afternoon, and three crews of drillers, with a score of additional helpers, battled until Thursday morning to kill it.

FLOW IS CHECKED

After attempts to fit a new valve had failed, the pumps succeeded in forcing a sufficient quantity of mud and shavings into the well to stop the flow. No important damage was done, according to official reports, excepted that a new string of eight-inch casing will probably be necessary before the well can be placed on production.

It was impossible to do more than guess the Reyes No. 2 production during the rampage, but it was estimated that the gas production was probably 25,000,000 cubic feet per day. The oil production was variously estimated at from 1000 to 10,000 barrels. It is considered probable that 1500 barrels would be a fair figure.

The Union Oil Company's Callender No. 2 got beyond control last Wednesday afternoon. It was brought from a depth of 4365 feet, and flowed about 350 barrels before the packing head was blown off in the afternoon.

From that time until Saturday morning the well gassed at the rate of about 30,000,000 feet per day, according to official reports, and flowed about 3000 barrels of oil per day. When it was finally controlled the production was immediately turned into the tanks. Callender No. 2 is the deepest producer in this part of the field.

SIGNIFICANT NEWS

A significant development was the discovery of a sand in the Shell Company's Hellman No. 1 at 4370 feet. Officials of the Shell denied that an oil sand had been found at that depth, but admitted that they expect to get a sand in the next few days, barring mishap. This well is about 700 feet southeast from the General Petroleum Corporation's Gardena No. 1, which found the sand at 4840 feet.

The Austin No. 1 of the General Petroleum was reported to have a good showing last week at around 5100 feet. Later it was said that the showing had disappeared, and late reports indicate that the well is now 5400 feet deep. A bit was twisted off Friday, and drilling is halted while the crew attempted to fish it out. Except for this accident, the hole is in good condition, it is asserted, and if the bit is successfully extracted the well will be continued.

MAY SOUND KNELL

If the reports from Austin No. 1 are correct, it is believed to sound the knell of that particular area, as any production found deeper than 5500 feet would have to be unusually good to warrant the expense of drilling for it.

Production in the Domingues field during the week averaged 6500 barrels per day, but the addition of the Callender No. 2 to the production list on Saturday raised the mark considerable. Of the wells on production the Union has five, the Shell has one and the General Petroleum has one.

Record Made in Verde Central Shaft Sinking

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

JEROME (Ariz.) April 20.—The new working shaft of the Verde Central is to be completed and in operation by the 25th inst., well ahead of schedule. Something of a record has been made in the sinking of the three-compartment shaft, a distance of 856 feet in less than ninety days.

Supt. K. L. Bartholomew gives the credit to Engineer A. B. Culwell, who made the surveys from the irregular incline shaft to each of the spots from which upraises were run above the 1000-foot level.

There were five separate raises, each connecting with the others with absolute exactness. Foundations for surface buildings and for the hoisting works are in place. The big hoist of the Gadsden mine will be taken over to the Verde Central this week for re-erection. It is expected that the company will sink still deeper when facilities are bettered by installation of the new hoist.

Plans are now under way to resume operations on the old Jerome Grande copper property of seventy-one acres, all patented ground, east of Walnut Springs and adjoining the Verde Central and Verde Jerome properties.

Jerome Grande has an 838-foot shaft, from which was drifting 560 feet eastward. The mine is in one of the most promising localities of the district where, it is believed, will be found valuable extensions of the United Verde ore body.

GIANT FOREST TOUR FOR FURNITURE MEN

VISALIA, April 20.—The chief feature of entertainment to be offered the California State Retail Furniture Dealers' Association, which convenes in Visalia, May 22-24 for a semiannual session, will be an automobile trip to Giant Forest, Sequoia National Park. A dancing party on the evening of May 23 will be another specialty.

HOPE FELT FOR WILDCAT HOLE

El Segundo Drillers Pick Up Shale Formation

Discovery Held to Point to Flowing Well Soon

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

EL SEGUNDO, April 20.—The pessimism felt at the beginning of the week by local residents regarding the outcome of the wildcat well on the Fortuna Oil Company's lease southeast of the city, largely was dispelled by the close of the week when it was learned that the Fortuna wildcat has picked up a brown shale, showing slight traces of oil, at approximately 4350 feet. The well was said to be drilling in brown shale yesterday slightly below 4400 feet.

Field men for the Fortuna regarded the depth of the brown shale through which the drill passed during the last few days of drilling as decidedly encouraging. They expect to be able to set casing at about 4500 feet. So far the only casing in the hole is the surface casing which was set at 600 feet. The drillers were going ahead cautiously last week, coring virtually every foot of the way.

WELL HOPED FOR

It was learned yesterday that field men for the Fortuna Company believe that the oil formation encountered a few hundred feet above the present level would have proven productive but that it was so close to the water sand that there would have been considerable difficulty in getting a water shut-off. If another oil sand is picked up it will be considered a well, they said.

This announcement revived the hopes of local residents with property in the vicinity of the well.

After halting for a short time after running into an extremely hard sand around 3700 feet, operations were resumed Friday at the Pan-American's wildcat north of here. The hole is reported to be down about 3725 feet with cores showing considerable oil. The cores are said to have "cut oil" all the way from about 3676 feet, where the cement was drilled out, to the present depth.

IN PREDICAMENT

Pan-American field men are reported to be uncertain regarding what steps to take with the well. The eight and three-quarter-inch casing is reported to be in bad shape, making it necessary to set a new string of casing to get a water shut-off.

It is asserted that they are undecided whether to continue drilling in order to test the depth of the formation they are now in, with a view possibly to try for another sand, or to set a string of six and one-quarter-inch casing below the present water string.

Tale of Heroic Conduct False, Wife Declares

William Duncan Robertson's narrative of his heroic conduct as a doughty warrior in France won her heart and hand, Mrs. Alice Eldridge Robertson declared in a complaint in which she sues for divorce, now on file before the Superior Court.

He figured in numerous sanguinary engagements "over there," was wounded by a bayonet and was gassed, he told her, according to the complaint. In addition, two of his brothers were killed in battle, according to his tale, she declared.

So she married him in 1920, under the impression that he was a hero.

Later she found out that he had never served outside of a military camp on this side, she asserted.

The shock of disillusionment caused her grevious mental anguish, according to her complaint, for which she prays the relief provided by the California code.

HINDU PARTY GIVEN ENTRY INTO MEXICO

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CALEXICO, April 20.—After being detained here for seventeen days, awaiting the necessary permission from Mexico City, fifty-one Hindus have been taken across the international border and will farm near Mexicali, Lower California. The Hindus came from Calcutta, by way of Hongkong, where the Mexican Consul approved their passports and advised them they could enter Mexico, according to their statements to officials here. A former party of forty-nine of their countrymen had the same difficulty and were delayed more than two weeks before they were allowed to cross the line. It has been given out by Mexican immigration officials that no more Hindus will be permitted to enter Lower California.

BANDIT CAUSES WIFE'S ARREST

Woman Admits She Knew He Planned Robbery

Denies Awaiting Husband Outside of Bank

Mate Says He Needed Cash for Doctor's Bills

Mrs. Jean Peters, 31 years of age, was arrested yesterday by Detective Lieutenants Katzenberger and Craig following a statement said to have been made to the police by her husband, Lawrence Peters, alias Louis Pico, who was captured in an attempted hold-up of the Hellman Bank at Sixth and Main streets Saturday night. She was taken into custody at her home at 124 South Fremont avenue and was lodged in the City Jail on a charge of suspicion of robbery.

Peters is declared to have told the police that his wife accompanied him to the bank and waited for him to complete the hold-up. She denied this, according to the police, but admitted knowing that her husband had planned to rob the bank.

THE CAPTURE

The capture of Peters was said by police to have been due to the quick work of Patrolman Neustedt. When Peters is said to have thrust a note to a teller demanding $3000 the teller dropped to the floor and rang the burglar alarm. Officer Neustedt, off duty at the time recovering from an accidental gun-shot wound, captured and disarmed the suspect.

After his arrest the suspect said his name was Louis Pico and declared he had just "'blown in'" from Tucson. Later he is declared to have admitted his real name and to have told the police he had been working at a garage at Eleventh and Crocker streets for six months.

NEEDED MONEY FOR WIFE

Peters planned the robbery, he is said to have told the police, because he did not have enough money to pay the expenses incident to the birth of a child to his wife.

Special Officer A. J. Lenox of the bank's force yesterday declared he was the one who captured and disarmed the suspect. Lenox said he was on guard at the door he had closed when the alarm sounded when Peters attempted to leave the bank. Lenox said he took Peters before the teller, where he was identified, and then turned the prisoner and the gun over to Officer Neustedt, who happened to be in the bank and made himself known.

SAN ANTONIO (Tex.) April 20.—The California-Medina Oil Association, in the northwestern corner of Medina county, is drilling at 2245 in the Pennsylvania formation in its Rothe No. 1. Casing was set at 2252 feet and just before that the drill penetrated black sand and brown shale.

R. Pearson, geologist for the interests which are drilling the well, says he believes the log indicates an uplifted section of the country there. The well is purely a wildcat, but there are said to be good showings of oil. The Humble Oil and Refining Company is drilling in about a few miles to the northeast at about 1400 feet.

Other California interests have taking blocks of acreage in the southeastern corner of Medina county, twenty-five miles southwest, and in Zavala and Uvalde counties, to the south, but majority of the interests back of the propositions has not been

NEW THEORY IN TRUNK MURDER

Plan to Bury Body in House at Venice is Hinted

Painter Says Woman Tried to Rent Place There

Mrs. Willis Appears Before Judge Crail Today

With the evident intention of burying her victim beneath the floor, Mrs. Margaret Willis, charged with the murder of Dr. Benjamin Baldwin, attempted to rent a house in Venice the same day she and Bert Webster, her friend, eventually buried the trunk containing Baldwin's body down a cliff-like bank bordering the Southern Pacific tracks on the road to Venice.

This was learned, police detectives and investigators of the District Attorney's office declared last night, in a new statement made by Webster.

In submission of Webster, Deputy District Attorney Dennison declared, to the final link in the chain of evidence that Mrs. Willis killed Baldwin to gain possession of his automobile, and not to protect herself as the woman recently has asserted.

TRIES TO FIND HOUSE

Further questioning of Webster, Deputy District Attorney Dennison revealed, revealed that after the trunk had been carried from the house, Webster helping Mrs. Willis lift it over the guard rail bordering the highway, he entered the car down the road several hundred yards and together at least fifteen minutes before Mrs. Willis joined him.

In investigation of the trunk, officers assert, revealed that the spring lock of the heavy receptacle was open when discovered, the lock had not been broken. It is the contention of investigators that Mrs. Willis tried to drag the body to the beach, but was frightened from her gruesome task by passers-by.

Later, it was indicated, will appear as the star witness for the state, he was taken to Venice in an effort to locate the house on which he said Mrs. Willis attempted to rent, but was unable to locate it in his first attempt. Other efforts will be made. Important statements are said to have been made in the presence of Chief Detectives Longuevan and Duke and Capt. Hunter of the District Attorney's office.

WILLIS IN COURT TODAY

Mrs. Willis will make her first appearance in court today at 9:30 o'clock when she comes before Judge Crail to enter a plea.

The indictment issued yesterday charges that she is not guilty of murder, and asserted her contention is clear. She said she is innocent, and she will be exonerated when the "facts and circumstances are known." She characterized as "false and unfounded" the charge that she shot the physician and put his body in a trunk before she caused of it because she wanted to obtain his automobile.

TEMPLAR BANDS DRAW CROWDS

Figueroa Street Lined as Knights March to Easter Service

Hundreds of people gathered yesterday on the sidewalks on Figueroa street between Pico and Eighth streets, to hear the strains of Easter music dispensed by the bands of the Knights Templar of Los Angeles Commandery No. 9 and of the Golden West Commandery No. 43.

The Knights Templar, numbering about 300, marched from the Figueroa street Masonic Temple to the First Methodist Church to enjoy an Easter program at which they were honored guests. The sermon was preached by Dr. Dean MacCormack, Dean of St. Paul's Cathedral and a prominent Mason.

The program which was broadcast by The Times, included organ selection by Arthur Blakeley, solos by Nell Lockwood, Mrs. Helen O. Hutchins and D. B. Chambers, and brief addresses by prominent Knights Templar.

BRIDE FAILS IN ATTEMPT TO END LIFE

Cryptic Explanation Given by Young Wife of Artist for Taking Poison

Her hands fluttered wearily like tired, white butterflies about the covering of her cot in the Receiving Hospital. Those hands had been declared the most beautiful in California in a contest a few years ago.

"Everything is so impossible," murmured Olga Beaubien Berlin cryptically, and that was the nearest thing to an explanation given by the artist's model and bride of six days concerning her attempt to suicide early Sunday morning.

She was found lying in the street at First and Bunker Hill at 12:20 a.m. Sunday and taken to the Receiving Hospital where emergency treatment was given. She declared she had taken a large quantity of poison in an attempt to end her life.

Last Tuesday Olga Beaubien applied for work at the studio of Ben Berlin, well-known local artist, at 215 1-2 South Spring street. She was out of funds. So was Berlin. He was unable to employ her as a model, but after a three-hour heart-to-heart talk that developed into a courtship, they were married by Justice of the Peace Henby.

According to the husband she disappeared from his studio toward the end of a social gathering Saturday night. After an all-night search he found her at the Receiving Hospital and by that time she was sufficiently recovered from her death attempt to accompany him back to their studio quarters.

Mrs. Berlin asserts she is the grand-daughter of the Russian Gen. Semenov. Mr. Berlin is a painter, who is rapidly becoming favored through his portraits and murals. He has done portraits of Clara Kimball Young and Moon Kwan, the Chinese poet, and murals for a number of the popular downtown cafes.

The young couple spent Sunday in seclusion at their rooms, loath to discuss the near-tragedy of Easter morning.

MULTITUDES BOW DOWN AT CROSS OF RISEN SAVIOR

Hollywood Bowl Sees Thousands in Obeisance

BY ALMA WHITAKER

It is an extraordinary sensation rushing down wide boulevards surrounded on all sides and for miles in front and miles behind by multitudes of automobiles in that cold eerie two hours before the dawn. It was almost like driving furiously, almost silently, through the Valley of Death; that queer silence relieved only by the whirr of the machines and an occasional uncanny screech from a motor horn.

By 4 a.m. the Hollywood Bowl seats were filled, but for an hour and a half after that the multitudes thronged in. The traffic jam had long since proved unmanageable, and most of us left our machines and trudged many long uphill blocks to the Bowl. An odd, motley assembly, some in full evening dress, coming straight on from Saturday night parties. Wealthy, plump dowagers in weighty furs and jewels, whining a little at the unaccustomed exercise, the unaccustomed jostling and shoving. Old, old people, carrying rugs and shawls and cushions. Fairy-like maidens decked out in gay summery attire. Little children, joyous in this eerie dawn adventure. Young couples with babies swathed in elderdowns.

FORM OF CROSS

By 4:45 a.m. the sky was light, but no hint of sunshine had crept over the hills into the Bowl. But every mound, every hillside, was thronged with human beings of all sizes and ages, and still the crowd came on and climbed and climbed, upward toward the Cross—in a thrilling sort of silence with an undercurrent of whispered touchiness. The great orchestra was in place behind its huge banks of Easter lilies. The tiny children's chorus had taken its place on the hillside behind them, in the form of a human cross, with the littlest ones in front. The Wayfarer Chorus was lined up behind the orchestra. Photographers were poised on commanding mounds. Small boys climbed upon the white Cross upon the hillside. And many who had come from far distant points fell fast asleep in their Arcadian seats.

At precisely 5:35 a.m., the sun dawned over the hill and struck that Cross and the hilltops. The small boys climbed down in awe. And hushed awe and wonder filled that vast company. A queer sort of radiance lighted the faces of those who, with weariness and despair had been climbing, climbing—yet they were the first to be bathed in the sunshine as that Cross came out of the shadowa.

Then upon another hilltop rang out the Easter sunrise trumpet call, sounded by the sisters, Lorene and Alberta Lavis, in shimmering white angel gowns. And presently the Hollywood community orchestra was swelling into Humperdinck's "Vision of the Angels" and no other sound marred that ethereal strain.

25,000 ASSEMBLED

Dr. W. F. Richardson then spoke the invocation, which was followed by "The Holy City," sent forth on the trumpets of the sisters. A scriptual reading, the story of Christ arisen, was read by Dr. Stewart P. MacLennan.

And then came Hugo Kirkhoffer to lead the multitude in the singing of "Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty" swelling mightily from out 25,000 throats.

Many estimates were given me, of

FIVE MEN WOUNDED IN FIGHTS

One is Believed Fatally Stabbed; Another May Die From Bullet

One man was probably fatally stabbed, another may die from a bullet wound and three others suffered more or less serious injuries in a number of cutting and shooting affrays last night.

Enois Torres, 24 years of age, 1920 New Jersey street, received a possibly mortal cut near the heart from an unidentified knife wielder in a fight at the Plaza. Dr. Dorn at the Receiving Hospital said the man's chances for recovery are slight. His assailant fled.

A bullet wound near his heart may cause the death of A. Venezuela, 1817 Bishop Road. He was shot by an unidentified man in a quarrel in the 1800 block on Bishop Road.

A fight that started over the respective merits of two colored lodges, according to the police, resulted in Joseph Green, 47 years of age, negro, being taken to the Receiving Hospital with a wound in his leg. Five shots were said to have been fired, but only one took effect. The other negro was not apprehended.

Charles Johnson, negro, 44, 1627 Sonoma street, received a slight wound on his head when a pistol was used by another negro, in an argument. The bullet grazed his skull. He is expected to recover.

Laendero Moranes, 111 Clarence street, was cut on the head in a fight at North Broadway and Beachum Road. His assailant escaped.

COLE PLOT IS SITE FOR BUILDINGS

Former Senator and Son to Put Up Structures on Original Holdings

This evidence of Southern California stability is shown by the announcement made yesterday that Cornelius Cole, the one-time California Senator, who is 101 years of age, is to build an apartment-house, while his son, Stewart Cole, is planning a small hotel and store building. They will be built on what was a 500-acre tract that Senator Cole obtained back in 1874 as payment for legal services to the old Rancho La Brea.

Senator Cole is taking a personal part in planning his building investment, a four-story apartment-house to be constructed on the northeast corner of Vine street and Santa Monica Boulevard. The building will be of Class C construction to cost about $150,000.

Stewart Cole's project is for the construction of a three-story hotel of sixty rooms and baths, with stores on the ground floor. The building also will be of Class C construction. It will be located on the northwest corner of Vine and Eleanor streets.

FOUR KILLED IN TRAFFIC IN DAY

One Believed Dying, Many Others Injured

Boy Crushed Between Car and Store Wall

Pair Hurled Forty Feet in Cycle Accident

Four persons were killed, one is believed dying and several others were seriously injured in traffic accidents yesterday in and near Los Angeles.

In a spectacular accident at Eleventh and Flower streets, Nelf Glotfelty, 11 years of age, was crushed to death between an automobile and the side of a building.

The boy was attempting to cross the intersection, according to the report of Detective Lieutenants Hamilton and Oker, when a heavy automobile, asserted to have been driven faster than forty miles an hour, crashed broadside into a small car driven by M. R. Daniels of 1029 South Hope street. Daniel's car was thrown onto the sidewalk and through the plate-glass window of the Wills-St. Claire automobile agency on the corner. The mangled body of the boy was found underneath this car.

DRIVER SOUGHT

The driver of the speeding automobile is being sought by the police. According to eye-witnesses, his car was not badly damaged and he raced away from the scene. Daniels was not hurt but his car was wrecked.

John W. Hunter, 16, 2909 Future street, is dead and Frank Swain, 19, 3919 Midland avenue, is believed dying following a collision early yesterday when an automobile driven by Edward Cameron struck the motorcycle, upon which the boys were riding, at the intersection of Twenty-sixth street and Pico Boulevard, Santa Monica. Cameron was held in jail for investigation of a felony.

The two boys, who had been in Venice most of the day, were returning to their homes and are asserted to have been traveling more than forty miles an hour upon their cycle. Cameron, who is employed in a Hollywood garage, was traveling toward the beach. The car and motorcycle collided in a head-on crash, causing the boys to be thrown a distance of more than forty feet. Hunter was crushed beyond recognition and instantly killed, and Swain suffered a fractured skull and severe internal injuries. His right leg was also severed from his body. He was removed to Martin's sanatorium.

Following the accident Cameron, who lives on Cardiff street, Culver City, deserted his machine, a large touring car, and proceeded to his home. He was arrested and brought to the Santa Monica police station by Motorcycle Officers Brown and Rober, who traced him through the license on the wrecked car. Police are asserted to have found two bottles of liquor in the car, one only partly full. Cameron refused to make any statement to police regarding the accident, other than that he was traveling about thirty miles an hour when the crash occurred, and that the two boys were on the wrong side of the boulevard. Skid marks measured by police show that his machine skidded a distance of more than forty-five feet. He said he was alone in the car at the time of the accident.

Neighbors living in the vicinity who heard the crash notified local officers of the accident and an ambulance was immediately rushed to the scene. Hunter's body is at

Customs Officials Identify Picture as That of Man Crossing Border at Calexico by Automobile

Search for Grant McCartney, Los Angeles real estate man wanted on charges of assault with a deadly weapon and conspiracy to prepare false evidence against his wife, Mrs. Paula McCartney, extended to Mexico last night when it became known that custom officials at Calexico had identified photographs of the missing real estate man as those of a man who had crossed the border there several days ago in an automobile.

McCartney has been missing since the night of the 6th inst., when his wife was attacked at a roadhouse. She charged that she was lured to the place by Sydney Blair, a former employee of a private detective agency, and made the victim of an attack planned by her husband to obtain evidence for use against her in her divorce proceedings instituted some time ago.

McCartney was present at the time of the attack, according to Mrs. McCartney, and appeared when a flashlight photograph was taken of her and Blair. She had been lured to the roadhouse by Blair on the pretense of pointing out her husband to the formed detective for service of papers in connection with her demand for temporary alimony, she said.

Blair was later arrested and charged with assault by means and force likely to produce great bodily injury, and with conspiracy to produce false evidence.

Police and Sheriff's officials have been searching for McCartney since the day following the attack, but until last night no definite clew as to his whereabouts had been received. It is probable, according to statements made last night, that efforts will be made to obtain the aid of the Mexican government in locating the missing man and, if found, extradition will be asked.

CLUB MEETING

Father and Sons' day will be observed by the Los Angeles Optimists' Club at its meeting Thursday noon. The meeting will form part of the International Boys' week program.

Pair Arrested Suspected of Attack Effort

Trinidad Faloni, 32 years of age, and Miss Guadalupe Ortega, 24, were held by police last night on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon while an investigation was being made into reports that Faloni boasted he had killed a man in Glendale.

The assault charge was made by Dora Marrin, who asserted that Miss Ortega threatened to kill her with a revolver. Detective Lieutenants Wilde and Gillett and Patrolman Hatcher answered Miss Marrin's telephone call that officers be sent to 750 North Broadway, where the trouble occurred.

ROBBED ON EASTER DAY

Long Beach Homes Preyed Upon by Burglars and Much Loot Obtained; Jewelry Missed

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

LONG BEACH, April 20.—Taking advantage of the absence from home of two families late Easter afternoon and evening, burglars entered the residences, stealing jewelry and valuables worth thousands of dollars. They overlooked gems worth three times the amount of the loot taken, however.

Gaining entrance to the home of Mrs. G. Canterbury, 1050 East Ocean Boulevard, by prying open a side door, the burglars made a systematic search of the rooms and obtained jewelry valued at approximately $1000 and negotiable stocks and bonds. The negotiable securities have not been fully checked, but the loss may be several thousand dollars.

Mrs. Canterbury is a wealthy Long Beach woman. She is the prime mover behind the construction of a twelve-story apartment building on the premises adjoining her home. She and her son were absent during the afternoon. The burglars overlooked considerable jewelry.

The residence of T. D. Bonney, an official of the Union Tool Company, at Crest Drive and Elm avenue, in the Chateau Thierry district, was ransacked and a silver, hand-made necklace, other jewelry, an automatic revolver and $5 in cash taken. Before leaving the house Mrs. Bonney had taken the precaution to hide a diamond necklace valued at $4000 and other valuables which the intruders failed to find.

RULING GUARDS TAX REFUNDING

Blair Takes Step to Protect California Payers

Dishonest Experts Barred from Practice

Efficient Former Employees Aid to Bureau

All field employees of the Internal Revenue Bureau working in the district of Southern California have been instructed to watch carefully for improper practices on the part of agents and attorneys working as tax experts. This action has been taken in connection with efforts being made by Commissioner Blair at Washington to prevent unscrupulous and dishonest practitioners from representing taxpayers who have cases pending before the Treasury Department.

Collector Goodcell has received a statement from Commissioner Blair which will be submitted to the special Senate Committee now investigating the bureau. With more than $25,000,000 due citizens of Southern California in refunds owing to the Community Property decision and other retroactive tax-reducing rulings, the safeguards erected to protect the interests of taxpayers who have made overpayments will be of special interest to the citizens of this district, Collector Goodcell said.

CHANCE OF FRAUD

"Much criticism has been made of the bureau because of the practice before the department of former employees who have, it is said, gained valuable experience while in the government employ and thereafter used the knowledge thus acquired when appearing for clients on tax matters," the Commissioner's statement says.

"Most of this criticism is unjustified because there is nothing in the law or regulations to prevent a former employee from practicing before the department merely because he has been connected with the government service. Experience has shown that persons familiar with the law and procedure, who represent taxpayers, are in many instances helpful to the government in making proper dispositions of cases. However, some of the complaints are well taken because in rare instances men in the government service have gained definite knowledge with reference to a particular case and have resigned with the idea of assisting the taxpayer in the presentation of this case before the bureau."

MANY BARRED

The Commissioner announces that where such facts have been revealed the former employee involved has been disbarred from practice, and has been prosecuted where the facts warranted prosecution. He says that with the purpose in view of permitting only qualified and strictly reputable persons to represent taxpayers in cases to be considered by the bureau, and to prevent corruption and dishonest practices in handling tax cases, a committee on enrollment and disbarment has been created.

According to the Commissioner, more than 300 names are on the list of those that the committee has disbarred, rejected or suspended from practice.

THRONGS AT FOOT OF CROSS

the concourse there gathered, clear up to 100,000, but Dr. J. J. Carter assured me that 75,000 was the more probable figure, 7000 more than last year.

The little children sang "Christ the Lord is Risen Today" and pronounced the Hallelujahs as though their little hearts would burst. Sol Cohen's song "Gethsemane" was sung by Alice Forsyth Mosher, to a string quartet accompaniment, lead by Sol Cohen. And after the Welfarer Chorus had sung the Hallelujah chorus from the Messiah, with the entire company standing, and men's hats reverently removed, Dr. Samuel J. Skevington delivered the Easter message. It was a plea to bring the Light of Jesus Christ into the individual life, that light which illuminates all mysteries, banishes all fear, enlightens al human bewilderment.

MAKES OFFERING

Mrs. J. J. Carter made a nice little speech and the great Easter sunrise service at the Hollywood Bowl concluded with the multitude joining in singing "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," and the doxology—and Easter offerings for the bowl on the way out.

Quite remarkable orderliness marked the breaking up of that amazingly crowded service, although the confusion at and beyond the gates seemed utterly baffling. One crowded street car caught fire and occasioned temporary alarm, but it soon was quelled. Thousands walked out into that summer morning and for hours afterward the throngs of cars sped onward and away.

PEACE HILL SEES THRONG OF FAITHFUL

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

SANTA MONICA, April 20.—Long before the dawn, Peace Hill in the Pacific Palisades north of the city, was crowded with hundreds of worshipers who gathered to participate in Easter sunrise services, an annual event which is looked forward to by many residents of the Santa Monica Bay district. A crowd of more than 5000 persons gathered at the shrine.

The call to worship was sounded by a trumpeter just as dawn broke and the waiting crowd marched in processional to the brow of the hill to the strain of the "Hallelujah Chorus," rendered by the Santa Monica municipal band. The opening prayer was delivered by Rev. J. W. Mahood followed by a solo given by Joseph Waugh. Scripture readings were delivered by Rev. Oren B. White.

The following program which had been arranged by Rev. Charles H. Scott was carried out in detail: Whistling solo "Hosanna" by Miss Gertrude Tyron; Van Dyke's "God of the Open Air," read by Beulah Wright Comstock; Shelly's "Resurrection," rendered by Dr. Joseph Marple; Easter message, delivered by Dr. W. F. Dexter of Whittier College; Rendition of the hymn "Hail Thou Once Despised Jesus," by the worshipers, and benediction, Rev. Charles Scott.

The service, which was short but effective, was followed by the annual Easter Recessional when worshipers each carrying an Easter lily wended their way to the foot of the shrine where each flower was deposited to form a huge bed of white.

Although most of the worshipers arrived a the Peace Hill in automobiles, bus service was maintained from Venice, Ocean Park, Santa Monica and Sawtelle.

W. H. Carter, manager of the Pacific Palisades Association, who was instrumental in arranging much of the service, was highly complimented and thanks also were given Walter Armacost of Sawtelle, responsible for the beautiful floral display.

Many persons are reported to have rested in their automobiles during the night in order to participate in the event.

VANGUARD OF FLEET DUE TODAY

Three Vessels to Enter Port at Dawn; Rest Due Tomorrow

Three vessels, the advance guard of the Pacific battle fleet, will steam into Los Angeles Harbor at dawn today, according to a radio dispatch received yesterday from Rear-Admiral J. V. Chase, commander of the base force here. The vessels are the Procyon, flagship of the base fleet, the Prometheus, repair ship of the fleet, and the Relief, hospital ship.

They sailed from Panama the 8th inst., preceding by four days the other ships of the fleet, which are expected to arrive tomorrow at noon. In the fleet arriving tomorrow are nine battleships, ten submarines and four more ships of the base fleet.

The Pacific fleet has spent four months in Caribbean waters, at winter maneuvers with the Atlantic fleet. It will be here until June 25, for gunnery practice and squadron maneuvers, and will then sail for the annual summer cruise in northern waters. It will return again in the fall.

Charge Against Woman Up in Court Today

The merits of two opposing arguments, one by the State that Mrs. Lena Rose Holmes sheltered William H. Kern with the knowledge that he was wanted by police, the other by defense attorneys that Kerns was merely a friend of Mrs. Holmes and came to visit her are expected to be decided today when Justice Wood concludes the hearing.

Mrs. Holmes was arrested in March. It is charged Kern was seen entering and leaving her apartment at 2230 Lowena Drive, Long Beach, between October 15, when he was indicted by the grand jury, and March 15, when Mrs. Holmes was arrested.

Kern was indicted at the head of the Finance and Holding Company of California after numerous complaints had been received that stockholders and investors had lost money in the venture.

Dep. Dist.-Atty. Murray and Trinpel are representing the State while Attorney Milton Cohen is representing Mrs. Holmes.

"MAGNIFICENT TRUTHS"

"That famous Easter day race suggests that two types of people in the world today. The one type was dragged down by doubts and fears, the other inspired by an unconquerable hope and undaunted love. We are glad that Peter was a laggard only this once, but there are those who have stayed in his class, never having caught the swing and rythm of the great resurrection fact. To this type, Christ still lies in a lonely grave in a little Syrian town and the story of His conquest over death is but a beautiful dream. For such persons, life is flat and unprofitable, so far as spiritual values are concerned, and the pleasure they get out of the world fails to satisfy the soul.

"On the other hand, he who knows in his heart of the victory of the Lord, can no longer walk life's road—he breaks into a run. He leaps along the way with a new impulse, a new joy, a new gladness girding his soul. If Christ be risen from the dead, then we know He spoke truly when He said we are all God's children, that the soul is of eternal value and that, trusting in the Father, it never can be lost.

"Most glorious of all glorious truths is the seal placed upon our personal immortality. Each of us being a child of God, each has a place all his own in the Father's heart, and He will not fail to create as many mansions as may be necessary for the protection and happiness of all of His children.

ENNOBLING RESULTS

"Out of these majestic truths come two ennobling results. The hope that sends us leaping along the way breaks the chain of the worst bondage that cripples the lives of men—that of blank and unredeemed selfishness. With this redemption also comes a dauntless courage that enables us to buckle on our armor and fight against any odds if thereby the cause of right, honor, justice and human brotherhood may be advanced.

"In view of the resurrection fact, let us resolve that in the coming years we will live in the House of Hope on the street called Straight, making our dwelling a place of refuge to friends and foes alike, and with our faces ever set toward the City Beautiful. Let us make our lovely city of Los Angeles more beautiful still, in every way, but above all let us seek to make it beautiful with the light that shines from our souls, with character and conduct beautified by the spirit of our risen Lord."

MILITARY TOUCH IN SERVICE AT PORT

Three thousand Easter worshippers assembled on the poppy-strewn slopes of Fort MacArthur's upper reservation yesterday morning while the sun was rising from behind Santa Catalina Island. Services held under the guns of the port's defenses were given a military touch by the olive drab of the fort garrison and the several hundred Boy Scouts in attendance.

Capt. Albert K. Matthews, chaplain of Fort MacArthur, presided at the exercises, with the address of the morning delivered by Rev. Thomas Grice, pastor of the San Pedro Methodist Church.

The Los Angeles High School Glee Clubs sang two selections, "Easter Vespers" and "Praise Ye the Father," while Miss Inga Leine, noted concert reader, read Van Dyke's "God of the Open Air."

the Todd Undertaking Parlors, Santa Monica.

A splinter of glass from the windshield was blamed by Deputy Sheriffs Allen and Sweesy for the fatal injury of Louis Conrod of San Jose, when a car in which he was riding overturned on the Conejo grade of the Ventura Boulevard near Calabasas. The glass pierced his jugular vein and he lived only long enough to crawl from the wreckage of his car to the road side where he was picked up by E. J. Heck, Pickwick stage driver, and carried to the Receiving Hospital.

Conrod hired George A. Booth of San Jose to drive him to Houston, Tex., according to the deputies. They started late Saturday. Booth was but slightly injured when the car overturned. He also was treated at the Receiving Hospital.

NEGRESS KILLED

Mrs. Jessie Daniels, 53 years of age, of 217 East Avenue Thirty-eight, a negress, died following a collision between the automobile in which she was riding and a truck driven by L. J. Robertson of 2032 West Twenty-eighth, at Alameda and Marchessault streets.

William Gainer, 21, the driver of the automobile, escaped injury as did the driver of the truck. Miss Jessie Zeopheous, another passenger in the automobile, suffered a crushed arm. Mrs. Daniels's head was crushed and she was dead when she reached the Receiving Hospital.

Anna Shearer, 25 years of age, and W. H. Shearer, 40, both of 2831 Denby avenue, suffered possible skull fractures when their automobile collided with a car driven by William Sweet of 3825 Knox street, at Alessandro and Whitmore streets. They were taken to the General Hospital for treatment.

Slight injuries were received by A. M. Sellers, 43 years of age, 163 West Forty-seventh street, and J. E. Addington, 26, of Taft, when their automobile overturned on the Ridge Route near Sandberg Inn, according to a report to the Sheriff. F. Sellers, driver of the car, escaped injury.

QUARREL OVER WATCH ENDS IN CUTTING FRAY

An argument over a watch ended yesterday when knives were drawn, according to the police, and in the fight that followed Anton F. Olson, 30 years of age, 1820 Lincoln avenue, suffered five cuts on various parts of his body and Frank Higgens, 46, of 1039 Lincoln avenue, got a six-inch gash. The argument took place at Lincoln avenue and Figueroa street. Both men were arrested, charged with assault with a deadly weapon, and Olson was taken to the General Hospital. Both will recover.

Making the trip via the Canal and Havana, the Finland will take out 450 passengers and more than 7000 tons of California products.

Woman Fires Bullet Into Heart at Montrose; Act Laid to Ill Health

Mrs. Mary Ethel Scheffer, 38 years of age, wife of Joseph Scheffer, an employee of the Creshenta Mutual Water Company at Montrose, walked into a vacant lot near the Montrose schoolhouse yesterday morning and in plain view of several pedestrians, pressed a revolver to her breast and pulled the trigger. She died instantly, the bullet piercing her heart.

When witnesses of the tragedy reached the side of the dead woman they found her clutching in one hand the still warm revolver and in the other a drinking glass which it is believed contained poison.

Ill health is attributed as the cause, the marital relations of the Scheffers being described as amicable. The body was immediately taken to an undertaking establishment at Glendale pending official investigation of the tragedy.

Mrs. Flisher lived at 2842 Boulder street. The accident was considered to have been unavoidable and Edelstein was not held.

She said while she was in a Broadway store Saturday some one cut her dress in several places. Two other women had reported similar occurrences, which took place in stores between Fifth and Seventh streets.

SUSPECT IS RETURNED

Charged with the holdup of Mrs. Lucy Stevens of Venice on the highway near Inglewood on March 7, last, Marshal J. Oaks, 25 years of age, was returned to Los Angeles from San Francisco by Deputy Sheriff Peoples yesterday. Peoples reported that part of the $1500 worth of jewelry which the robber obtained in the holdup was recovered in a San Francisco pawn shop after Oaks's arrest.

JAZZ BAND IS PRIMED AGAIN

Ready to Toot New Tunes for Power Bonds

Made Famous by Futile Efforts Last June

First Appearance of Year Saturday Evening

The famous "Public Service Jazz Band" which tooted last June in vain for the $35,000,000 power bonds has practiced up a lot of new tunes, it was announced yesterday, and will make its first, grand public appearance this season next Saturday evening at Roosevelt Hall in the Walker Auditorium building to toot for the $21,000,000 power bonds, which is Proposition No. 4 on the May 6 election ballot.

Now, Superior Court Judge Edward I. Butler didn't think much of the Public Service Commission using its revenues last June on "jazz" bands and marcel waves for young women boosters for the power bonds and ordered the public service commissioners to dig down into their own pockets to the tune of $12,415.15 and replace the money in the city treasury.

EMPLOYEES GIVE SERVICES

A power bond campaign without a "jazz" band would be no campaign at all, according to the Public Service Commission, so the public-service jazz band was herded together again, and the employees of the power department, after working all day distributing power-bond literature, while they are paid by the taxpayers to string electric wires, have kindly "volunteered to toot evenings free of charge as members of the "jazz" band at power-bond rallies.

The band played, "Mr. Gallagher and Mr. Shean" last year and the voters killed the bonds.

DODGE BANANA SONG

This year it was first thought that the band would play, "Yes, We Have No Bananas," but political experts advised the musicians that this tune would certainly kill the power bonds more quickly that the alleged "budget" of the Power Bureau is doing. So the list of the tunes the band will play at next Saturday evening's city employees' meeting is being kept a dark secret.

The Public Service Commission declares on its collective honor that none of the $21,000,000 power bonds are to be used for Boulder Dam power, yet a feature of next Saturday night's meeting will be the showing of the bureau's famous motion picture "Boulder Dam or Bust," which was partly paid for from power revenues, and only wild outcries of protest from the taxpayers prevented the entire cost of the picture being financed from the good old power-revenue fund.

Mrs. E. S. Pease, Women's Relief Corps Aid, Dies

Mrs. Emma Sibley Pease, one of the organizers of the Women's Relief Corps and for many years active in State and national affairs, died at her home, 531 North Hobart street yesterday afternoon after a brief illness. Mrs. Pease was 76 years of age and had been a resident of Los Angeles for the last twenty years, coming to this city from Toledo, Ohio.

Prior to coming to Los Angeles Mrs. Pease took an active interest in the affairs of her home city and was one of the first national secretaries of the Women's Relief Corps. Her friends and acquaintances numbered many of the leaders and celebrities of post-Civil War days. Her husband was a prominent business man and musician of Toledo.

Mrs. Pease is survived by four sons, L. Murray Pease, Sibley G. Pease, James A. Pease and Robert M. Pease; two sisters, Mrs. L. K. Parks and Mrs. Nora S. Halstead, and two grandchildren, all of Los Angeles. Funeral services will be conducted tomorrow from the Chapel of Pierce Brothers.

INHERITANCE TAX FIXED

State Controller Ray L. Riley has announced that an inheritance tax amounting to $2348 will be collected from the estate of Emory Bismark Reynolds, who died here December 17, 1922. The property was appraised at $325,055. Mrs. Elberta Reynolds, the widow, will receive the entire estate except for a bequest of $7500 made out to Mary Reynolds, mother of the deceased.

MAN MISSING

Search was being made by the Sheriff's forces yesterday for Sidney Meyers, 23 years of age, a stenographer at the County Farm, who left the farm Saturday to go swimming and did not return. Officers at the farm think that he may have been drowned, according to the report to the Sheriff.

SUICIDE TRY REPORTED

Mrs. Daisy Burton, 40 years of age, of 3748 Woodlawn avenue, swallowed ground glass and slashed her wrists yesterday with apparent suicidal intent, police reported. She was treated at the Receiving Hospital by Dr. Dorn, who said she would recover. She gave no reason.

Bringhurst and Thompson Pay Today for Murders

Time to Send Two to Doom for Slaying Officers

Will Terminate Careers of Desperate Criminals

Monday, April 21, 1924, at 10 a.m., is the time set for the execution of William A. Bringhurst, No. 8494, and Willard Thompson, No. 8495, and in conformity with the law governing—"

The foregoing brief formal statement by J. A. Johnston, warden of San Quentin prison, issued yesterday, announced to the world that the slow-moving wheels of the law are about to exact justice.

"And in conformity with the law Bringhurst and Thompson after a two-year fight for life, are to be hanged by the neck until they are dead for the murder of two Los Angeles policemen in December, 1921.

The death of the two men will end criminal careers that stand out in Los Angeles police records. Thugs, burglars, gunmen, they climaxed their careers with cold-blood murder. When they ruthlessly shot and killed Patrolmen Alvin Custer and W. L. Brett, attempting to arrest them after a chase, they made widows of two women and orphans of three children. All this the law considered, and then decreed the sentence to be carried out today.

LOST LAST APPEAL

There will be no hitch in the proceedings. The convicted men have carried their cases to the highest court and have lost their last appeal for life. From "murderers' row" at San Quentin, where with six others also waiting to pay the extreme penalty, they have been confined, they will walk to the scaffold, receive the brief ministrations of the prison chaplain if they prefer, and then the trap will spring. Sometimes it takes more than ten minutes before the body of such an execution is pronounced dead.

Those officers who watched the cold, unflinching demeanor of the men when they were on trial here: who marveled at the stoicism with which they received the death sentence today are wondering if their nerve at the last minute will fail them.

Should Bringhurst and Thompson be executed, it will make the third and fourth who died for the murder of the two officers. In one of the most thrilling bandit hunts ever staged in the Southwest, their chief accomplice in the murder, Ben Wendell, committed suicide in December, 1921, when cornered in a section house near Yuma, Ariz.

TAKES OWN LIFE

Rather than attempting to escape from automobile. Posses were closing in on him from all sides. Jack Mahoney of Oatman, Ariz., one of the old West two-gun types, was on his trail. Mahoney caught up with him at the second house. Crying out that he would never be caught alive, Wendell ran into the house and shot himself four times, three of the shots passing near his heart. He died on the train to Los Angeles from Kingman, Ariz., on December 27, 1921.

Two others, Calvin Rowell and Ben Wheaton, also members of the bandit gang, are serving life sentences at San Quentin. The two were indicted by the grand jury on December 27, 1921, on charges of murder. Four of the gang were arrested a few days later at a rendezvous near Fifth avenue and Grand avenue, Wendell Hills.

The arrest came about in a peculiar manner. A restaurant employee overheard a conversation between a woman and two men, indicating that they knew something about the murders. A large reward had been offered. The restaurant employee followed the woman to her house. Then he told Deputy Sergeants Nichols and Erven, at that time working with the theft detail of the Automobile Club of Southern California. Working rapidly on the clewrily, the detectives soon arrested the suspects and lodged them in jail. Wendell, upon hearing alarmed by the arrest of his companions.

The four were arraigned and pleaded not guilty. The trials followed so that Bringhurst and Thompson would be tried together, while Wheaton and Rowell together.

According to the testimony of witnesses, the murder of Officer Custer occurred as follows:

December 6, 1921, Rowell and Wendell at Hermosa Beach, where the bandits were staying. Then to Los Angeles, where they picked up the other three at a street corner. After discussing various places they might go that night, they drove out Sixth street and stopped before a garage, where one suggestion was easy to

GROUP OFFICERS

Custer sighted away by a car standing across the street with engine in their machine and followed them down Fifth and South Hill streets. Brett and Custer, in a police automobile, stopped by the appearance and announcing the officers' suspicions regarding the bandits took them to the police station, one of the policemen jumped on the running board of their car, while the other proceeded to follow in the

According to the story, Wendell pulled a gun. The first shot missed him, but it was seized upon by Bringhurst. In the fight that followed both policemen were mortally wounded, and in the Receiving Hospital a short time after they were taken

FLAT-FOOTED

Now they say the American people are getting flat feet from so much living in flats. Thus verifying a former suspicion.

AMONG VAGRANTS

A man who boasted in court that he was an organizer for the Wobblies was promptly convicted of vagrancy and sent to jail for six months. That is the way the average citizen sizes up the situation.

THE USUAL THING

There will be no serious friction with Japan as a result of the restriction clause in the immigration act. So far as the Japanese now in this country are concerned the watchword will be: "Business as usual."

INSECTS' SENSE OF TASTE

A forgotten quantity of postage stamps of the 1903 issue was recently found in a warehouse strangely mutilated—the white face of Washington had vanished. Insects, liking the taste of the facial dye, had done the defacing. Since the same kind of dyes are used on Liberty Bonds owners should not store them in warehouses.

EFFICIENCY IN MURDER

When our women undertake the ancient art of murder they are likely to be more efficient and thorough than our clumsy male assassins. Whether the action be deliberate or emotional the affair is bound to be complete if a lady is in charge. If it be deemed advisable to dismember or take the victim apart the corpse may be so shredded that the little Borgia can dispose of it in her vanity case.

PRICE OF EXISTENCE

In connection with a wage controversy at Portland a board of conciliation found that the average worker's family cannot live on a respectable social scale on less than $1730 a year. The family in this case is supposed to consist of man and wife and three children. This minimum did not permit of any home-buying nor would it allow for any unusual sickness or accident. It merely covered the normal expenses of the average family. But there are still a lot of families in the world who are subsisting on less.

THE BURGLARY SLUMP

According to compilations of the police department and the Crime Commission the ancient art of burglary is on the wane in this neck of the woods. The activities of the police have made it a hazardous occupation. The returns for the first three months of the year show an average slump of nearly 40 per cent as measured against the cases reported for the same months last year. The shrinkage is still going on. We are keeping up our murder record, but in most other felonious adventures there is a fall. The machinery of detection and punishment is functioning to better purpose and with augmented efficiency. In a couple of thousand years human life may be safe in Los Angeles. In the meantime property is being protected fairly well.

GOVERNMENT IN BUSINESS

There are a lot of people who want the government to sit in every game and play every hand. They want regulation of production, quality and price of everything under the sun. But this is righteously impossible. Investment and industry thrive best when government keeps its paws off. What might be permissible would be for the government to establish certain standards of production and quality—as has been done with butter and some other food products. Then manufacturers and dealers representing their goods as standard should be required to adhere to the mark. But as a rule the less we have of official regulation of commerce and industry the better it is for all concerned. It is a trite but true aphorism that what we want is more business in government and less government in business.

THERE IS NO DARKNESS

What becomes of light when it goes out? Dr. Calvin S. Page, the author of "Rex, the Light Atom," has been recommended for the Nobel physics prize because of his progress in furnishing a solution. When the electric lamps are suddenly switched off from the glowing chandelier the room is apparently in instant darkness. The light is no longer observable, although in the previous incalculable instant it flooded the place. What has become of it? It is the theory of Prof. Page that all matter is in a state of vibration and physical phenomena differ from one another only in the rate of motion. The Rex proposition is that light never goes out. Day and night the light is about us, but the vibration of the Rex atoms is not at the rate at which our eyes respond. The filament of the electric lamp acts as a reflecting device which alters the speed and force of the light atoms. We may think we are in the dark, but we are not. The light-vibrations are not in tune with our eyes. This will be a handy thing to remember. When mother asks Mabel if she is sitting in the dark with Horace the girl will calmly explain that there has merely been a change in vibrations and that this is deceiving the mater's optics. It is fine to know that there is no such thing as darkness or night. The light is plugging along all the time, but we are merely out of vibration with it.

ANOTHER IDOL BROKEN

"Perdicaris alive or Raisuli dead!" How that ultimatum of the late President Roosevelt, cabled under the ocean twenty years ago, thrilled American hearts! What shivers of terror it sent down the spine of the Sultan of Morocco! It was the kind of diplomacy that fired the American imagination, that made all of us proud of the national name we bear.

But time is a relentless critic, a breaker of idols. Its exposures are slow in arriving, but they are not to be denied. Now Raisuli is dead; but, before he passed into eternity through the gate on which a crescent is emblazoned, he grew reminiscent and related to an American girl how the great Roosevelt fell into his trap and worked Raisuli's vengeance on the Bey of Tangier.

"Perdicaris was returned alive; but Raisuli did not pay. It was the Sultan of Morocco who paid and Raisuli received the full ransom money, $70,000; enough to enable him to finance a revolt which he had planned. According to the Raisuli version, as reported by Rosita Forbes:

> Truly a high price had been paid for him, and at last I had vengeance on the Bey of Tangier; for, in addition to a great ransom, my friends had been released from prison to make room for my enemies, and I became Governor of all the districts round Tangier, in the place of Sidi Abderrahman, who had betrayed me. So at last I gained the power which I had always wanted.

Raisuli had all the characteristics of the heroes of the romances of the East, of the dwellers of the tents, the followers of Mahomet. He gambled with destiny and played for high stakes. He was a leader of the opposition in Morocco and was forced to flee for safety to the mountains. He desired to start a revolt, but did not possess the necessary money, for patriotism had a market value in Morocco.

Casting about for funds, he encountered tourists who told him something of the rough rider, the fire-eater, who was the Sultan of the United States. Right then Raisuli conceived the big idea. This ruler was one who wouldn't pay, who would fight. That was what Raisuli wanted. So he set his bandits on the watch for some citizen of America, one who looked prosperous and who could appeal to his government.

Such a one was Perdicaris. The bandits carried him into the mountains and sent to the coast a demand for the stiffest ransom ever exacted in that territory for other than a crowned head. The plan worked. The American Consul informed his government and the Sultan of the United States threatened the Sultan of Morocco with extermination if Perdicaris was not released. According to the legend, Perdicaris was informed secretly of the cause of his abduction and was assured that it was a maneuver to overthrow the Bey of Tangier, that his own life was not in the least danger.

Perdicaris seems to have enjoyed the experience; for, after his release, he said, "Raisuli is not a bandit, not a murderer, but a patriot forced into brigandage to save his native soil and his people from the yoke of tyranny."

So the whole episode resolves itself into a wily trick of the Arab. Impetuous Roosevelt did just what Raisuli expected he would do, acted on the first report received. He used the might of America to cow, not the Moroccan bandit, but the Sultan of Morocco. He fought Raisuli's battle for him. And we went into paroxysms of patriotism over pulling a bandit's chestnuts out of the fire.

Another disillusionment from the days of a diplomacy based on force. It is but one of many. They come slowly, but regularly, for it generally takes a generation for the truth to out. Perhaps it will not happen again. Since the use of the radio is becoming extended the waste places are disappearing. The mountain fastness has lost its isolation.

Perdicaris's release was a great stroke of diplomacy, for the bandit who captured him.

NEW RAILROAD TERMINAL

One of the most important developments in years for Los Angeles is forecast by the announcement that a new transcontinental railroad, with its western terminal here, is virtually assured. This is indicated by the reported sale to the El Paso and Southwestern Railroad of a forty-acre tract running eastward from the old Los Angeles Plaza to the Los Angeles River.

With the construction of the proposed railroad a vast and populous territory would find a tidewater outlet at Los Angeles Harbor to the mutual business advantage of Los Angeles and the communities with which it is thus brought closer in touch.

Men in touch with the conditions of the reported sale believe that the purchase is predicated on the belief that the Interstate Commerce Commission will order the railroads entering Los Angeles to combine in a terminal at the Plaza. The tract in question would co-ordinate with such a Plaza terminal.

For many years engineers and other students of the situation have believed that Los Angeles must have a union terminal and that its proper location is at the Plaza if the people are to be served efficiently and if dangerous grade crossings are to be eliminated.

The California Railroad Commission, through its engineering department, made an exhaustive study of the entire situation and strongly recommended a union terminal at the Plaza. The new transcontinental railroad, with its Los Angeles terminus, is likely to mean, therefore, that the people will get what they have long desired and needed, an adequate and satisfactory union depot at the Plaza, the spot by far best adapted to the purpose in Los Angeles.

THE WAR ON NARCOTICS

Every American should take a personal interest in the fight being waged against the drug evil. For, unless checked, it will grow into a disease attacking the very life of the nation. Concerted action is imperative if this insidious foe is to be defeated.

Wherefore April 21-28 has been set aside as National Narcotic Education Week. Legal restraint can do much; medical science can do more; but the strongest weapon with which to smite the monster is the shining sword of popular education.

So for seven days Federal, State and municipal authorities, civic associations, schools, churches, newspapers and individual citizens are urged to concentrate for the purpose of arousing the conscience and enlightening the understanding of the nation on the deadly nature of all habit-forming drugs.

Figures lately compiled point to an alarming spread of the contagion—for it is a contagion both moral and physical. Many through ignorance of the consequences are falling daily into the clutches of this living death.

Representative Stephen G. Porter told the Ways and Means Committee of the House that medical and police authorities estimate that there are 1,000,000 heroin addicts in the United States. Nearly all these have been led to this fearful fate through the action of the secret drug peddler since only 5 per cent of American physicians prescribe the drug.

Maj. Sidney W. Brewster, deputy warden of Hart's Island penitentiary, testifies: "Users of morphine commit such crimes as theft and forgery. The man who uses heroin is a potential murderer, the same as the cocaine user; he loses all consciousness of moral responsibility."

Drugs are establishing a more dangerous school of criminals than the school this country rid itself of when it cast off the license of strong drink.

Drastic laws and clever sleuthing may curtail the supply of morphine, cocaine and their derivatives—slowly and at a tremendous cost. Education will destroy the demand—and the demand once killed the dopester will peddle his pernicious wares in vain.

CHARLES H. AKERS

In the death of Charles H. Akers, publisher of the Phoenix (Ariz.) Gazette, the Pacific Southwest loses a pioneer whose rugged faith in the possibilities lying beneath the sagebrush of the desert and in the torrents which race, at seasonal periods, through mountain canyons, gradually found realization in broad fields of grain, alfalfa and cotton, watered by one of the most marvelous irrigation systems ever conceived by the mind of man or consummated by his handiwork.

Charles H. Akers had a vision. It came to him when he toiled with pick and shovel in the blazing desert sun helping to build, as a section hand, the first railroad into the Salt River Valley.

He had it when, a few years later, he became Secretary of the Territory and acting Governor. He had it when he led the fight for Statehood and as chairman of the Arizona delegation to Congress engineered the famous Gore filibuster, which eventually broke down the powerful political barriers. He had it when, with W. J. Murphy, he led in the active campaign for the construction of the Roosevelt Dam. He had it in the first for a main-line railroad through Phoenix which is now approaching realization after fifteen years.

He believed that the desert could be made to blossom as the rose; that a beautiful modern city could rise upon the site of the old pueblo. Many of his ideas were written into the constitution of the State. He believed that the destinies of Los Angeles and of Southern California were inextricably interwoven with those of Arizona, and in his political and public life and through his newspaper his voice was always raised for harmonious co-operation and a spirit of mutual understanding.

No man so virile and positive could have lived his life amidst such formative and stirring environment without making his quota of enemies, but when all is said and done it was a life worth while in its accomplishments, and the monument he leaves will be more lasting than any slab of cold and impersonal granite, for it is written into the history of a great State and upon the hearts of his contemporaries.

THE PERSIAN LEADER

The elections for the first President of Persia will shortly be held and many American newspapers are waxing enthusiastic over this latest instance of the spread of democracy even to the most unlikely places on the globe. Riza Khan Sardar Sepah, Minister of War and Prime Minister, is described as the most promising candidate.

Just what may happen under his rule can be guessed from a glance at the gentleman's career. In 1919 he was a second lieutenant in the Persian Cossack Division and later discharged in disgrace for annexing sundry things that did not belong to him. He retired to the hills and became a bandit leader and, with the breaking up of the famous division in November, 1920, and the evacuation of its Russian officers to India, Riza and his cohorts swooped down from the mountain fastnesses and captured Teheran. For three days the city was given up to loot and, inasmuch as all wealthy Persians bank their surplus jewels and gold in the ground of their courtyards, the bandits and their astute leader were able to uncover hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of valuables before the British could rally from their surprise and repel the invaders.

Persia has been one of the pawns of secret diplomacy in Europe for decades, both because of her geographical position and her rich deposits of copper and oil and her ruby mines. Under Riza the soviets will probably realise the age-old dream of Czarist Russia of controlling the country and her raw materials, but it is highly improbable that the poor fellaheen will be accorded the vote and his children an education under the benefiicent leadership of the handsome young ex-brigand.

HOW IT STARTED

BY JEAN NEWTON

The Science of Eugenics

Eugenics, the science of improving the human race by better breeding, we owe to the efforts of Sir Francis Galton, with whom, too, the word itself had its origin. It is derived from the Greek "eugenes," meaning well born.

A number of the biological principles upon which rests the science of eugenics were known, of course, before Galton's time, being employed by agriculturists and stock breeders to improve the quality of plants and animals. As Darwin pointed out, the principle of selection, the most important principle of eugenics, was known even to the ancient Chinese. It is Darwin's celebrated work, "Origin of Species," incidentally, which drew attention to the fact that, like plants and animals, man is the product of evolution and that further improvement can be effected by the principle of selection.

However it was in Galton's celebrated articles, "Heredity, Talent and Character," published in Macmillan's Magazine, in 1865, that the first systematic and definite attempt was made to apply these biological principles in a practical way to the improvement of the human race—and the science of eugenics was introduced. Galton later elaborated brilliantly on his theories and soundly established not only the science, but a complete literature of the science of eugenics.

In my prison cell I sit, serving out my thirty days; for the speed cops saw me flit swiftly down the traveled ways. Oh, the limit's thirty miles—I was going thirty-two; and I'm heaping stone in piles, breaking granite, gray and blue. Still the road hogs hog the road and their carnage never stops; vigilance is not bestowed on such fellows by the cops. Still the reckless drivers wind up and down the thoroughfare, leaving slaughtered cows behind, causing havoc everywhere; killing hog and hen and hoss, without reason, without cause; and they put their graft across notwithstanding all the laws. Still the dotards and the drunk go kerwhooping down the lane, looking on the laws as bunk, holding cops are all insane. And we seldom see them stand in the court with other jays, answering the law's demand for ten dollars or ten days. All the penalties and pains fall on gents who stand aghast, gents who pushed their creaking wains half a mile or so too fast. In my prison cell I sit, breaking all the rocks I see, and the ordeal makes no hit when I think of those who're free; when I think of reckless knaves pulling boners on the pike, sending to untimely graves harmless souls like Pete and Mike.

UNCONQUERED EVEREST

[Reprinted from the New York Times.]

Somewhere on a bleak, wind-swept plain in Tibet, on the other side of the world, a party of adventurers are doubtless raising their glasses today in a pair of toasts. One toast is to their leader, whose birthday falls on April 6. The other is to the success of an expedition whose outcome the scientific world of two continents is watching. For the third assault on Mount Everest, the highest peak in the world, is well under way.

Towering 29,000 feet into the Himalayan skies, the gigantic mountain is awaiting the coming of the latest band to attempt its snow and ice-clad slopes, waiting while their long train winds over the chill Tibetan passes and across the dreary flats that must be crossed before the goal is even sighted.

Ten days ago the expedition left its base at Darjeeling to begin the arduous trek to the foot of the mountain. Following the route of the famous expedition of 1923, the adventurers by now should have arrived at Phari Jsong. Here they will find a British rest-house and dak bungalow to provide a welcome shelter against the fierce winds that play over the plain, 14,300 feet above sea level. It was here also that the last expedition paused two years ago today and in fitting fashion drank the health of their chief, Brig.-Gen. C. G. Bruce, who once more is in charge of the drive on Everest.

To Phari Dsong the heavy stores and oxygen apparatus for the climb have been sent and it is at this point that the expedition turns westward in the long cross-country trail that will bring them out on the north side of the mountain, from which the assault is to be made.

Already word has come by cable out of Tibet telling of the commencement of the expedition, which, according to Gen. Bruce, is starting out "under the finest possible auspices." Undaunted by the death of seven natives in the catastrophic snowslide of the last expedition, porters have been volunteering in droves for service with the party. Two of them were members of the very band of carriers that was hurled over the edge of a crevasse in June, 1922. Nor was there any delay this time over the oxygen apparatus, whose nonarrival last year forced two members of the party to wait behind for days.

The cooks—a vital factor in the health and the comfort of the expedition—have been tried out and engaged. The interpreters, whose business it is to smooth the path of the party through the heart of Tibet, have been taken on the rolls. All the lessons learned through days and nights of toil and hardship on former assaults upon Everest are at the command of the party. The venture has commenced—it remains for the future to disclose whether or not it is to be crowned with success. No man as yet has set foot on the summit of Mt. Everest.

A Pleasant Trip—at First

As far as Phari Dsong no great obstacles confront an expedition. The trail runs through the Chumbi Valley, where even in the first days of April the heat haze hangs low and screens from view the majestic pinnacles of the Southern Himalayas. The rhododendron forests at this time of year are just coming into bloom. It is a road of beauty and grandeur, passing through deep valleys, down which leap streams of clear water.

Along the route native tea-houses abound, promising comfort to the traveler. The expedition of this year is counting heavily on the hospitality of the Tibetan villages and monasteries which proved of such aid during the previous attempts. Special blessings from the local lamas at Darjeeling sent the expedition forth, and all along the route it is expected that similar good wishes will be encountered. This is a part of Gen. Bruce's plans to maintain the morale of the native bearers.

The first landmark for a party entering Tibet from the Chumbi Valley, wrote Gen. Bruce in describing the expedition of 1922, is the great peak of Chomolhari, which rises to a height of 23,800 feet. Tremendous as it seems, it is only 600 feet higher than the point at which the North Col camp was established on Mt. Everest.

The North Col camp this year is to be the base from which the climbers of the expedition will operate. From this camp in 1922 Mallory, Somervell and Norton fought their way up the slopes of Everest to a height of 26,800 feet without oxygen. From this camp also Capt. Geoffrey Bruce and Capt. George L. Finch, with the aid of oxygen, reached the highest point of all—27,300 feet. The summit of Everest itself was but a scant 1700 feet away when their last upward step was taken. Human endurance could stand no more.

Rough Going Begins

Although the real perils of the expedition will come thick and fast when once the slopes of Mt. Everest are reached, there will be many a vicissitude long before that time. If the schedule of the previous expedition is followed out in its early stages, as was planned, the adventurers are now at a point where trouble may be encountered at any hour. They must turn west to cross Tibet, leaving the main road to Lhasa, and take to rough going.

They must be prepared to traverse vast stretches of open country menaced by sudden snowstorms that wipe out the trail and by winds that roar across plains of frozen grass. There will be many a night when they will pitch their tents as best they can in the teeth of a gale. There will be days also when it will be all they can do to bring into camp the miles-long column of yaks, mules, bullocks and ponies carrying the supplies of the expedition.

Despite these difficulties the expedition must press on. It has, according to the estimate of veteran members of the party, only about a month in which to reach the base of Mt. Everest. which time the climb should be under way, and then slowly ascend northward, reaching the vicinity of Mt. Everest early in June. With its arrival all attempts to reach the summit of the mountain will come to an end.

Warm and treacherous with snow, the monsoon destroys the character of the mountain, causing great slides and rendering the climbers' camps untenable. In a single day in 1922, declares Mr. Bruce in his report, the monsoon brought about the melting of huge snowbanks, crumbled glaciers and turned troughs of ice into running rivers. It was responsible for the death of the seven native carriers in a snowslide and it forced the abandonment of valuable supplies of stores at the three highest advance camps.

Climbers Without Fear

Although the attempt to reach the summit of Mt. Everest—"the roof of the world"—has cost the lives of eight men in two previous ventures, the expedition of this year is going ahead without a shadow of superstition in its makeup. There are thirteen in the party. Six of them are veterans of former expeditions and seven are new to the dangers and trials of an Everest assault.

It is regarded as only natural that Gen. Bruce should have been chosen to head the latest party. For thirty years he has been engaged in mountain climbing in both the Himalayas and the Alps and is thoroughly familiar with the problems of the sport. Decades of service in a Gurkha regiment in India have familiarized him with the workings of the native mind, so that he is ably qualified to handle the corps of bearers attached to the expedition and to direct the way through a country of strange peoples.

George Leigh Mallory, who took part in both the reconnaissance expedition of 1921 and the attempt of 1922; T. Howard Somervell, Col. E. F. Norton, Capt. Geoffrey Bruce and Maj. Morshead are among the veterans. Tejbir Burr, the Gurkha noncommissioned officer, who struck up with Capt. Bruce and Capt. Finch to a height of 26,000 feet on their record climb before he collapsed, is another member who knows of Mt. Everest from experience. Practically all the other members of the expedition have had experience in mountain-climbing.

According to the present plan, the expedition will pass westward by way of Kampa Dzong to Shekar Dzong, whence it will turn south and make direct for Mt. Everest.

Shekar Dzong, which the party should reach late this month if not unduly delayed on the road, is two marches from Rongbuk. Here it is expected that this year's expedition will receive a warm reception at the famous monastery which is presided over by a man believed to be an incarnation of the nine-headed god Chenrezig.

The plan of the expedition calls for the establishment of a main base camp on the Rongbuk glacier and a climbers' base camp at the North Col. Yak dung, the only fuel available in the barren country beside, will be brought to the Rongbuk base camp in quantities. Food for meat and other supplies for both the base party and the climbers must be arranged for, some of it coming in from villages forty miles distant. Local bearers must also be procured from the vicinity and the special carriers' corps will be saved for work at the higher altitudes. In these respects it appears certain that the work will be to a great extent a duplication of that performed by the expedition of 1922.

The same system of camps will be employed as in the last expedition. From the climbers' base camp other camps will be established forward, each one nearer the crest than the last, until the final dash is made. The stories of the climbers of the last expedition form new history—they are inspiring among the annals of thrilling adventure. Killing cold, treacherous glaciers, roaring winds—these met them all and almost met them through to the top.

There are many who claim that Mt. Everest can never be conquered. That, however, is not at all the viewpoint of the members of the expedition.

CHANSON TRISTE

Your eyes are as dear as heaven,
Your hair is as black as night,
The fleeting smile of your scarlet mouth,
My torment and delight;
But the little lute in the chalice of your heart
Is strangely mute and still.
I cannot hear its melody
However much I will.
Your cool, white hands are lily buds
Drooping in the noon,
My kiss could breathe them into spring
Mayhap. Yet this I know:
I cannot hear the song you sing
And still I love you so.

Powerful Lyrics Given by Mario Rubini

Ian Hinds Presents Fine List of Numbers

Eastertide Day compels the reverence of many people. To others its greatest appeal lies in its traditions. And there are still others who honor the day for its sentimental associations. But, last night at KHJ will remain to Radioland as enduring memory. For it were found reverence, tradition, sentiment and beauty.

Mario Rubini, a young tenor of what is known as lyrico-spinto voice, combines the lyric quality with dramatic power, stood before the microphone, the incarnation of every emotion as he abandoned himself completely to each portrayal. Appearing through the courtesy of Grauman's Egyptian theater, where he is acclaimed daily as the premier tenor of the stage, Rubini opened his program with the "Flower Song" of Carmen. His quick sympathy and response to each mood seemed breathed life into Jose as he sang to his beloved Carmen, during her hour in the endless and cruel hours of prison, her rose and echoes to his broken spirit, then quickly merged into rage at the thought of her infidelity, but finally proved impotent before the unconquering love he bore for her. Rubini's final passionate appeal fell on indifferent ears, for his counterpart in the vivacious Carmen was unmoved by the tones of Rubini. With keen perception of intrinsic emotions, Rubini sang the "Aveu" from Flotow's "Martha," infusing it with every delicate shade of hope, bliss and longing. His sense of the dramatic was equally developed with a similar power in his voice, painted a living picture of Martha's lover whose plea was no response and death came to seal him.

GAME IN RETELLING

At the special request of Uncle Ralph sang "Santa Lucia" in the absence of his Italian version. "Forbidden Music" of Gounod's was included in his program, and "Fedora" by Giordano was rendered with the flawless art of legato which makes the tenor hesitate to include it in his repertoire. Glowing melody, rendered Handel's "Largo." Her next number, Gluck's "Gavotte" was played with a grace that created in all its splendor the court of other days through which noble ladies and their partners trod its stately measures. "Hunting Song" her own composition, was played with a dash that brought the fragrant morning dew to the nostrils while the baying of the hounds added zest to the chase.

SONGS OF FRANCE

Carl Gantvoort, accompanied by Mildred Marsh, sang two of her works, "Love Light" and "Over the Bridge of Memory" with a sympathetic regard for the substance that seemed that their mutual influence had communicated one to another their emotions and mood, and thus instrument and voice melted into one body of music. Mr. Gantvoort's mellow baritone voice and beautiful French diction formed an ideal combination for his last number "Vieux Chansons" (Old Songs.) The sentiment in Louis Aubert's quaint, but exquisite composition was tenderly brought to the surface by Mr. Gantvoort.

Rev. Robert Freeman discoursed on "Grandpa's Philosophy" with a comprehensive knowledge of his subject. Edward Murphey, to whom dramatic expression is the essence of his existence and whose efforts at the head of the Community Broadcasters of Pasadena have endeared him to Radioland, stepped through its portals again and read Longfellow's "King Robert of Sicily," with all the authority of his majesty prior to the Angel's visit and all the humility of the monarch awakened to his insignificance.

Floryane Thompson, with the Easter spirit surging through her sang "Love Never Faileth," with a compassion that was ethereal. Accompanied by Grace Eaton Dow, she sang of the "Palms" and followed it with "Leave it to Him" with a wistful but sacred touch.

Fred Niblo to be Paid Honor by Club Here

Members of the Western Motion-Picture Advertisers, the Wampas, tonight will pay a tribute to Fred Niblo, prominent director and leading orator of Los Angeles' film colony, in the form of a parade and theater party.

Headed by the thirteen baby stars of 1924, who Mr. Niblo presented to the public at the recent Wampas frolic, the publicity men and their wives will attend a dinner at a downtown cafe, adjourning to participate in a parade through the business section. They then will attend the evening at the Mission Theater, seeing Niblo's latest production, "Thy Name is Woman."

Bryant Washburn, Wanda Hawley and Eddie Hubbel, will aid in the evening's festivities. At the theater, President Harry Wilson of the Wampas will present the director-producer with a hand-made megaphone of leather and silver as a token of appreciation for the many favors he has extended the association.

PLAN MADE FOR GUARD AIR SERVICE

Formation of California Flying Militia to Speed Up, General Says

Formation of the air service division unit of the California National Guard, which recently was authorized by the War Department, will proceed as rapidly as possible, Gen. R. E. Mittelsteadt announced Saturday. It will be the first National Guard air service unit ever organized, Gen. Mittelsteadt stated.

The unit, after its organization, will become a part of the Fortieth Division, with a peace-time strength of twenty-one officers and ninety enlisted men. Tables of organization provide for a personnel of thirty-nine officers and 338 enlisted men in time of war.

A number of cities are bidding for the unit, Gen. Mittelsteadt said. Among these are Los Angeles, San Francisco, Sacramento and San Jose. These cities are all being considered but decision will not be made until further study has been given the matter of support for the proposed organization.

The elements which will decide the location of the air unit, Gen. Mittelsteadt declared, will be the ability and preparedness of the cities bidding for the organization to supply the necessary officers and men and their resources in the matter of providing hangars and a suitable flying field. Hangars and other equipment will be supplied by the Federal government, which will also furnish eight mechanics and funds for the necessary accessories.

About $35,000 annually will be needed to maintain the unit. This will include the pay of officers and enlisted men. These funds will be supplied by the State and Federal government.

HOUSEWIFE BODY BACKS PRESIDENT

League Sends Appeal to Women of California to Support Coolidge

An appeal to the women of Southern California in behalf of the candidacy of President Coolidge has been sent out by officers of the Housewives' League of the Southwest. Following a meeting of the organization on last Saturday evening at the home of Mrs. Julia MacWilliams, 615 West Fifty-third street, Mrs. Gertrude Hubbard, president of the organization, and Mrs. Margaret M. Matteson, secretary and treasurer, are sending an appeal to women voters of Southern California.

Copies of a resolution which was enacted at the Saturday meeting are being sent to leading women's organizations of Southern California, together with an appeal to the membership in the interest of President Coolidge.

The resolution adopted Saturday evening declared that President Coolidge "urged the enactment of laws relieving the burden of the workingman;" that he is a friend of all the people, and that the Chief Executive "is a most ardent supporter of legislation for the prohibition of child labor."

The Housewives' League of the Southwest is said to be the only organization of its kind existing in the West. Its membership includes prominent women in California, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Colorado and Nevada and the body has made a practice of sponsoring women's activities and welfare work.

RECORD FOR PASSPORTS TAKEN OUT

Thirty-six Applied for in Single Day by Persons Going Abroad

A record in the number of applications for passports received in one day at the office of the clerk of the United States District Court was made last Monday when thirty-six such applications were filed, according to L. J. Cordes, deputy clerk in charge of the passport department of the office. The highest previous figure for a single day was thirty-five, which represented the number of applications made on the day in 1920 just preceding the day on which the cost of passports was increased from $2 to $10.

Figures compiled by Cordes for the first three weeks of this month show the number planning foreign travel is 50 per cent greater than during the corresponding part of April, 1923. The number of applications for passports filed this month has been, 305 as compared with 201 in April last year. The largest single day's business in April, 1923, was twenty-one as compared with the record of thirty-six this month. The number has ranged from twenty to thirty on each of nine days this month.

The applications this month show most of the travelers are bound on pleasure trips to England, France, Germany and Italy. England is far in advance of any other country named as the country where most time will be spent, Cordes says. Only four persons during the month have applied for passports to travel in South America.

New Record for Postal Receipts Is Set Up Here

Postoffice receipts during the first three weeks of April show an increase of 29 per cent over the receipts of the corresponding period of last year, Postmaster O'Brien reports. This is the largest increase the local office has ever had. The March receipts were 14.14 per cent greater than March, 1923, and placed the Los Angeles office in the lead among the fifty largest offices of the country during that month.

"The way our business grows is wonderful," Postmaster O'Brien said. "So far as we can see it means simply that people are coming to this city to live, and business generally continues to grow. There is nothing to indicate that the receipts of our office will show anything else than a steady increase through the year."

FISHERMEN'S CLUB TO CELEBRATE BIRTH

The Fishermen's Club will conduct its eighteenth anniversary celebration this evening in its club rooms at the Bible Institute with a program of addresses and music, to which the public is invited. This organization of young men, which has now grown to a membership of hundreds, has never had but one teacher, Rev. T. C. Horton. One of the young men who met together on the first night, eighteen years ago, is J. M. Irvine, a business man of Los Angeles, who has been elected president of the Bible Institute, succeeding the late Lyman Stewart, who was president of the institute from its organization until his death last September.

The Woman and Her Job

By Katherine Hutchinson

[Questions concerning the vocational problems of women will be answered in this column if addressed to Miss Hutchinson at The Times. Requests for personal replies must be accompanied by a stamped envelope.]

SUCH A SHY LITTLE GIRL!

I wonder if you know what it means for a girl of fourteen, handicapped by diffidence, to be thrust out to earn her living? As I listened to the story of the gift buyer of a large department store, who goes abroad every year to pick up foreign novelties, I understood how far apart were the rungs on her ladder of progress.

First a cheap, dark little store where a lost sale was a tragedy. How her employer would scold! And she was so afraid of him, and so afraid her customers wouldn't buy that her days were dominated by terror. She knew nothing of salesmanship; neither did her employer. You can't teach what you don't know.

She stayed there two years, though she ever went through a week without expecting dismissal at the end. Perhaps he kept her because she didn't "answer back" or because her stock was always in order.

One day a woman came to buy a handkerchief. A square of linen; a changed life.

"Why don't you get a position in one of the big stores? You're too nice a girl to work here." The customer had been an assistant buyer.

The girl confessed she would be afraid to ask for a job; she couldn't make good anywhere else; she didn't know anything. The customer offered to take her to the employment manager of a store where she had worked before her marriage.

A natural shyness, plus two years of intimidation, was a big handicap, but the employment manager was a hopeful soul. You never can tell, you know. A section where gray granite ware was piled high received her. In that well-lighted, airy basement she expanded a little, not much.

"How I tried to make sales! I almost begged people to buy, which isn't salesmanship.

"I'd been there nearly a year when there was a special sale of tea pots in the china section. Several of the girls were ill, and they rushed me in at the last minute. I'd never been over there before—too scared, I suppose. It was beautiful! The lovely china, the lights, and those beautiful tea pots! I wanted to hug the darlings—I've never gotten over those two wonderful days. I was so enthusiastic the customers couldn't resist me, and the tea pots were not cheap, all of them imported.

"When the sale was over the buyer thanked me. He was buyer for my section, too. Why didn't I sell granite ware like that? It was such a silly question I burst into tears. He questioned me, and tried to quiet me; finally I just bawled: 'Oh, but I loved those tea pots!'

"He put me to selling china, the very finest ware. He gave me books on ceramics, trade journals, and showed me how to make notes on the best points. When salesmen came he'd ask my opinion, but I was so afraid, even though he told me my taste was good. After a while he made me head of stock, and then assistant buyer."

When a gift shop was added to the store, the buyer took this shy girl, who knew ceramics, to New York to select the stock. When it was opened she was put in charge. Every piece was chosen with care, and to her each was a precious treasure.

All this took years—nearly ten of them. Then she was made buyer for the chinaware, when her old friend bought a partnership in a wholesale house. She went to New York several times a year, then to London, Paris, Vienna. She buys shrewdly, knows values, knows her trade, and her departments show a big profit.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS

Dear Mrs. R.: A friend of mine in San Francisco makes a comfortable salary selling slightly used clothing for women. Garments are sent to be sold on commission and there is no outlay for stock. If you will send me a stamped envelope I will be glad to explain the method she used in establishing the business.

Dear Ann: There are many business women who need some one to do small alterations, yet haven't the means to go to a dressmaker. I have a card from a woman with two children and a mother to support. She is doing embroidery, darning tears in dresses and other garments as well as mending hose, and understands simple alterations. If you will send stamped envelope I'll be glad to give you her address. She should be a blessing to the busy professional woman.

Diet and Health

HICCOUGHS

"Why, Lulu Hunt, what have you done to your face? Go look in the mirror!" A little shocked and terribly excited, I take my pudgy little self to the mirror. Nothing out of the usual is the matter with my face, so far as I can see. Coming back to my mother, I sturdily demanded an explanation. Mother, with her eyes a-twinkle, smiles, "You have forgotten to hiccough." Sure 'nuf—I had!

I can remember very well, when I was a child, being subject to hiccoughs, probably because among the causes of hiccoughs are immoderate laughter and over-distention of the stomach. If drinking a glass of cold or hot water did not dispel them, then distracting the attention in the manner I have described, used to be resorted to. Nowadays, we are more careful about inflicting psychic shocks upon children, for fear they will register permanently. I suppose I can attribute the fact that my face has never been perfectly satisfactory to me, to this shock.

We all know what hiccoughs are, but it is said that we never know anything unless we can put it into words, so let me do that for you. Hiccup (pronounced as it is spelled), of Hiccough (pronounced hickof), is a reflex irritation of a complex nature, causing a spasmodic contracture of the diaphragm and the rushing of air through the vocal cords. This rushing of air through the vocal cords causes the characteristic sound—Hic! The diaphragm is the musculo-membranous partition that separates the abdomen from the thorax.

Hiccough is quite a common experience, and the average case is of no significance. Occasionally hiccough is a serious symptom. I'll talk more about that later.

Among the causes of simple hiccough, over-eating, with over-distention of the stomach, is probably the most frequent; although under-nourishment and hunger, especially in babies and children, may be a cause. Alcoholic hiccoughs are frequent and the hiccoughs of the inebriate are well known—at least those of the stage inebriate. Many other simple causes are chills, coming from a warm temperature into a cold, swallowing air, excessive laughter. The ordinary hiccough lasts for a few minutes to an hour or so.

The severe form of hiccough may be a more or less serious symptom in acute fevers and other wasting diseases. They are frequently accompaniments to hysteria and epilepsy. They may be a reflex from disorders any place in the body—in the gall bladder, pelvis, etc. These severe types of hiccough may last for days and are very difficult to control. Considerable soreness, headaches and nervousness may result from a prolonged siege.

Treatment: The ordinary hiccough usually stops in a short time with or without treatment. Some of the simple home remedies are: (1) Siping very hot or very cold water; (2) Holding the breath and counting; (3) Standing on the hands or head (not so simple); (4) Pulling the legs up to the abdomen; (5) Pulling the tongue forward; (6) Blowing; (7) Having the attention distracted forcefully; (8) Deep pressure on the sides of the vertebrae in the neck (this is an endeavor to press upon the phrenic nerve which, among other things, has to do with the control of the respiratory muscles, including the diaphragm; (9) Applications to the pit of the stomach of mustard plasters or ice; (10) Throwing the head back, with fingers in both ear, and swallowing water; (11) Gargling with a bitter solution such as quinine or quassia water; (11) Deep pressure over the eyebrows; (13) Drinking the juice of lemon with one-half teaspoon of salt in it; (14) Lowering the head and dilating the rectums.

Of course, for the severe forms of hiccough a physician must be called. He may wash out the stomach or give a few whiffs of chloroform, or use electricity and certain drugs—and, of course, if he is a competent physician, he will give a thorough examination to find out the cause.

Roll short pie pastry out on a floured board one-quarter of inch in thickness and cut in rounds with a large biscuit cutter; place a tablespoonful of the meat mixture in the center of the pastry rounds, wet the edges, fold over and press together; place on a buttered baking sheet and bake in a hot oven forty minutes. Serve hot with brown gravy.

Sift three-quarters of a cupful of sifted flour with a few grains of salt and beat into the mixture with one teaspoonful of grated lemon rind. Line a shallow baking pan with buttered paper, spread the mixture over half an inch thick and bake in a quick oven fifteen minutes. And so does the carved figure of Cellini on the trade-mark of the Schmidt Collection distinguish the gift that bears it. For only distinctive gifts, carefully collected by connoisseurs, are so marked.

PATIENT statisticians tell us that 1923 will record 350,000,000 gallons of ice cream consumed as food and dessert in this country....

How are you tallying with your 3½ gallons? Is somebody's Johnnie-boy getting your share of delectable CRESCENT?

One of the things H. G. Wells forgot to trace was the evolution of ice cream...away back, beyond the days of "strawberry, vanilla and chocolate" ice cream sody---back before "After the Ball is Over" and the Sunny Italian cook who flavored ice from the Alps for the delight of kinks, generalissimos and sich

....probably back to the Cave-man period when love-lorn swains, to win the Girl and her Mother, stabbed trees of sweet sap, at zero-time, and brought gifts of lightly flavored icicles.

Today---ICE CREAM is no longer merely a dessert, but considered a most nourishing food. CRESCENT and other makers are constantly on the alert for new ideas which will better ice cream. Research departments are constantly testing present brands for higher perfection.

State regulation of ice cream making and national conventions of makers, greatly assist in raising the standards even higher.

Why not have some CRESCENT ICE CREAM TODAY? Send Johnnie around the corner—or ring us direct—let us tell you the latest flavorings and forms.

A Dessert that Costs a Dollar

Peach Melba, a dollar a portion on the menu of a fine hotel, is simply a fine peach canned whole served on a bed of plain ice cream and covered with a fruit syrup. Any housewife who cans skilfully can serve Peach Melba for a few cents to her family and guests.

Peaches canned whole must be processed a few minutes longer than halved or sliced peaches so that the heat will penetrate clear to the center of the pit. Save the peach syrup to make sherbet or jelly and have another excellent dessert from the same jar.

GOOD LUCK JAR RUBBERS

have promoted home canning because they have enabled the housewife to do her work with confidence. Food cannot spoil if properly sterilized and sealed with a GOOD LUCK rubber.

GOOD LUCK Jar Rubbers are sold by good grocery and hardware stores everywhere. They come packed in the case with the following well known brands of fruit jars: Atlas E-Z Seal, Atlas GOOD LUCK, Schram Ever Seal and Schram Acme. If your grocer does not keep them send 10 cents for sample dozen.

For 6 Cents in Stamps

we will mail you our book on Cold Pack Canning. It contains full instructions with sterilization tables and many novel and excellent recipes which your family will be sure to enjoy.

GAS GRAB BARED TO CITY VOTERS

Arguments Against Bureau Scheme Printed

City Clerk Given 290,000 Copies to Mail

Monopoly Asserted to be Real Object

City Clerk Domingues has been supplied, in accordance with permission granted by the City Council to the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation, with 290,000 printed copies of "Arguments Against Propositions 9 and 10 on the May 6 ballot," and these will be mailed to voters inclosed with sample ballots. The two propositions (9 and 10) are the Power Bureau's "gas grab" ordinances to start the proceedings for the condemnation of the $20,000,000 electric properties of the Gas company.

The approval of these propositions is the first step in the condemnation proceedings as they authorize the securing of a valuation by the Railroad Commission of these electric properties, and then the Power Bureau will ask the taxpayers for $20,000,000 in bonds to consummate the purchase.

BUREAU'S PURPOSE

The company's arguments point out that the Power Bureau's real purpose in desiring to acquire the company's electric properties is to secure an unregulated monopoly of the electric business in Los Angeles. The argument which each registered voter will receive is as follows:

Why you should not vote $5000 to make good illegal expenditures incurred by the Council for which its members are personally liable.

Why you should not vote the city of Los Angeles into the hands of an unregulated political monopoly of the electric business.

The ordinances submitted as Propositions Nos. 9 and 10 authorize the expenditure by the city of $50,000 in securing a valuation by the Railroad Commission of the electric plant of Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation. There is no assurance that the city ever will acquire this property. If it does not the $50,000 will be utterly wasted.

DISREGARD CHARTER

The purpose of No. 10 is to have the expenses already incurred by the Railroad Commission in making this valuation paid by the city, although those expenses were incurred unlawfully, without the necessary two-thirds vote of the City Council required by the charter. The submission of No. 10 to the voters amounts to a demand by these officials that the voters pull them out of the financial difficulties into which they precipitated themselves through their willful disregard of the charter.

From a purely business point of view, both Nos. 9 and 10 should be defeated. The Bureau of Power and Light professes to want the electric plant of the Gas company in order to supplement its hydro-electric plant, both (1) to take care of increased business, and (2) to have a stand-by steam-generated electric service to fall back on in case of interruptions to its hydroelectric service. What nonsense! Whether or not the city takes the Gas company's plant that plant must go right on serving its present consumers. Hence it is a physical impossibility for the city by buying the Gas company's plant to improve its service. The sole change would be in the ownership of the property.

MONOPOLY SOUGHT

The real reason for the submission by the Bureau of Propositions Nos. 9 and 10 is that it desires to secure an unregulated political monopoly of the electric business in Los Angeles. Why! The city's operation of its electric properties is not subject to regulation by the Railroad Commission. It is run in accordance with the dictates of the bureau, a body made up of men in whose selection you, the voters, have no choice. As long as there is a competing electric utility subject to regulation by the Railroad Commission there is afforded to the voters and taxpayers protection against extortionate rates and inefficient service, through the regulation to which its competitor is subject.

Are you voters and taxpayers going to vote away this regulation? Are you going to make the city's electric plant the instrumentality for promoting the private political fortunes of a coterie of politicians? Are you going to make it possible for them to subject you to the treatment and service that always characterize the dealings of an unregulated monopoly with its patrons?

If your answer to these questions is no, make that answer effective by voting "No" on Propositions Nos. 9 and 10.

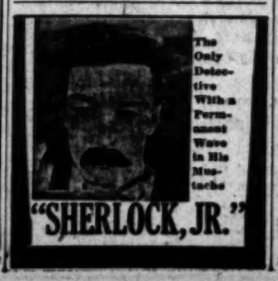
Forest Head to Ask Planes for Patrol Service

R. H. Charlton, supervisor of the Angeles National Forest, has petitioned the War Department to have aviators from Clover Field assist in patrolling the forest as an aid in fighting fires. Before March Field was abandoned, airplanes stationed there were used regularly in patrolling the forest. In the last two years, however, no service of that kind has been available, Charlton said.

It is hoped by the supervisor that the Army flyers at Clover Field may be available in checking up on reports of fires that come to the supervisor's office. If this can be done, Charlton says, ordinary delays in getting a sufficient fire-fighting force to the scene of a blaze will be avoided.



ASKS LEASE OF NATIONAL TIMBERLAND

County Seeks Rental of 1000 Acres in Angeles Forest

Los Angeles county has applied to R. H. Charlton, supervisor of the Angeles National Forest, for a lease on 1000 acres bordering a new highway the county has constructed between Valyermo and the upper Swartout Valley. The county proposes to use the land, which is heavily timbered, in preparing public camps for persons traveling to and from the county's playground at the Swartout Valley terminus of the new highway.

During the last three years the county has been using prison crews in the construction of the highway which now affords an unexcelled automobile approach to the playground which comprises 720 acres some eighty-five miles from Los Angeles. The playground has been equipped with water, fireplaces, incinerators, benches and all paraphernalia needed for the accommodation of picnickers.

The new highway is approximately eight miles long. The land which the county seeks to lease from the government joins the playground and borders the new highway on both sides for a distance of four miles. It contains some of the finest timber in that section of the mountains, and also some of the best camp sites, according to Supervisor Charlton.

INJUNCTION PLACED ON BOOTBLACK

Court Restrains Him from Starting Business Near Stand He sold

Trials and tribulations of a bootblack's life were aired in the Superior Court when Vito Anguilli, proprietor of a shine stand at 366 South Hill street, asked Judge Craig to grant him an injunction restraining Damil Felker from operating a similar business within three blocks of Angiulli's stand.

In his petition Angiulli cited an asserted agreement under which he purchased his present business from Felker in February, 1923. It was set forth that Felker had promised the plaintiff he would not go into the shoe-shining business within a three-block radius of the stand for a period of twenty months from the date of sale.

Angiulli stated that Felker had violated this agreement by engaging in a shine business at 328 South Hill street, less than a block distant from the place owned by the plaintiff.

On the witness stand, Felker sought to show that the place where he was employed had been purchased by his wife and that he had gone to work with his spouse functioning as his boss. He also told the court he was not conversant with the English language and did not realize what he was getting into when he signed the purchase agreement with Angiulli.

The court, however, granted the injunction and advised Felker that he would probably find plenty of shoes to shine if he would procure employment at some point outside the territory described in the purchase agreement.

Arrest Sought in Wage Claim Against Editor

The asserted refusal of Barrett J. Anderson, editor of Los Angeles Life, to pay Helen Yates $70 for wages Miss Yates asserts due her for work on the magazine, caused the State Labor Department to seek Mr. Anderson's arrest Saturday.

After several hearings before Deputy Labor Commissioner Tibbet without a successful settlement of the claim, Miss Yates swore to a formal complaint against the editor Saturday.

According to the writer, she worked four weeks for the magazine, but $70 was not paid when she ended her employment. Mr. Tibbet said that Anderson tried to obtain from Miss Yates a discount of $35 on his asserted indebtedness. Such an act, he declared, is in violation of the State wage laws.

During the hearings Mr. Tibbet said that a compromise on the wage claim was suggested. Miss Yates was willing to receive $50 of the amount due her if a settlement would be made. The refusal of the editor brought about the action and Miss Yates will now seek the full amount claimed as due, according to the commissioner.

Photograph He Carried Brings Wife Liberty

Testimony that her husband carried a picture of a scantily-clad woman in his pocket and improperly displayed it, helped win a decree of separate maintenance for Mrs. Catherine K. Drury from Paul Oliver Drury, both of whom are said to be well known in society circles of Washington, D. C.

The case was heard before Judge Harold Louderback of San Francisco, sitting in extra session of the local Superior Court. Mrs. Drury, who is the daughter of a prominent physician of Washington, said she met her husband shortly after she was graduated from a convent and married him in June, 1921. His conduct was such, she said, that she learned to loathe him, declaring that her dream of marital happiness was shattered while they were on their honeymoon in Atlantic City.

Drury fought the case and denied his wife's charges, but Judge Louderback granted her a decree, the custody of a minor son and $125 a month alimony.

CITY ENGINEER ASKS FOR HELP

Reports $50,000,000 Plans Being Held Up

Says Ordinances Cannot be Prepared Fast Enough

Traffic Commission to Back Up Official's Plea

The Los Angeles Traffic Commission and other civic and business organizations are expected to be represented at today's meeting of the City Council's Finance Committee to strongly urge that City Engineer Griffin's request for additional engineers be adopted so that $50,000,000 worth of public improvement work which has been petitioned for by property owners can be started within six months.

In spite of the speed made by the City Engineer's and City Attorney's offices in preparing the detailed ordinances, which must be adopted before the Board of Public Works can award the contracts for the work, the record-breaking number of these property owners' petitions, which are arriving at the City Hall has swamped the City Engineer's office for more than one year and the flood of new petitions continues.

APRIL RUSH

During the first three months of this year ninety-one orders were filed at the City Hall for the improvement of streets, and during the first ten days of April forty-four new orders were filed. If the petitions continues to arrive at the present rate, City Engineer Griffin has pointed out it will mean that more orders will have been filed during the month of April than during the previous three months.

Of the nearly 300 waiting orders for street improvements, City Engineer Griffin has pointed out that forty-two orders are for the paving of important through traffic arteries, such as West Adams street from Montclair to Culver City, and the City Engineer has recommended that these forty-two orders be placed upon a preferential list and the ordinances rushed to the Council at once, provided additional engineering employees are authorized. The cost of this work for the forty-two streets is estimated at $5,353,000, and the total length of the forty-two streets is 63.2 miles.

ASK TWELVE ENGINEERS

City Engineer Griffin has requested authority to employ twelve additional engineers at an expense (up to June, 30) of but $2500, so they can prepare at once the ordinances for the forty-two streets on the preferential list. It is estimated that an appropriation by the Council of not more than $25,000 for forty additional assistants for the engineer and the City Attorney's office will bring before the Council within ninety days most of the ordinances covering the $50,000,000 worth of improvement work which is now being held up in the City Engineer's office for lack of men to turn out the ordinances.

President Paul G. Hoffman of the Traffic Commission said yesterday:

"The Traffic Commission is solidly back of the City Engineer and the Board of Public Works in their request for additional employees to turn out the ordinances so that the greatest public improvement program Los Angeles has ever known can be put under way at once. Any funds appropriated by the Council to employ additional engineers and attorneys to prepare public improvement ordinances are not in fact appropriations at all, but are simply loans, as the cost of this engineering work is included in the assessments levied against the property in the improvement assessment district, and the funds are to be returned to the City Treasury when these assessments are paid."

WORK FOR THOUSANDS

"The property owners have petitioned for the improvements and their petitions have been granted. The work is not being started and cannot be started until the ordinances are prepared, and these cannot be prepared until additional help has been granted the City Engineer. There should be no hesitancy by the Council in granting the City Engineer's request, and if this is done, the great public improvement program will be under way and continue all summer and until next winter, and will not alone improve the streets of the city but will give employment to thousands of men."

"I am more than one year behind in disposing of orders for street improvements," declares City Engineer Griffin in his report. "Since July 1, 1923, 198 ordinances of intention for street improvements have been presented to the City Council for adoption, and at present writing one completed job is being turned out per day by this department, which is the highest rate of progress ever reached in the history of the department."

SOME OF WORK AHEAD

A list of the more important pieces of work ahead of the department, according to the engineer's report, follows:

Adams street, Montclair to west city boundary, 1.86 miles, $180,000; Crenshaw Boulevard, Wilshire to Adams, 2.13 miles, $193,000; Fairfax avenue, Hollywood to Wilshire, 2.43 miles, $230,000; Hollenbeck and Mines avenue Improvement District, 3 miles, $155,000; La Brea avenue, Franklin to Wilshire, 2.84 miles, $270,000; Pico Boulevard, Crenshaw to Santa Monica city limits, 6.67 miles, $740,000; San Fernando Road, north city boundary to Dayton avenue, 2.71 miles, $240,000; Slauson avenue, Figueroa to West Boulevard, 2.91 miles, $259,000; South Park avenue, Slauson to Manchester, 1.90 miles, $110,000; Sunset Boulevard, Normandie to Laurel Canyon, 3.33 miles, $317,000; Vermont avenue, Manchester to One Hundred and Fifty-sixth street, 5.26 miles, $290,000, and Santa Barbara and Second avenues improvement district, 3.38 miles, $187,000.

In his report the City Engineer deals with the individual cases of each of the improvements contemplated, stressing in each case the need for that certain improvement. In this summary it is shown that completion of these improvements would not only give the city a comparatively complete arterial system, but will greatly expedite the solving of transportation and traffic problems now of paramount importance to the city. The report concludes:

OTHER PLANS VITAL

"The other improvements not specially mentioned are also of vital importance to the city as a whole and orders for all of these improvements should be expedited instead of being placed behind the present list of uncompleted orders and required to wait for more than a year before being actively taken up for design. If the present force is taken off these orders on which it is now working and put on this preferential list of orders, a storm of protest will arise from the property owners whose patience has been sorely taxed in waiting from a year to two years for the improvements for which they have petitioned and this course of action is manifestly not feasible.

"Additional quarters have recently been acquired in the Brunswick Building which will accommodate eleven tables. In the organization of the branch offices at Van Nuys, Willmington and Sawtelle, a few men have been taken from the Street Planning Division to work in these offices. There is, therefore, space available for the addition of at least twelve men.

"I therefore recommend that the list of street improvement orders herein listed be placed on the preferential list and that the City Council be requested to authorize the addition of two assistant engineers and ten junior civil engineers to the Street Planning Division of my department, these additional men to work on the jobs on this preferential list."

"GOLONDRINA" PROVES CHARM

New McGroarty Play Draws Large Attendance

Revival Augurs Splendidly for Its Future

Tells Romantic Love Story of California

BY EDWIN SCHALLERT

Out on the King's Highway, where much of history has been made, there is a play house near the Mission of San Gabriel, with a huge beamed ceiling, rough boards for sides, and a space between its walls that appears as ample, when you enter, as some ancient feudal domain. These many seasons it has been the home of a drama that is crude and big as the valleys and mountains of California itself sometimes seem in their splendors, known as the Mission Play. This story of the founding of California, told in dramatic form, has held a sovereign sway over the hearts of many people, and its fame has seemingly not dimmed with the passing of the decade.

Now there is a new play that is making its influence felt. It is called "La Golondrina," and the title is taken from the musical number whose strains are heard through every scene of the elder play, from which in a sense it has sprung. Like the other it deals with the historical charm of California, with a story of the early Spanish life, and with a theme of love and renunciation.

"La Golondrina" is, of course, not The Mission Play. But the chances for its eventual success, I think, are none the less unusual.

The first performance of this play, which is also by John S. McGroarty, took place a year ago. Since then, I believe, it has been rewritten.

I did not enjoy the opportunity of seeing the initial presentation and can only judge from the effect at the opening of a two weeks' engagement yesterday afternoon. The reactions of the audience, which very nearly filled the auditorium, were exceedingly favorable, and of especial appeal was the color and atmosphere of the Golden West that has been so tellingly brought out in the visualizing of a romantic era.

The period of "La Golondrina" historically is somewhat later than that of the opening of the Mission Play. It is laid in the time when the Spanish occupation was at its height, but sensing dangers.

The curtain goes up on a scene that is as flamboyant as that of a grand opera. The red patriots of the times are endeavoring to incite the people. A Russian ship has come into the harbor of San Francisco, where entree to all foreigners is forbidden, and the leaders of the people demand the lives of the Muscovites.

In final essence, "La Golondrina" is a romantic love story that parallels perhaps to an extent "The White Sister" recently shown here as film version. The heroine takes the veil and renounces her lover. The reason is that she had prayed that he and a Russian with whom she became infatuated during the visit of the ship, would be spared their lives. They purposed to fight a duel in Russia whither the Californian who was her suitor had accompanied the invader.

That the plot seems entirely probable to the present-day mind I do not assert. That this makes any particultr difference in the minds of the audience I do not feel either. Truth is stranger than fiction, and though perhaps, there is legend and romance, as well as fact, behind this particular drama, it culminates in a message of spiritual that is serene and ideal as a summer sunset.

I believe that Mr. McGroarty has touched a spring of history here that will unfold gradually the portals to a new success. There is something to be done as yet in improving the play, and something to be accomplished in adding to the quality of the performance. With allowances for these things, and also for the special nervousness attending the event, it may safely be predicted that "La Golondrina" will bear close attention, not as a successor, of course, but as a companion piece for The Mission Play. I feel that it is especially suited to carry out an all-the-year-round season, through production in the spring and summer time, say for a few months at a stretch.

GOOD CLIMAX

The first act of the play was brought to a sterling climax, through the acting as well as the situations, which appear especially well handled here. The trial of the Russians with the dons, the officers of the garrison and the representative of the people sitting in judgment reaches a really capital pitch.

The most striking figure on the stage is Richard Sterling as the Count Nicolai de Resanofx. He really brought an aristocratic and romantic presence to this role, and that is what it chiefly demands.

Violet Schramm threw herself whole-heartedly into the interpretation of the commandante's daughter, this the leading feminine role, and my only objection would be that her voice became at times too heavily melodramatic.

Clarence Arper gave a good impression of dignity as the Spanish Governor. Ian Hamilton, Frank Staples, John Bergman were all commendable in the Russian characters.

Juanita Vigare is a good actress, and also an excellent dancer. Patia Power has not the big role that she enjoys in the Mission Play, but the quality of her work in this was pleasantly even.

Let me not forget either the effectiveness of Lester Reese as the Commandante's son, especially during the trial scene, nor that of Andrew Leigh as the Spanish lover of the girl, Ignacio Ayala.

Raymond Williams, S. Negrete, Olivia Castillo, Rutheilen Miller, Juan Zorraquinos are others to be cited, Mr. Williams especially. And Master Tyrone Power was a miniature hit.

The second act, in the commadante's garden, the "Tarrantella" and the "Zafarrancho" dances and the "Zafarrancho" dances were fascinating and brought much applause. "Las Crotolas" was also excellent. Senorita Julita Ruiz and Juanita Vigare distinguished themselves in these, while Mr. Zorraquinos was also excellent. The song, "Los Corsarias," given by Roumelia Ena, also pleased tremendously. A minuet was danced by some of the principal members of the company, led by Patia Power.

The engagement of "La Golondrina" will be brief, but I feel that, in its revised form, it will especial repay a visit to the theater. It is an appealing and attractive play of California.

Beatitudes Presented by Local Society

A large audience gathered at Philharmic Auditorium yesterday afternoon to hear Caesar Franck's "Beatitudes," ably sung by the Los Angeles Oratorio Society. John Smallman conducted, and Cecil Fanning, American baritone, was guest soloist.

The presentation accorded this oratorio was one of merit. Besides the long list of soloists who appeared, the accompaniment furnished by some thirty members of the Philharmonic Orchestra and the piano with Miss Lorna Greer on the stage, rather than the unsatisfactory organ accompaniment, as heretofore, added much to the effective rendition.

Particular interest is generally attached to the soloists at an oratorio presentation and this was no exception to the custom. There were practically no poor or unsatisfactory voices among the soloists. This unusually high standard is most praiseworthy.

John Smallman conducted with authority and finish. The association of the society was not as clear, seemingly, as on former occasions.

Cecil Ganning filled the auditorium with his mellow and rich voice; the writer took the privilege of listening both from the lower floor and the balcony, and there seemed to be no place where his voice did not reach without diminish in volume.

Margaret Messer Morris, soprano, in solo parts evinced a particularly lovely quality in her head tones. Clemence Gifford Johnson, contralto, sang effective solo passages. Some of the best solo work of the afternoon was done by Harold Proctor, tenor, and Clifford Lott, baritone, sang with exceptional and splendid realism.

Leslie Brigham, Frances Haynes, contralto, Everett Woudsma, tenor, A. C. Marshall, tenor, and Lorin Robinson, bass, also pleased.

Although conductors dislike to do such an audacious thing as to omit from any work by such a master as Frafick, at the same time one could certainly wish that the composer had written it a bit shorter, especially some of the orchestral preludes to the various Beatitudes, and other anthem-like passages where the lines seem unnecessarily lengthy in their repetition. Only the fact that, on the whole, an impressive rendition was being given of a work new to this city, make one patient.

"Merchant of Venice" Fine With Mantell

A small but attentive audience at the Mason Saturday afternoon did homage to Robert B. Mantell's presentation of Shakespeare's "The Merchant of Venice." Every school child knows the story of the miserly Jew who, when the merchant Antonio fails to produce the 3000 ducats loaned him, demands the penalty of forfeiture—a pound of flesh.

Mantell's interpretation of Shylock was somber but less venomous than usually played; by the injection of a bit of sly humor and a tenderness toward his daughter, he made the character less detestable, and more genuinely human.

Miss Genevieve Hamper gave to her rendition of Portia's role a dignity and poise, and the added grace of a delicate wit. She was proud, resourceful, mentally agile; moreover, in the musical cadences of her voice, in her little gestures, she endowed the role with a womanly sympathy and gentleness.

It was in the fourth act, when she made her impassioned plea for mercy, that Portia scored. When that mercy "that droppeth like the gentle rain from heaven" was not forthcoming from the hard, bitter soul of Shylock, when she found herself unable to pierce the armor that was partly of cupidity and partly of racial antagonism, she quoted from the Law of Venice. Her words, though closely clipped and quietly, almost tonelessly spoken, fairly stung with denunciation, as she gave that dramatic warning, "If thou dost bring one drop of Christian blood," with splendid effect.

To the character of Bassanio, John Knight gave a romantic coloration, a command of tonal effect and an impulsive feeling. Theresa Colburn had not much to do as Portia's maid, but that bit she did with a graceful charm. Antonio was played by Vaughan Deering in creditable fashion. William Podmore lifted the tensity of the drama at times with his buffoonery, and Arthur Fox, Anthony Kemble Cooper, A. C. Henderson, Henry Buckler and others completed a capable cast.

"King Lear" is to be given tonight.

HOT WEATHER BILL AT METROPOLITAN

BY KENNETH TAYLOR

It is being presented this week at the Metropolitan, and includes one of the best of Thomas Meighan's late pictures, and a Universal comedy which, unlike most Universal comedies, is really funny.

"The Confidence Man" is Thomas Meighan's first good crook picture since "The Miracle Man." And it isn't the same type of picture, even at that.

Perhaps its greatest charm is in having a new leading lady. The old Meighan-Lila Lee combination just about ran out of new novelties. The same pair continually become rather tiresome. Here, Virginia Valli is quite a sight for sore eyes. And she is not only pretty, she handles the role of Margaret Leland with skill. You almost believe in her.

The story, by Laurie York Erskine and Robert H. Davis, is the old one of the crook who goes into a small town to clean it up, meets the girl, and reforms. Only you think he isn't going to reform this time. He doesn't until the very end. And on the whole the plot sounds like one J. Rufus Wallingford might have herored in. It has the same charm and suspense—but of course it ends a little differently.

Players in the supporting cast are not especially well-known, although some of them deserve to be. Laurence Wheat does very good work as Larry Maddox, the crook's assistant. And Charles Daw Clark strikes home as the small-town miser. George Nash, David Higgins, and Helen Lindroth, all contribute interesting bits, while Jimmie Lapsley, Margaret Seddon and Dorothy Walters complete the cast.

Universal's "One Wet Night" is about the funniest comedy Universal has released since the old L-Ko days, when they put out one every once in a while that would tickle your funny bone. The gags in this one are nearly all new ones, and the cast, including Bert Roach, Neely Edwards, and Alice Howell, keeps the tempo high and hilarous.

Ted Murray in a piano selection or two (he was Frances White's accompanist here recently—and he's good) and a ballet, "Babes in Toyland," featuring Alexander Oumansky, are other features of the bill which are highly enjoyable.

HERB RAWLINSON IS FEATURE AT CLUNE'S

The same plot that serves Tommy Meighan provides the motive power for "The Dancing Cheat," in which Herbert Rawlinson and Alice Lake are featured, at Clune's. There have been a few changes made, of course. It is the girl who is crooked here, and the locale is Tia Juana, and not a Florida small town. But it all came out of the same barrel.

Rawlinson isn't quite as active in this picture as he usually is. Most of the time he is sitting around, making love to the girl, or trying to keep her from making love to him.

The story is of the misunderstood dancer who sees in vamping the rich young owner of a gambling house (he's moral, too, and doesn't gamble himself) a chance to turn over a few extra pennies. But fate plays a dirty trick on her and she falls in love with him just about the time that he finds out her original purpose. There you are, with the exception of a no-good husband and an interesting idiot, who were introduced to complicate the plot a little more.

Alice Lake is interesting as Poppy, the dancer. It wouldn't hurt her much to go on a diet and lose a few of the pounds she appears to have a surplus of, but otherwise, she fills the bill very nicely.

Other members of the cast, too, seem to be entirely satisfactory. It is an interesting picture, but you won't feel very sorry if you should happen to miss it.

Also on the bill is "A Lofty Marriage," a Century comedy which has for its chief feature Jack Earle, a young man some seven feet tall. The laughs it gets are all routine stuff—from gags that are good, in fact they always were. But they are laughs, just the same.

Short subjects and an organ solo complete the bill.

ZOELLNERS TONIGHT

For their closing concert of the season, which takes place this evening in the music room of the Biltmore Hotel, the Zoellner Quartet will present a program of outstanding interest. Jay Plowe, flutist, will augment the quartet in one number. Significant is their offering the modern number by Brants-Buys. The program includes the Schubert Quartet in E Minor, the Handel Sonata for two violins and piano and the Brants-Buys Quintet in D Major for flute and string quartet.

GREAT KID EPIC

JACKIE COOGAN TRIUMPHS IN "BOY OF FLANDERS"

By Grace Kingsley

I wonder if Jesse Lasky isn't just waiting for Jackie Coogan to grow a bit more, intending to beg, borrow or steal him to play the role of Peter Pan? I understand that a boy is to play the role, and after seeing Jackie in "The Boy of Flanders," down at Loew's I feel sure that this youngster could do it, and run away with the part.

The combination of Jackie and "The Boy of Flanders" constitutes, according to my idea, the greatest child epic that has ever been put on the screen. Because you see "The Kid" didn't have a child star, and "Stella Maris" and "Sentimental Tommy" were played by grown-ups.

Jackie's genius is far outrunning his years. And "The Boy of Flanders' isn't alone for children, though the children shrieked and applauded like poping fire-crackers on Fourth of July, all through, but it is a record of childhood seen through the laughter and tears of the years, evoking poignant and tender memories.

What grown-up that has owned a dog didn't sit taut when Jackie rescued the poor beaten canine that was about to die from the beatings of its master, and who didn't sit even tauter when somebody very nearly stole his dog? Who didn't find the years fly backward when little Jackie competed for the prize for the best drawing, offered by the great artist, with all the chances of life opening before him? What grown-up didn't feel a catch in his throat at the vividness of Jackie's grief at the deathbed of his grandad? And who didn't thrill with sympathy when the lonely little Jackie pressed his nose against the window pane of the house where his girl is giving a party, but to which he wasn't invited? And didn't you feel as though you would suffocate while you were waiting for the great artist to discover Jackie's painting, which had fallen down behind the table?

Jackie's radiant genius makes every happening throb with reality, while his rare beauty, his other-world quality, cut their appeal deep in your heart. Again, too, the child amazes with his pantomime, which gives meanings that need no subtitles. And that rare comedy gift of his! How funny he was when he dressed up as a little girl and went to the party.

Victor Schetzinger directed, and has done a great work. The photography is picture perfect. The other players are all very fine and characterful, including Nell Craig, who, besides being lovely, gave a most finely sympathetic and arresting portrayal of the mother; Nigel de Brulier, who always brings a distinctive delicacy and spirituality to his parts; Josef Swickard, Lionel Belmore, not forgetting little Jean Carpenter, who is saucily vivid as Jackie's sweetheart. Teddy, the dog, of course, performs his usually sagacious and benevolent acts.

Mack Sennett seems to have refreshed himself at some fountain of comedy or other; and his "Ten Dollars Or Ten Days," directed by Del Lord and starring Ben Turpin, is a laugh-getter every minute. It is a bit of a burlesque, as well as being full of good gags, especially in the last half; and the fun runs high in the scenes where Ben, put in prison wrongfully for having killed a man, escapes, sees the supposed murder-ee in one dangerous escapade after another, and tries to rescue him in order to prove that the man isn't dead and therefore that he didn't kill him.

"SHORE LEAVE" LURES CROWDS TO MOROSCO

If you want to see a regular by-golly gob, natural as a drink of water, and all fitted up and surrounded by a crackling romantic comedy, be sure to go down to the Morosco, this week, where "Shore Leave," by Hubert Osbourne, opened yesterday, and where Harland Tucker is desporting himself as said gob, fresh as mountain air. Tucker wears the same uniform, I hear, that he wore in the war.

Tucker is fast moulding himself into New York's Broadway form. It will be too bad both for Broadway and for himself if he doesn't get his chance there. I cannot imagine anybody in New York realizing the breezy Bilge Smith as he does. Even when he washes his make-up off in the last act, he gets away with it.

Bilge Smith is a happy-go-lucky son of the sea, who kisses every girl who looks good to him, if he can, and he always can, and takes female adulation for granted. He isn't in the least idealized in manners or language, so that when the author makes him brusquely refuse to marry the rich girl, you believe that, too.

"Shore Leave" is really charmingly fanciful, full of romantic appeal, as well as showing that Osbourne knew his sailor men. He has made us believe, too, sweetly assisted by Charlotte Treadway, that a girl, kissed once by a sailor boy, might remember him, might bring back an old freight-boat she owns from the Ganges, and live on it while she waits for him to come back, might prove true through the years.

As Connie Martin, the little common-spoken dress-maker, daughter of a circus rider and a sea captain, Miss Treadway does the best work of her local career. I do wish she would cut out that awful habit of looking at the audience half the time, however. That is very bad, and really detracts immensely from the reality of her characterization.

Gayne Whitman is growing older and older with each characterization, but is capital as the old sea captain. A newcomer, J. M. Foster of New York, shows himself one of the most capable and likable juvenile character actors that we have ever had with us. Jane Morgan is skillful, colorful and real as a society woman; Albert Van Antwerp acquits himself with distinction in a role which would mean little if played by a less finished actor; Grace Travers is pleasing as Aunt Hepsy, though not particularly happily cast; and the others are all excellent.

"Shore Leave" is full of bright lines and snappy dialogue, and will carry you into the land of make believe as delightfully as any play we have had this season.

Sawdust is now being used as an ingredient in bricks, tiles, flooring material, dyestuffs, tanning extracts, gas, and cattle fodder.

WEST NEWPORT PAVILION BURNS

Building Was Old Landmark of Beach Resort

Once Fashionable Center for Yachting Parties

Oil Well Expected on Site of $20,000 Fire

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEWPORT BEACH, April 20.—One of the landmarks of this section was wiped out in a fire that destroyed the West Newport pavilion early this morning. Built twenty years ago as a fashionable beach resort and center for yachting parties it had recently been used as a dance hall. The loss is estimated at $20,000. The blaze is believed to have started from a carelessly dropped cigarette stub.

The pavilion was the property of W. A. Irwin. In the earlier days of the structure's history is was known as Orange county's most exclusive yachting and beach resort. Yachting parties landed at the pavilion via a deep canal from Newport Bay when the canal was flooded from the Santa Ana River. This feature was abandoned several years ago.

The burned building will not be rebuilt, Mr. Irwin said. The site will probably be used for the drilling of an oil well as the section is in the center of the development.

MISS DEATH WHEN TRAIN STRIKES CAR

Two Men Escape Being Killed When Engine Wrecks Automobile

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

ONTARIO, April 20.—Miraculously escaping death when the motor car in which they were riding was struck by the Los Angeles Limited, eastbound, at the San Antonio-avenue crossing of the Union Pacific, Paul Johnson, 19 years of age, of 617 East I street, and L. W. Lewman, 23, of South Campus avenue, were suffering this evening from nothing more serious than painful scalp wounds, abrasions and bruises.

The two men, unconscious and supposedly dying, were picked up by another motorist and rushed to the office of Dr. J. H. Titus. There each quickly regained consciousness and an examination disclosed no serious injuries.

Johnson, who was the driver of the light roadster in which the two men were riding, told Chief of Police Hardy, who investigated the accident, that he had observed the crossing bell ringing as he drove south on San Antonio avenue, but had failed to realize the approaching train was so near until almost on the track, his view being obstructed by freight cars on a siding. The auto was hurled by the locomotive against one of the freight cars and demolished.

Suicide Effort Story Believed Hallucination

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

UPLAND, April 20.—That Earl R. Swan, prominent young Upland merchant and president of the Upland Business Men's Association, was suffering from a delusion brought on by a nervous breakdown when he announced several days ago that he had swallowed thirty-five grains of bichloride of mercury, and that he did not, as a matter of fact, take the poison is the opinion expressed by nurses and physicians on the case. Mr. Swan is continuing to show marked improvement and is able to eat and smoke, it is said.

During recent weeks Mr. Swan was the moving spirit in the organization of a company to establish a resort in Stoddard's Canyon, near the mouth of San Antonio, and when financial difficulties arose in this regard, the matter is believed to have preyed on his mind to the point where he contemplated suicide, with the result that he finally suffered a complete breakdown and believed that he had attempted to take his life.

CROWDS AT BEACHES ON EASTER DAY

Thousands, Turned From Hills, Seek Ocean; Huge Throngs at Churches

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

LONG BEACH, April 20.—Genuine Southern California spring weather, plus State authorities' admonitions to motorists to hie themselves to the beaches rather than to the mountains, made Easter Sunday in Long Beach a notable one in many respects. From early in the morning until late in the afternoon a steady procession of automobiles made their way over the highways leading into Long Beach, the occupants intent on a day at this city's splendid beach. And although the official bathing season has not yet opened here, hundreds of visitors spent most of the day in bathing suits along the beach fronts and in the surf.

Every church in Long Beach fittingly commemorated Easter. Impressive services brought out record crowds of worshipers and in many of the downtown houses of worship the ushers found it difficult to provide seats for all who attended.

Early morning communion services were conducted in the Catholic churches here, preceded by 6 o'clock masses, while in churches of other denominations the morning services were marked with musical programs and sermons.

Rev. E. C. Brown, Noted Woman Evangel, Dies

Rev. Ethel Cyphers Brown, widely known woman evangelist, died yesterday at 8 a.m., at the Stanton Convalescent Home on West Washington street.

Mrs. Brown had been in failing health almost from the time that she came to Los Angeles, in December, 1923. Engaged chiefly in home missionary work for the past fifteen years, her work carried her into Canada, Mexico and all parts of the United States. She was 57 years of age and leaves her husband, Thomas L. Brown, a son, Robert L. Brown of this city, and a brother, Harold W. Keggan of Elizabeth, N. J.

Funeral services will be conducted Wednesday at 2 p.m., at the George B. Remington funeral parlors, 1133 South Flower street.

MAN INJURED IN FALL INTO SEA RECOVERING

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

LONG BEACH, April 20.—Reports from Seaside Hospital today stated that O. R. Davis, 51 years of age, of Lynwood, who nearly lost his life yesterday when he fell from the launch, Eagle, into the ocean, will probably recover from his injuries. For a time yesterday it was thought he would die. Davis, who with two young sons, was returning from the fishing-barge, Paproka, anchored three miles off the beach line, became ill and leaned over the side of the launch Eagle. A sudden lurch of the boat threw him into the ocean. A fast trip to the Pine avenue pier was made by the launch and the fire department pulmotor crew was called to render first aid.

STREET IS IMPROVED IN FACE OF PROTEST

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

PASADENA, April 20.—In the face of a storm of protests by property owners the City Directors of Pasadena have adopted plans for the improvement of Green street. Paving, laying of sidewalks and installation of an expensive conduit for telephone wires and pipes, are some of the improvements planned. At the last meeting of the directors a large number of property owners appeared and protested the improvement on the ground that the expense was too high. Today the directors decided that there was nothing binding nor legal in the protest so passed a resolution adopting plans for the work.

PRESENT EASTER MASQUE

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

PASADENA, April 20.—Several thousand people gathered on the front lawn at the Huntington this morning to witness the inspiring presentation of the Easter Masque, "When Easter Came," by the world-famous Mission Players. The masque was written and produced by John Steven McGroarty.

The presentation of the masque at the Huntington is an annual event and always draws throngs from various parts of Southern California.

A. Rae Condit, community song leader, led the assemblage in a number of inspiring hymns. Then the voices of the players of the masque were heard at a distance. Slowly they came into sight. A picturesque group of dust-covered explorers singing to lighten their spirits during the weary march. The little band was led by Father Junipero Serra.

McGroarty wrote this masque from actual history and it was where the Huntington now stands that the band of explorers took their first look of Pasadena and the San Gabriel Valley 154 years ago.

Into the masque McGroarty wove a story concerning the dramatic adventures of the land. The players enacted the scene this morning of how the country as first observed by the explorers was named "La Sabinalla de San Pasqual," meaning the Grand Altar Cloth of Holy Easter.

The climax of the masque was reached when the voice of Father Junipero Serra was raised in prophecy. He unfolded not only what today holds for California, but what the future will bring forth.

At 5 a.m. thousands of Pasadenans gathered in the Tournament of Roses stadium for the sunrise Easter services. Just as the sun rays began to show themselves over the mountain tops a group of trumpeters heralded the opening of the services.

Special music and beautiful floral decorations featured the stadium services. Dr. Merle M. Smith, pastor of the First Methodist Church, made the principal address. He was assisted by a number of other ministers.

PRESIDING JUSTICE IN LAST CALL

M. R. King Succumbs to Protracted Illness at Santa Monica Home

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

SANTA MONICA, April 20.—Police Judge M. R. King, 77 years of age, 3002 Fourth street, Ocean Park, died early this morning following a lingering illness of several months.

M R King

Justice King, who has been presiding police judge in this city for more than eight years, was well known in law and police court circles, having lived in the city for more than twenty-two years. He was re-elected to office last December for a two-year term but ill health made it impossible for him to carry on his duties.

Despite his advanced years Judge King has been exceedingly active in civic affairs and was a booster for the Santa Monica Bay district. He was a member of the local Masonic order.

Funeral services will be conducted at the Masonic Temple in Ocean Park Tuesday at 2:30 p.m. Interment will be in the Woodlawn Cemetery.

Cattle Disease Outbreak Among Deer Is Denied

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

ONTARIO, April 20.—Alarming rumors current here yesterday that deer were dropping dead from foot-and-mouth disease in the mountains to the north of Ontario, following the finding of a dead doe near the Camp Baldy road in San Antonio Canyon, were denied today by Dr. C. W. Julian, veterinarian residing at 121 East E street. After hearing the report, Dr. Julian hastened to the canyon and conducted an investigation which resulted in the discovery that the animal had died from injuries sustained from being struck by a motor car.

Rumors that the disease was attacking the deer created a wave of alarm here and the likelihood of closing the entire range to hunters and fishermen was discussed.

Forest Ranger Arthur Shay, who had already investigated the death of the deer, stated to Dr. Julian that an examination of the carcas showed evidence of the animal having been struck by a down-coming motor car. Dr. Julian reported having seen many live deer on his trip to the canyon, but no sign of the dreaded disease, and workmen employed on the canyon road told the veterinarian that they had seen no sick deer.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

GLENDALE, April 20.—Figures compiled by David B. Lyons, registrar of Los Angeles county, show that Glendale has registered 2174 more voters than were shown on the great register of 1922, the total being 12,652, or an advance of 20 per cent over the figure of two years ago. The various political parties are planning an aggressive campaign to get as many voters as have expressed their political affiliations and who are entitled to vote, out to the primary election on May 6.

MILLIONS TO BE USED AT INGLEWOOD

County to Spend Vast Sum for Improvements in Three Years

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

INGLEWOOD, April 20.—The county has spent $5,000,000 in the vicinity of Inglewood in the last three years and will spend $7,000,000 more here in the next three years, was the announcement made here today by H. N. Clarey, chairman of the Roads and Highways Committee of the Inglewood Chamber of Commerce.

A few of the projects to be completed in the next three years, he pointed out, are: flood control canal to drain Inglewood, Lennox, Hawthorne and adjacent acreage; proposed sanitation district and outfall to care for sewage of the entire territory south of Manchester avenue and west of Vermont avenue, the district having already been formed; connecting highway links to join Overhill street with the proposed Highland Boulevard and on to San Fernando Boulevard; Manchester avenue east and west to bring the cities and towns to the east of Inglewood to the sea by a direct route; continuation of Market street as Hawthorne Boulevard for six miles on the west side of the railway tracks; plans for the improvement of Playa del Rey and territory to the west, including Florence avenue straight through the county.

All of these projects to be constructed within or near Inglewood's boundaries, or directly affecting the community, mean the expenditure of thousands here as well as the enhancement of values, it was poined out by Mr. Clarey.

Enforcement of Quarantine Bar to Hoboes

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

EL CENTRO, April 20.—One of the results of the strict quarantine being enforced against the hoof-and-mouth disease is a scarcity of hoboes in Imperial Valley. At the railroad entrances to the valley, hard-hearted inspectors are insisting that all hoboes be thoroughly disinfected and for this reason the trains are searched carefully.

Baths are being insisted upon in most cases and the hoboes have apparently sent word of this fact down the line with the result that the number of visiting freight-train passengers has suddenly dropped off noticeably. Railroad officials assert the decrease in the number of hoboes riding the trains into the valley in the last month is at least 75 per cent.

LIQUOR FLOATS IN ON PLANK

Customs Agents Seize Case Being Smuggled Across Line on Canal Tide

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CALEXICO, April 20.—Customs officials recently discovered an unique method of importing whisky into this country from Mexico. A heavy plank was observed floating with the current into this county from Lower California in the Solfatara Canal, which supplies the west side of Imperial Valley from Volcano Lake north. The plank was low in the water. When raked out a case of whisky was found nailed to the under side. It is believed that a large supply of liquor has been smuggled in this manner.

San Diegans at Easter Service on Mount Helix

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN DIEGO, April 20.—Annual Easter Sunrise Services at Mt. Helix, fourteen miles east of San Diego, attracted a crowd of 5000 worshippers this morning, and this afternoon the Easter festival of music at the outdoor organ pavilion in Balboa Park attracted 15,000.

Throughout the night a great illuminated cross on Mt. Helix, visible for a radius of fifteen miles, beckoned San Diegans to the Easter pilgrimage. As the first streak of dawn showed over the San Diego Mountains, far to the east, the assemblage joined in the anthem, "Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow." The services which included a brief sermon were concluded in forty-five minutes.

Improvements on Mt. Helix, which include an amphitheater, are proposed before next Easter and these will enable many more thousands to attend the annual services. From the top of Mt. Helix there is unfolded a wonderful panorama which embraces mountains to the northeast and south, the city, Point Loma and the ocean to the west. The Community Music Association was in charge of the program at the outdoor organ, the citizenry being led in singing by the Carol Club and the Cadman Club.

MUD HOUSE DEFIES COST OF BUILDING

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

CHATSWORTH PARK, April 20. The high cost of building materials has no terrors for Juan Flores, who is erecting a new residence in Carbon Canyon behind Chatsworth Peak.

Flores wished to build a home on his ranch, but finding the price of lumber so high he had not sufficient funds to proceed, he devised a mud house fashioned along unique lines and will soon have his home ready for occupancy at no cost beyond that of labor, roof, doors, windows and floor.

By constructing a wooden mold of the desired thickness, he mixed earth with straw and tamped the composition firmly into the mold, after placing it upon the previously prepared foundation. Leaving openings for doors and windows he has tamped the mud to the desired height and is ready for the roof. To prevent the rain from washing away the walls, which when thoroughly dried he says are as solid as rock, he plans plastering them with a cement-stucco mixture. The inside he will treat in the same manner, unless he decides that wall board would be better.

Third Romance in Community Players Group

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

ONTARIO, April 20.—Announcement today by Mrs. Raymond Marvin Welch of the engagement and approaching marriage of her daughter, Miss Eleanor Elizabeth Welch, to Bayard Eugene Taylor, Jr., of Chicago, marks the third romance to the credit of The Community Players since its organization three years ago. The prospective bride and bridegroom became acquainted when both were members of the cast of "Little Women," the dramatization of Louisa M. Alcott's charming novel, as presented by The Players here two years ago. Miss Welch appeared in the role of Jo, while Mr. Taylor was cast as Laurie.

Miss Welch is a graduate of Chaffey High School and later attended Stanford University. She has just returned from an eastern visit of several weeks. Mr. Taylor is a Cornell man and has been a frequent visitor here, his father owning extensive citrus properties in Upland. The wedding is to be an event of June and will be solemnized at El Valido, the charming country home of the bride's mother in the Alta Loma section.

Other romances credited to the Community Players, which culminated in weddings during the past year were those of Miss Bess K. Fredendall and Herbert Woodruff and Miss Ruth Harrison and John Awdry Armstrong.

7% SAFE BETTER
THAN 12% RISK.
We have assigned to the Tuxedo Bank & Trust Co. of Los Angeles first mortgages and trust deeds as security for the payment of notes we have sold.
The mortgages and trust deeds assigned as security are first liens, not exceeding 50% of a conservative valuation, on homes occupied by owners or city income property. It is an absolute fact that safety for the note holder is the first consideration.
If your money is drawing 4% and you lose the interest or drawing before an interest period, is it not better to have it drawing 7% and in case it is wanted at any time get full amount of interest?
If you have money out on mortgage and desire cash, it is necessary to discount it. Our note will be cashed in any month of three years, with interest in full. The notes are issued in amounts of $100 or more.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE
Coast and Geodetic Survey
Tides, Los Angeles Harbor.

Note—The following tabulation of the tides is compiled from the Pacific Coast Tide Tables of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey. The tides are arranged in the order of their occurrence, beginning with the first tide after midnight in the left-hand column. There are usually four tides, two high and two low, each day; but occasionally what would be the fourth tide occurs after midnight and thus becomes the first tide of the next day. The columns of heights give the elevation of each tide above the plane of reference of the Coast and Geodetic Survey chart soundings, except where the numbers are preceded by the minus sign, or dash, when heights are below the plane. The tabulations are furnished by the Field Station of the Survey, Custom House, San Francisco, Cal.

Sunrise and sunset are computed for Los Angeles Harbor, Mountain and moonset for Los Angeles.
